CITY TO OPERATE TRANSIT SERVICE ON STATEN ISLAND

WILL CHARGE 5-CENT FARE

MAYOR OBJECTS TO CLAUSE

Says He Wants No Court Authorized to Revoke Agreement on Short Notice.

City operation of Staten Island's defunct transit lines was decided upon late yesterday afternoon at a conference before Federal Judge Thomas I. Chatfield, in the United States District Court Chambers, Brooklyn, between representatives of the city and the railroads. An agreement was reached under which the city will take over control of the transit lines and operate them on Dec. 1 on a five-cent fare.

Another meeting will be held this morning at 11 o'clock in the office of Corporation Counsel John P. O'Brien, when contracts binding the agreement will be discussed between the receivers for the railroad companies and representatives of the city and signed, so that it can be presented to the Board of Estimate for ratification on Monday.

The conference before Judge Chatfield was marked with heated tilts between John J. Kuhn, receiver for the Richmond Light and Railroad Company, and Jacob Brenner, receiver for the Staten Island & Midland Railway Company, on one hand and Commissioner of Plants and Structures Grover A. Whalen and Corporation Counsel O'Brien on the other.

A delegation of Staten Island citizens who have been fighting for transit relief for several months was present and protested when Commissioner Whalen announced that the city was not in a position to take over the Staten Island transit lines and operate them before Dec. 1.

Wants Cars Run at Once.

"How can the public school children attend their classes if you cannot operate these railroads before the middle of Winter?" asked the Rev. William W. Mix, pastor of St. Simon's Protestant Episcopal Church in Stapleton. "If you have the power," added the clergyman, turning to Judge Chatfield, "authorize the receivers to run what cars they have."

Commissioner Whalen was insistent in maintaining that it was impossible to operate the lines before December, as new cars for this service could not be delivered before that time.

Receiver Kuhn, for the Richmond Light and Railroad Company, told Judge Chatfield the company had sixteen cars available for immediate service.

"I am willing to sign them over to the city at once," he said. "If the Court gives me the right, I will run them until the city is ready to start operation, but I cannot do it on a 5-cent fare."

The conference closed with the stage all set for signing the contracts for municipal control and operation of the lines today.

Hylan Opposes One Clause.

The Board of Estimate yesterday authorized Commissioner Whalen and Corporation Counsel O'Brien to appear before Judge Chatfield on Monday and notify him and Receiver Brenner that the city was ready to enter into the contract to operate the various lines of the company.

Mr. Whalen brought the matter before the board by presenting the agreement reached in the Brooklyn conference, which contained the provision that the court could revoke permission for public operation of the lines on a ten-day notice.

Mayor Hylan objected to this clause. He did not want the city to spend the $300,000 appropriated by the board for the possession and operation of the property with the power in the hands of a Federal court to take it away at its pleasure.

Mr. O'Brien expressed the opinion that the agreement protected the city. He explained that the court could not dispose permanently of property in its possession without providing some method of reclaiming it.

"I don't want any contract with such a proviso in it," said the Mayor. "If Judge Chatfield or any other Judge can set aside the contract on ten days' notice the whole of the appropriation might be wasted. The city is ready to operate the property for a five-cent fare, and I don't care who says differently, but there must be no hitch which could leave the city in an embarrassing position."

Mr. Whalen stated that the city had possession of only three cars of the Midland Company. The other equipment, he said, was in dispute between the receivers of the Midland and the Richmond Light and Railroad Company.

"I have made arrangements," he added, "for the delivery within a very short time of cars enough to operate the lines. The matter has been pending for some three weeks, and I hope it will shortly be settled with the city in possession, so that the cars may run for a five-cent fare."

The Midland Company, on the plea that it could not pay expenses with a five-

Egypt Accepts British Offer, But Proposes One Reservation

PARIS, Oct. 8 (Associated Press).—Leaders of the Egyptian Nationalist Party, meeting in Paris, have decided to accept, with one important reservation, the British plan for Egyptian independence which was announced in England last July.

This was learned today by The Associated Press from a member of the Egyptian Committee of Four, which carried the British plan to the Egyptian people and arrived in Paris yesterday on its way to London.

As a result of their two-day conference, the leaders have framed a number of suggestions and counter-proposals. The chief reservation made by the Egyptians consists of a demand that all references to the British protectorate over Egypt be completely eliminated from the Treaty of Versailles and all other existing treaties.

WOOD PLEADS GUILTY OF COAL GRAFTING

TO BE FEDERAL WITNESS

Grand Jury's Inquiry Indicates That Graft Is the Cause of High Coal Prices.

A plea of guilty was entered yesterday before Federal Judge Mayer by Harry P. Wood, recently operating engineer and coal purchasing agent of the Brooklyn Edison Company, who was indicted on charges of taking graft from the Adelphia Coal Company and of aiding the B. J. Lynch Coal Company to obtain coal on permits granted to the Brooklyn Edison Company and of selling it elsewhere. Wood's codefendants, under indictment on the general charge of conspiracy and of violating the Lever law by profiteering in coal, besides the Brooklyn Edison Company, are Walter F. Wells, the company's Vice President and General Manager, who will plead on Tuesday, and the two coal companies, who have entered tentative pleas of not guilty.

Wood appeared in court with William McMurtrie Speer, Special Assistant Attorney General, and Assistant United States District Attorney Maxwell S. Mattuck. Wood has offered to testify for the Government. His bail was fixed at the low figure of $5,000, which he provided. Mr. Mattuck asked Judge Mayer to defer sentence until Oct. 27. Wood waived immunity and placed himself entirely in the hands of the Government. His services, it was suggested, will be rewarded by only nominal punishment, if any.

Wood appeared to be very much broken. He told reporters that Brooklyn was barred to him in the future and that he would have to make a new start elsewhere. It was said that he has coal mining interests in West Virginia, whence he journeyed to appear in court.

Says He was "Scapegoat."

When he was asked to make a statement he replied:

"What's the use? A scapegoat has been made of me, but I will tell the whole truth, no matter whom it incriminates or hurts. I shall get the whole thing off my mind. When all of the legal proceedings are at an end I shall tell that part of the story which does not appear during the proceedings. I am no longer with the Brooklyn Edison Company. I severed my connection with it several weeks ago because of the inquiry which the Government was making."

It developed yesterday that the indictment of the Brooklyn Edison Company and the individual defendants grew out of an investigation the Government has been making since June 1 into the high prices of bituminous coal. At the outset there was no intention of undertaking any criminal prosecutions, and it was bluntly stated by a leading Government official that the present criminal proceeding would have been allowed to pass if the matter had not become so glaringly prominent during the examination of witnesses before the Federal Grand Jury in August and September. A criminal prosecution, it was pointed out, would take much time needed for the more important work of protecting the public against the exorbitant rates charged for coal.

Information in the possession of Government officials, it was said, indicates that the excessive coal prices are mainly due to graft. This graft, it was explained, begins with the car distributers and the big operators at the mouths of the mines and runs through every later transaction until the coal is actually in the hands of the consumers. Facts gathered during the investigation and whipped into concrete shape so as to be readily available cover practically the entire soft coal industry.

Four-fifths of Operators Honest.

The investigation disclosed that only about one-fifth of the big coal operators have been acting dishonestly, but that the influence of these, through the payment of graft, has been so powerful that the honest four-fifths have suffered heavy losses. One, it was said, lost $30,000 in one month during the Summer because he refused to pay graft, and another, who had no objection to paying for privileges, made a clear profit of $2,000,000 in three months. REDS' SUBMARINES APPEAR IN BALTIC; THREAT TO DANZIG

Believed That Two Vessels Intend to Intercept Arms Shipments to Poles.

NAVY SENDS INSTRUCTIONS

BRITAIN SENDS ULTIMATUM

Will Take Action Against Soviets If Prisoners Are Not Freed, Curzon's Note Says.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Two Bolshevist submarines are loose in the Baltic and have been reported off the Esthonian Coast in official dispatches received today by the Navy and State Departments from their representatives. Very little is known by officials here regarding the mission on which the submarines are engaged, but they are supposed to be bound for Danzig in an effort to intercept munitions shipments to Poland.

Vice Admiral Huse, who is in command of the naval forces in the Baltic, has been informed by the Navy Department how to act toward these submarines. He has been instructed that the United States is not at war with Russia and that the submarines are not to be treated as hostile vessels. As a result of these instructions the American vessels in the Baltic will not molest the submarines unless the latter make an attack on American ships.

"The Department of State is in receipt of information through the Navy Department and its own representatives along the Baltic that two Bolshevist submarines have been reported off the Esthonian coast and are supposed to be bound for Danzig to intercept munitions shipments for Poland.

"Instructions have been sent by the Navy Department to Vice Admiral Huse, commanding the American naval forces now in the Baltic, that the United States is not at war with Russia and that the submarines in question are not to be treated as hostile vessels."

Naval officials stated tonight that the American naval forces in the Baltic consisted of only four vessels, all destroyers, the Kane, Broome, Gilmore and Brooks, which are in the vicinity of Riga. The cruiser Pittsburgh, which was Admiral Huse's flagship, is not now in the Baltic, but in a naval drydock in England. Admiral Huse has transferred his flag to the cruiser St. Louis, which is now at Brest.

The two Bolshevist submarines are believed to have come from Kronstadt, where the Russians are known to have had some naval vessels. Russian submarines were not in good shape, but were being repaired.

All the German submarines were covered by the Treaty of Versailles and have been accounted for to the Allies, so far as investigation by officers representing the allied powers has been able to disclose.

BRITISH ULTIMATUM IS SENT TO MOSCOW

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Great Britain has threatened to take action against Soviet Russia if steps are not taken Oct. 10 for the release of British prisoners held by the Bolsheviki, says The Herald, organ of labor, which this morning prints what purports to be the text of notes exchanged by the British and Soviet Governments. In reply to this threat, Leonid Krassin, head of the Russian Bolshevist Trade Mission here, has replied on behalf of the Bolshevist régime that it will promise to fulfill the conditions required by Great Britain when the latter carries out her part of the bargain made last July for the mutual release of all prisoners, and cessation of all hostile action.

The note sent to Moscow by Earl Curzon of Kedleston, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, was dated Oct. 1, according to The Herald. It charged the Russians with "flagrantly violating" the conditions which the Soviet accepted in July regarding prisoners and propaganda.

"We have given," the note concluded, "an undertaking to which we have scrupulously adhered, that we will not assist in any hostile action against the Soviet Government, but, unless by Oct. 10, we have definite evidence that conditions then laid down regarding the release of British prisoners are being complied with, we will take whatever action we consider necessary to secure their release."

M. Krassin replied on Oct. 6 with a charge that Great Britain had not only failed to fulfill her part of the conditions, but had helped enemies of the Soviet Government.

"The actual policy of the British Government," said his communication,

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS HOME RULE IS SURE

DEFENDS HIS OWN REGIME

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Premier Lloyd George opened today at Llandudno, in North Wales, what is planned to be a brief but intensive oratorical campaign prior to the reassembling of Parliament on Oct. 19. The most important thing he said was:

"I'm going to do something daring. I'm going to predict about Ireland. You cannot see much for fogs in that country, but I am going to predict about Ireland. Home rule will be carried by a coalition."

The Prime Minister began by thanking the Welsh Liberals for the trust they had extended to him during the war, when other Liberals pursued him with suspicions.

His speech was a strong defense of the Coalition Government. Every belligerent country, with the exception of America, had been driven to a coalition to save the State, he said, adding: "The United States of America was not as involved as the countries of Europe. It came in late—[A voice: "Yes"]—but it then put forth colossal efforts. Its assistance was crucial and determining, but it had no time to make the same sacrifices as the other belligerent countries and its losses in dead were not equal to the losses of that plucky Dominion, Australia.

"The burdens of the war in America are heavy, but they are not comparable to those of Europe. Even with all that, the conflict of parties in America has resulted in this—they have not yet signed a treaty of peace with Germany. Why, the parties in America are fighting hammer and tongs as to what shall be taken or left, but they have not settled it yet.

"Supposing you had a conflict like that here. There would have been no peace. There would have been no treaty. There have been some who have criticised the treaty of Versailles, but better that than to have a state of war still going on, and going on for years with nothing done."

The Prime Minister drew an allegory suitable to a seaside town: "I am not a sailor," he said, "as I discovered when I was recently in the Bay of Biscay. [Laughter.] But the position is like the watches on a ship. During one watch a man stands on the bridge while the other is resting. Then you have got the dog watch, like 1892 to 1895, just a short one, and sometimes you have a long watch, like 1906 to 1915. Somehow or other, instinct has arranged that one is resting while the other works. When the one goes down to rest the other who has been resting goes up to watch, and the ship, somehow or other, has got through up to the present.

"But when there is a storm it is 'all hands on deck.' [Cheers.] Every mariner, every old salt, is pulled out of his bunk. He puts his sou'wester on to face the hurricane. You don't ask him what watch he belongs to. They are all wanted there on deck, every one of them.

"I am standing on the bridge. [Loud cheers.] And I've stood through bad weather and it has rather bleached my hair. The weather is not settled yet. There are more hurricanes ahead and we are not out of the danger zone. You look and you can see typhoons on the horizon. I can see gallant ships like Russia and others lying dismasted in the trough of the waves. Do not send any one down until the ship is saved.

"Now you begin to understand why I was in no hurry to call off the crew before the ship is saved. I would not take the responsibility before God of doing that. [Great cheering.] In face of all these representations, all the suspicions and all the revilings, I will do my duty to the end, whatever it may be."

The Prime Minister drew a picture of the changes that had come about in the world. It would look very paltry, he said, when the record of these great events came to be written and read to think that we were squabbling about little party issues of pre-war days. The great issue which engaged statesmanship in all lands at the present time was peace, peace at home and abroad. The only way to reach such a peace was to take a middle course, especially at this moment, because there was an antagonism of extremes from both sides.

After referring hopefully to the miners' strike negotiations, and, incidentally, paying tribute to Robert Smillie's courage, Lloyd George launched into a vigorous defense of the coalition against various criticisms from the Independent Liberal camp. He cited a long list of reforms carried by coalitions in past British history, and in conclusion said: "Do not let us crush into a rigid, narrow mold of party the gift of great sacrifices which millions have made. I appeal to you, let us, as we stood in the hour of peril together, let us stand once more together until we have solved the difficulties which stand in the way of humanity reaching higher things."

HARDING ANSWERS WILSON ON LEAGUE; HERBERT PARSONS DISOWNS HARDING; WILL SUPPORT COX ON LEAGUE ISSUE

QUITS COUNTY COMMITTEE

SAYS HIS TALK IS "MUSH"

SENATOR WOULD "SCRAP IT"

Herbert Parsons, former Republican National Committeeman, former Chairman of the New York County Republican Committee and credited with having been the most influential member of the local Republican organization for many years, resigned yesterday as a member of the County Committee and announced that he was going to vote for Governor James M. Cox, Democratic nominee for President, on the League of Nations issue.

Mr. Parsons declared that the issue in this campaign was not between the League as President Wilson brought it back and a League with reservations, but between going into the League with reservations and not going in at all.

"The only likelihood that the United States will, under Harding, enter the League," he said, "is that he will find it impossible to erect an association of nations or a new League, and so will have to crawl into this one."

Mr. Parsons warned Republicans who believe in the League of Nations that they were being deceived by the Republican candidate for President, and characterized Senator Harding's talk on the League issue as "mush." He attacked Senator Harding as a "straddler," and said the latter's real policy would be "not to do what the honor and peace of the world require, but what he will be squeezed into doing by the pressure of the conflicting forces supporting him.

"The cause, the greatest in our day, calls for the aggressive, positive leadership of Cox," Mr. Parsons said, "not the self-confessed ignorance of Harding. No straddler can lead a cause."

Part of Price for Johnson Support.

Mr. Parsons's announcement of his intention to support Governor Cox followed Senator Harding's speech at Des Moines, Iowa, on Thursday, in which the Republican nominee declared that the League of Nations already had been scrapped. Among Republicans the defection of Mr. Parsons, who, it was admitted, might be followed by other pro-League Republicans, was said to be a part of the price Senator Harding must pay for the support of Senators Hiram W. Johnson and William E. Borah, extreme opponents of the League, both of whom have expressed themselves as completely satisfied with Harding's Des Moines speech.

Mr. Parsons retired as Republican National Committeeman last June, Charles D. Hilles having been elected to succeed him by the New York delegation to the National Convention. Since his return from France, where he served as Major with the Fifth Division, Mr. Parsons has been known to favor the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations. He made his position clear in a speech to the Republican County Committee last Spring.

Although known to favor the League, it was not until recently that any of Mr. Parsons's political associates had any reason to believe he contemplated supporting Governor Cox. Apparently Senator Harding's Des Moines speech furnished the incident on which Mr. Parsons decided to break with the party of which he had been a lifelong member.

Mr. Parsons' announcement of his intention took the form of a letter to Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the Republican County Committee, which he made public at his office, 52 William Street. He left soon afterward for Lenox, Mass. When asked if he would make any further explanation of his reasons for supporting Governor Cox, he replied: "I think I have gone into those quite fully in my letter."

Mr. Parsons, who has always been a stickler for party regularity and who supported William H. Taft instead of the late Theodore Roosevelt in 1912, despite his personal friendship for the latter, was asked if he had gone into the Democratic Party permanently.

"I can't say," he replied.

I Am for "Going In," Says Parsons.

Mr. Parsons's letter to Mr. Koenig follows:

Oct. 8, 1920.

Hon. Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the Republican County Committee, 105 West Fortieth Street, New York City.

My Dear Chairman—I hereby resign from the Republican County Committee, no longer being a Republican under the law.

It is my intention to vote for Cox for President. I am for the League of Nations. Cox is for "going in"; Harding is not for "going in," though

Johnson Applauds Harding's Statement on League; Never Had Any Doubt About It, He Asserts

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 8.—Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California, in a statement made tonight on the eve of his departure for Chicago to take part in the Harding and Coolidge campaign, indorsed Senator Harding's position on the League of Nations, saying that there had never been any doubt in his mind on how the Presidential nominee stood on the issue. Senator Johnson's statement said:

"Since the campaign commenced there has been no doubt about Senator Harding's position upon the League of Nations. Some interested parties, for purposes of their own, have endeavored to misrepresent him.

"Some time ago I remarked that Senator Harding had scrapped the League. This was denied by some wabbly gentlemen and some left-handed newspapers. They may yet insist that he has not scrapped it; he has only turned his back upon its obligations and seeks its rejection. The Senator's forthright stand upon this issue has given him the enthusiasm in this campaign and will give him an overwhelming victory in November.

REPUBLICAN BREAK STRENGHTENS LEWIS

Chicago Evening Post Comes Out for His Election for Governor of Illinois.

PLANS DRIVE DOWN STATE

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Defection of a serious character has arisen among the Republican voters of Illinois as a direct result of the bitter fight waged in the recent Republican primaries between the factions led on the one hand by Mayor Thompson and on the other by Governor Lowden.

Managers of the Republican Presidential campaign in the Mid-West are distinctly worried over the situation, and were not made happier when The Chicago Evening Post, Republican, which has been supporting Harding for the Presidency, announced today that it would not support Len Small, the Republican candidate for Governor of Illinois, and urged its readers to vote for James Hamilton Lewis, the Democratic candidate.

Former Senator Lewis, his campaign managers say, is encouraged in his campaign by the assurances of support coming to him from many Republican leaders.

Notwithstanding their efforts to harmonize, the Republican leaders are finding it difficult, from all indications, to get even a normal Republican vote this Fall.

One of the most prominent down-State Republican leaders made the forecast, privately, while the harmony plans were under way that former Senator Lewis would get from 190,000 to 210,000 down-State Republican votes, due to the friction within the party.

Lewis's down-State plans are based on the assumption that the Republicans outside Cook County are indignant at the result of the primaries and he will go into all the districts and try to make plain to Republicans that he, as a Democrat, stands for the same things in State affairs as they stood for in their party primaries. By this his managers assert he will attract great numbers of independent Republican voters.

John Maynard Harlan, for whom a petition as an independent Republican candidate for Governor was filed at Springfield a week ago, formally announced tonight that he will enter the race.

REPORT COX GAIN IN OHIO.

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 8.—Senator Harding's direct declaration of opposition to the League of Nations brought enthusiasm at Democratic headquarters here, it was said today.

Summarizing the effect of his Des Moines speech, it was said that "from every part of the State reports arrived by telephone and telegraph of a distinct reaction on the part of independent Republicans who favor the League as the only possible means of preventing war. The rush to Cox all over the country, which started a week or ten days ago, is given tremendous impetus by the Senator's definite and positive alignment with the Johnson-Borah element of the party."

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Mrs. Albert H. Hildreth of this city, Chairman of the State Women's Democratic Campaign Committee, announced today that she would support Judge Nathan L. Miller, Republican nominee for Governor, and the Republican ticket.

She declared that she could not align herself with the "Tammany element."

COX CALLS ON TAFT TO STATE POSITION

"NO TIME FOR DISSEMBLING"

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 8.—Governor Cox, in a series of addresses in Kentucky towns, today demanded that advocates of the League of Nations, including ex-President Taft, come forward and tell the voters how they were able conscientiously to support Senator Harding in his latest declaration that he was opposed to entering the League of Nations.

"I am curious to see what ex-President Taft will say about it all," said Governor Cox in a speech here tonight. "He owes much to the American people. They have conferred upon him the greatest honor within the gift of the people. In common gratitude, in common good faith and in self-respect, he should tell in front of the curtain what is going on behind. This is no time for dissembling."

Governor Cox held that Senator Harding had taken his stand against the League "under pressure of a threat from Senator Borah," and that the position of isolation which he now adopted was little short of "treason to our traditions."

Altogether his speech was one of the sharpest attacks which Governor Cox has made upon Harding and the "Senate oligarchy." He made it plain that from this time on it would be his purpose to make the position of League supporters who still remained with Harding as uncomfortable in the eyes of the American people as possible.

Governor Cox sees in the declaration by Harding in opposition to the League, an opportunity to drive a wedge into the ranks of the Republicans and possibly cause a split that will lead many League supporters to desert his opponent.

Calls It "Moral Isolation."

"Under the pressure of threat from Senator Borah, the Senatorial candidate for the Presidency is now out in the open and his creed is 'America and America only.' To use his words, 'We must consecrate ourselves to the welfare of America and not to the rest of the world.' Must we forget that we are still a part of the world, the dominion over which is in the hands of God? Even the Senatorial oligarchy can't promise us a new world of our own.

"If we are to live commercially, we have to trade with others. If we are to cut our products to our own consumption, the mere adoption of that policy would carry us back fifty years industrially.

"But there is something more than the practical side. Are we to close our souls against every thought of sympathy and leadership? Are we to say we have no interest in Ireland, nor Germany, nor Austria, nor Russia, nor Poland nor the other nations of the world struggling for democracy? Are we to close our eyes to the picture of starvation which spreads over half of Europe? Can we deny the League of Nations, which brings an end to expensive armaments, establishes credit and permits people who are willing to work to have bread?

"Does not physical isolation mean moral isolation? The acceptance of the creed of the Senatorial candidate is little less than a notice to America to close our churches, our schools and our universities, to think only of self, to deny the soul any right in future determination.

"To preach such a gospel of selfishness is an offense to the decency of America. Such a proclamation of provincialism is little short of treason to our traditions. The spirits of just men made perfect, of our Pilgrim Fathers, who thought they were building on this continent a country dedicated to the practice of the principles of religion, must have turned in their graves.

"If our nation were to heed the pagan counsels of the reactionary candidate

CHARGES WILSON 'FALLACY'

DEVELOPS VIEW ON LEAGUE

CITES FAILURE ON POLAND

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 8.—Senator Harding, in a speech here tonight, declared that President Wilson's assurance that nothing in the League of Nations Covenant interfered with the constitutional rights of Congress to declare war was a "fallacy."

Before 20,000 persons packed into the convention hall the Senator answered the plea for the League issued by the President last Sunday, and denounced Article X. as "the most dangerous proposition ever presented to the American people."

He pointed to Poland and Great Britain's failure, as he asserted, under Article X., to furnish military aid to that country because it was thought that British public opinion was against such an expedition.

"I for one," the Senator remarked, "would look with no satisfaction upon similar action by my countrymen if I were a party to the League."

Under Article X., he said, "we shall no longer be free to choose those who may be worthy of our knightly service. We shall be pledged to the preservation of the despot as well as the territory of the weak and sore beset."

Senator Harding's speech here concluded his campaign in Iowa, Nebraska and Missouri. Tomorrow he will invade Oklahoma in an endeavor to swing that State to the Republican column for the first time in its history.

After a morning of rear platform speeches at sun-baked little Iowa and Missouri towns, along the Missouri River, the Senator spoke to 10,000 sweltering but enthusiastic citizens at St. Joseph, Mo., where the auditorium was filled to its capacity. There he promised that, as President, he never would submit for ratification any league or international association containing any provision similar to Article X.

Nominee's Position on League.

Speeches of his present tour bring out further evidence that Senator Harding has no desire to "scrap" the League entirely. At Des Moines he announced that he would reject the League as at present constituted. At Omaha last night he favored the "revision, redrafting or remaking" of any association capable of maintaining civilization without surrender of American rights.

Today his attack centred his attack mainly upon the provisions of Article X. The issue between Governor Cox and Senator Harding, the Senator intimated at Des Moines, is "the" League contrasted with "a" league. Since his speech of Aug. 28, Senator Harding has had nothing further to say as to whether he intends to have his non-partisan conference of "the ablest minds in the country" to revise the old League or draft a new treaty.

Senator and Mrs. Harding were met at the train here by a Reception Committee and headed an automobile parade to the Muehlbach Hotel, where they dined privately before going to the Convention Hall. The Senator was introduced by H. M. Beardsley, Republican County Chairman and former Mayor of Kansas City.

Great Welcome in Kansas City.

At no time during his campaign thus far has Senator Harding received such a demonstration as at Convention Hall tonight. The hall had been filled with 20,000 persons an hour before the speaking was scheduled. The audience broke off singing "America" when Senator and Mrs. Harding appeared, and there followed six minutes of spontaneous demonstration.

Every man and woman in the building was on his feet, shouting and many waved tiny American flags. At the end of six minutes the band crashed into the "Star-Spangled Banner" and the audience sang the anthem.

Two Grand Army veterans bearing a silk standard pushed through the press box to the stage, where they waved their flag in front of the Senator. Then the noise began once more. Finally, after twelve minutes had passed, Mr. Beardsley introduced Mrs. Harding as the "next First Lady of the Land." She received another hearty greeting.

Men all over the hall shouted facetious remarks about the Democrats when Senator Harding stepped forward to speak:

"I am convinced that you love America more than you love the League," he began.

"You tell 'em, Uncle Warren," a voice shouted, and the crowd laughed and cheered.

"I am willing to leave it to you whether we shall have the covenant or the Constitution," Senator Harding resumed.

"The Constitution, the Constitution!" came back from the crowd in response. Then Senator Harding drew a laugh as he unfolded his manuscript. He said: "I know that you want your candidate to be careful of what he says."

He then began reading his reply to President Wilson.

Reply to Wilson on Article X.

In his answer to President Wilson's League of Nations plea Senator Harding said:

"The statement which the President made to the country a day or two ago emphasizes his inflexible determination to secure the adherence of the United States to the League precisely as the covenant is written. We know from authoritative declarations that the mind of the Democratic candidate and that of the Democratic President are in perfect accord. We may assume, therefore, that the President speaks for the candidate and announces the policy which he will follow if elected.

"In the President's statement the people are told that the election is to be a genuine national referendum, and they are to instruct their own Government what they wish done. So far as the League is concerned, he says, the question which their vote will answer is, 'Do they wish the Treaty of Versailles ratified, and do they,' I quote his exact words, 'in particular approve of the League of Nations as organized and empowered in that treaty?'

"Those who oppose the Treaty in its present form, and there are quite a number of respectable and intelligent people who do oppose, are charged with gross ignorance and impudent audacity! He tells the people that there is nothing in the Covenant which in the least interferes with or impairs the right of Congress to declare war or not to declare war, according to its own independent judgment as the Constitution provides.

"The fallacy of this position has been exposed again and again. Article X., in words of the utmost precision, binds us to an obligation which under certain easily foreseeable circumstances, will require the use of armed forces.

"It is true that the Constitution invests Congress with the sole power to declare war, but if war shall become necessary in order to fulfil this or any other treaty provision, Congress must either declare war or repudiate the obligation. This obligation assumed by the signatories to the covenant is absolute and unqualified. Whenever certain specified circumstances arise, no matter how much we might regret it, we would have to keep our promise or sneak out of it. Let no one be deceived; the choice would be between two things, war or dishonor.

Reads Provision to Crowd.

"Article X. is not only the most dangerous provision in the covenant, but in its sinister possibilities it is the most dangerous proposition ever presented to the American people. Let me read it to you—it is very short—and then ask you to follow me in a brief inquiry as to its meaning. It reads:

> The high contracting parties undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all States, members of the League. In case of any such aggression, or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression, the Executive Council shall advise upon the means by which the obligation shall be fulfilled.

"If the Democratic ticket be elected, the statement of the President makes it clear that in his opinion the new Executive will be bound to insist that this obligation shall stand as the solemn pledge of a people who keep their pledges at whatsoever extremity of cost, for according to the President, with whom the Democratic candidate says he is in accord, such a result will constitute an approval of the League 'as organized and empowered in the treaty.'

"It is important, then, say, it is vital, for us to know exactly what under Article X. we shall have bound ourselves to do. As one of the high contracting parties we shall undertake first to respect the territorial integrity and existing political independence of the other members of the League. If these were all Mr. Wilson would be quite correct in saying that the right of Congress to declare war or not to declare war had not been interfered with. Thus far we are bound only to exercise that degree of self-control which will enable us to keep our hands off our neighbors' territory. But unfortunately this is not all; indeed, compared with what remains, it is negligible. We undertake not only to respect the territorial integrity and political independence of co-members, but to preserve them as against external aggression.

Sees National Honor Involved.

"We do not need to bring to bear upon these words any fine processes of logical analysis. Their meaning is so plain that he who runs may read. The obligation assumed is as free from ambiguity as a written promise to pay $50 thirty days after date. To preserve meant to defend and save. When ratified the obligation becomes that of the nation, not merely the promise of the President and the Senate or Congress. The national honor will be pledged too. It is pledged to the performance of every treaty.

"America will never countenance the cynical doctrine that a treaty is a mere 'scrap of paper.' For Congress to refuse in case of necessity to carry the obligation into effect would be a gross and shocking betrayal of every other member of the League. Repudiation can never take the place of performance.

"I am a plain, average man like most of you, little skilled in legal and diplomatic intricacies, and I know no way to keep a promise except to keep it. Let us take an illustration. Two ranch neighbors having adjusted their respective boundaries, agree to abide by the adjustment and respect the possessions of one another, but, living in a frontier country and subject to hostile interference from others, they further agree to stand by one another against outside attack. What would any man of honor think if one of them, in the hour of the other's need, should refuse to come to his assistance upon the plea that the agreement was not legally enforceable?

"I confess to a feeling rather stronger than impatience at the attitude of one who concerns himself not with the question whether we ought to assume an obligation which may require a resort to war to fulfill it, but with the question whether under our constitutional system such a drastic fulfillment may be avoided by the refusal of Congress to provide means for carrying it into effect.

Tells of Poland's Case.

"We do not need to imagine cases. We have one immediately in point. Poland is a member of the League. Poland was invaded by Russia, her territorial integrity therefore violated by external aggression, and the precise case contemplated by Article X. was presented to Great Britain. But England did not furnish aid to Poland because a large body of her people opposed it.

"I for one would look with no satisfaction upon similar action by my countrymen if we were a party to the League. If we promise, we must keep the faith. The difficulty, the hardship, the tragic consequences are all matters to be considered before we sign, not afterward.

"The case of Poland may be repeated many times in the long future which is before us, under all sorts of conditions and affected by all degrees of justification, ranging from none at all to that of compelling righteousness.

"Under this provision we shall no longer be free to choose those who may be worthy of our knightly service. We shall be pledged to the preservation of the territory of the despot as well as the territory of the weak and sore beset. We shall not be able to allow others to apply the test of righteousness to the problem as we ourselves applied it in the case of Cuba. We shall be bound by the letter of the bond and limited to the single inquiry whether the territory or political independence of a member of the League has been assailed from the outside. Our young men may be called upon to die in unwilling justification of the rape of Shantung by assisting Japan to repel a Chinese invasion as well as to give their lives in order to prevent the devastation of another Belgium at the hands of some future autocrat drunken with power and mad with ambition.

"During the past 140 odd years of our national existence there have been many wars in Europe, some of them falling within the precise conditions set forth in Article X. But in all that time we have felt justified only in the one case of the late World War, in sending our young sons overseas to meet the tragedy of battle. And we sent them then, not because the territory of a foreign country had been invaded, but because our own rights had been assailed and we ourselves were in jeopardy. I do not call to mind any other European war in that century and a half of time in which we should have participated as we participated in this war.

"War is raging in Europe now. I do not think any one would favor our participation in that war. Surely it is equally important not to bind the American people to a compact which may oblige them to participate in future wars which the American conscience may or may not approve. Oh, no, my countrymen, the American heart is sympathetic and the American head is sound and we may rely upon them both and trust ourselves in the future as we have in the past to follow the path of righteousness through the contentions of Europe without the compulsion of a bond which might press us in a direction we should not care to go."

Commends Senator Reed.

"Hit 'em again!" shouted the crowd, and the Senator finished reading his speech.

"No," he replied, "we don't want to hit 'em again; we merely want to be sane again.

"I want to say to you service men present," he went on, "that I want the Government to show its gratitude to you in the most substantial way it is possible to do. America never failed to take care of her defenders. I want to see first the wounded and needy of America's defenders receive a generous payment of our obligations. Then just as quickly as financial plans permit I want the Government to show the same gratitude to all its defenders as the men of old received."

At another point Senator Harding mentioned Senator James A. Reed, Democratic Senator from Missouri and uncompromising opponent of the League.

"Senator Reed is a Democrat," he said, "and I'm a Republican. But I want to say that this country owes a debt it can never measure to Jim Reed. I like a man who is an American before he is a partisan."

The audience stood and cheered.

Assails One-Man Government.

Speaking extemporaneously at St. Joseph, Senator Harding went into one of the longest and most exhaustive discussions of the League of Nations that he has made since his speech of Aug. 28. The audience in the Auditorium was with him from the start and there was a big demonstration when the Senator said that Governor Cox was in favor of "going in" and that he was not.

Senator Harding said in part:

"I did not object to the President going abroad after the World War. But I did object that he did not take anybody with him to help him enlist the confidence of the world. I like the thought of American leadership in the world because America ought to lead. But I want America safe for democracy. Indeed, I want America safe for Americans, and I do not believe in one-man government in the United States or anywhere else in the world.

"There hasn't been one man big enough to run this Government from the very beginning. George Washington was not big enough to run America alone and unadvised. Abraham Lincoln, the master martyr, was not big enough in his own estimation to run the United States. And even Theodore Roosevelt did not consider himself big enough to run it alone.

"I believe in the executive exercising all his functions. When I am President, I am going to be just as jealous of the powers and authorities of the executive as I have been during the past six years jealous of the Constitutional powers of members of the United States Senate.

"I do not want you to misunderstand me. A good many people seem persistent, however, in trying to misunderstand me. But I do not think I am so utterly lacking in control of the use of the English language that I cannot make myself reasonably clear. I have been a newspaper man for thirty-six years and have acquired a little habit of expression in that work. I want to say to you now, the Democratic nominee, 'in accord' with the President, is in favor of accepting the Paris covenant for a League of Nations, and says he is. I am not.

"We could not hold aloof from the world under modern conditions if we chose. But I mean by that that I am opposed to mortgaging the United States of America to Europe. I mean by that that we arrogate to ourselves in the United States of America the right to determine our own conscience in dealing with the remainder of the world on a righteous basis. [Applause.]

"I mean by that, that I as President, will never submit a League or an association or any proposal with anything like Article X. in it. Because Article X. says we undertake to preserve the territorial integrity of every member nation of the League, and if we mean what we say, should we accept it, whether Congress is necessary or not in calling our forces to war, if we mean what we say, when the council of the League calls for armed forces to carry out its mandates, we will either have to respond or be guilty of gross national dishonor. And men and women, boys and girls, I do not want a dishonorable America.

Urges That "We Make Sure."

"So I am proposing that we make sure before we go in rather than attempt to sneak out afterward. I am trying to preach the gospel of saving American honor and American boys at the same time. Why, we have never failed the world. [A voice "No, and we never will."] It did not require any covenant to have us play our part in the World War. When we found our rights threatened we went in and we helped to win it. Now it is over. Let us still be the United States of America.

"Let me tell you, apart from our own safety and security, one of my very great objections to the League. Do not misunderstand me. I have tried to make it clear. I want America to do its part. I believe, my countrymen, it is inevitable that there will be some association of nations for the promotion and preservation of peace. I think that is likely. Nay, more, I think it is desirable. But I want it based on justice rather than on force, my countrymen.

"Indeed, more than that, I want it based on the eternal principles upon which nations are founded. Have you ever stopped to think that one nation has just as much right as any other in the freedom of the world? It doesn't make any difference about its size. The smallest, independent, self-governing nation on earth has its rights to the freedom of the seas, has its rights to any court of justice, has its right to aspire, has its right to grow according to righteous and peaceful methods; but the League of Nations as proposed by President Wilson takes away from every small nation that inalienable right.

League "We Are Not Going to Have."

"What does the League do? It does not do a thing. Mark you, the League, that League, the League that we are not going to have, my countrymen, that League creates a military alliance made up chiefly of the five great powers of the world which are interested in existing conditions brought about at the Peace Conference in Paris, and then says: 'we will maintain this situation for all time to come.

"Then there are four other nations that come in. These five constitute the majority of a permanent international council. Then they invite four secondary nations to come in and sit as the minority of the conference. And then they invite about thirty other nations to just look in, no matter what their place in the world may be. They are not just exactly fair in that, however, because on the look-in they give Great Britain six looks to our one. [Laughter and applause.] And if it is only a look, I think the United States is entitled to just as big a look as any other nation on the face of the earth.

"But that is not all. I have spoken of only about thirty-eight nations, and the rest of the world doesn't even get a look. I wonder if you think the peace of mankind is going to be promoted by an armed alliance which arrays one-half of the world under the direction of five great nations, and then tells the rest they must do the will of those five!

"Never, my countrymen, so long as men and women are free and retain the right to aspire. I claim that the President's Covenant of a League of Nations violates the very fundamentals of national freedom. I make the claim that, instead of adding to the security of the peace of the world, it is the biggest threat of continued warfare ever proposed to mankind.

"And yet how our sentiments have been appealed to. Take, for example, the proposition under the League to accept mandataries for distant lands. How thoughtful it was that the nations across the sea should have suggested for the United States of America the mandatary for Armenia.

"I rather think we were the proponents of the League. I know we were the proponents of Article X. I won't pretend to say what inspired it, but no one can study the Covenant without the conviction that Article X. sets up a super-government of the world. And if I read you Americans aright, you are content with the Government of the United States of America.

Declares the League Has Failed.

"And note how easy it was to have gone astray. America believes in keeping her contracts. That is one thing that humanity requires nowadays, the keeping of contracts, whether those of a Government or of a corporation or of individuals, and if we had entered the League, as the President negotiated it, without the dotting of an 'i' or the crossing of a 't,' as he insisted, we would have been members of the League with the privilege of withdrawing if it proved unsatisfactory, after giving two years' notice. Provided what? Why, my countrymen, provided we had fulfilled our obligations to the League. And somebody came along, in his curiosity and his watchfulness, and he said: 'Why, who decides when you have fulfilled your obligations?' And the Senate concluded that we would make that clear. We said the United States of America reserved for itself the right to determine when it has fulfilled its obligations. [Applause and a voice 'You were right, too.']

"Now, what is the simple truth about it all? The simple truth is that, though the League was negotiated and is now functioning in Europe, yet there are nineteen battle fronts aflame with the explosion of bomb and shell, and the League has not amounted to a continental in the Old World. And the Old World awaits the United States of America to assume the burden of furnishing the men and the means to make it an effective organization. The League, my countrymen, has failed.

"They have been asking me if it is scrapped. Of course it is scrapped by the President of the United States himself. Scrapped because he wouldn't permit the Senate, with its co-ordinate authority, to safeguard the interests of the United States before he entered into it.

"Men ask me, 'Did you not vote to ratify with reservations?' Yes, and I did the very best I could with the instrument we had before you. I saw its ratification twice defeated, but the next time I am called upon to consider the League I am going to be in a very different position from that I was in in the Senate.

"Men ask me what my specific plan is. I tell you frankly I have no specific plan, and I have none because it was the specific plan and the insistence on that specific plan that brought about the 'scrapping' of the Wilson covenant. I think it is too big a thing, too important a proposition, for one man alone to determine what the plan is going to be."

Wants Europe to Repay.

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 8 (Associated Press).—In a plea for business stability and development of home markets, in his speech here, Senator Harding said that although the Federal Reserve Act was passed under a Democratic Administration, a Republican sentiment developing for years should have a great deal of credit. He added that in the administration of the act there should be no favoritism of a particular section.

"Europe owes us $10,000,000,000," he continued. "I know what I would try to do if I had the authority: I'd ask Europe in neighborly consideration if they didn't think we ought to figure out how and when they would pay. I'd say: 'Let's scale your interest, if necessary, but let's agree on a way to pay in negotiable coin.' If we could make this readjustment, we could wipe out the excess profits tax."

Speaking for Government economy, the nominee said that for one thing he would give discharge papers to "service men who are traveling about at Government expense" to further the Democratic cause in the campaign.

COX GIVES $5,000 TO PARTY.

Democratic Candidate Sends Check to National Committee.

A $5,000 contribution to the Democratic campaign fund was received yesterday by Wilbur W. Marsh, Treasurer of the National Committee, from Governor Cox, the Democratic candidate for President. The check was unaccompanied by a letter from Governor Cox and was inclosed in a plain envelope. It was made payable to Treasurer Marsh and bore the signature of "James M. Cox." Charles A. Fagan of Pittsburgh contributed $500 to the "Match the President" fund for the dissemination of educational propaganda regarding the League of Nations, sending the fund total to $47,500.

Chairman George White of the National Committee yesterday received an answer from Chairman Hays of the Republican National Committee to his request that the Republican Committee join him in requesting the newspapers to print the full text of the Covenant of the League of Nations.

"I can't exactly make out whether he has agreed or has rejected the request," said Chairman White. "He does mention attaching the Senate reservations and getting out the text in pamphlet form, but Senator Harding at Des Moines scrapped the reservations, and it is too late for pamphlets, so I shall renew my original request to Mr. Hays."

Chairman White declared that a new slogan had been adopted by the supporters of the League of Nations idea for the remainder of the campaign. It is: "No separate peace with Germany."

DEMOCRATS ELATED BY HARDING'S STAND

WELCOME TREATY AS ISSUE

Ex-Chairman McCormick Regards Speech as Aid to Party—White on Harding's Irish Record.

Jubilant over Senator Harding's declaration against the League of Nations, Democratic leaders here have "stepped on the gas" and from now until the election the campaign will be speeded up.

The leaders are convinced that the Harding strength has "passed the peak" and is now on the decline. For the first time during the campaign the managers feel that Governor Cox has more than a fighting chance. The coming over to the Democratic cause of Herbert Parsons has convinced them that many Republicans will follow in his footsteps.

There was a conference of leaders at the Democratic National Headquarters yesterday, and the opinion was freely expressed that the committee should more than ever keep the League of Nations issue to the front. Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Nebraska, who led the fight for the League in the Senate, took part in the conference and declared that Senator Harding's statement was splendid in that it insured the League being the great issue of the campaign as well as establishing the fact that if Governor Cox is elected the United States will enter the League.

"In his Des Moines speech," said Senator Hitchcock, "Senator Harding made a statement that I want to give particular attention to. He said that the League was already scrapped, because the Administration had insisted on the ratification of the treaty without the dotting of an 'i' or the crossing of a 't.' This favorite and oft-repeated misrepresentation of history has been again and again corrected by Governor Cox in his speeches. Instead of insisting upon the ratification without the dotting of an 'i' or the crossing of a 't,' the Democratic Senators with the full approval of the President voted for five reservations which I had the honor to present to the Senate.

"One of these provided that Article X. should be so construed that the military affairs of the United States could only be used under the direct authority of Congress, and that Congress should be free to accept or reject the advice of the League as to the enforcement of this article.

"Another disqualified all British Dominions from voting in the case in which the United States had a dispute which might be referred to the Assembly. Another specifically reserved the Monroe Doctrine. Another specifically withheld domestic questions of all character from consideration by the League, and another provided that we could withdraw from the League at any time upon giving two years' notice for any cause which we deemed sufficient.

"Senator Harding must know that I offered these reservations on behalf of the Democratic Senators, because he voted against them, and it is remarkable, therefore, that he should say at this time in a prepared speech that the Administration insisted on the ratification of the treaty 'without the dotting of an 'i' or the crossing of a 't.'"

Vance McCormick of Pennsylvania, former National Chairman, who managed the Wilson campaign in 1916, also took part in the conference and later expressed the opinion that the Republican tide had turned and was now setting in toward Democratic success.

"More was done by Senator Harding yesterday to clarify the situation than anything that has happened during the course of the campaign," said Mr. McCormick. "There was a great danger of voters being confused on the League of Nations issue owing to the difficulty of discriminating between interpretative reservations and nullifying reservations which were so beclouded during the Senate discussions. The majority of voters have had difficulty in grasping the character of these reservations.

"Now the question is no longer one of reservations, but of a League or no League. Candidate Harding has done a great service to the country and has proved the hypocrisy of the Senate oligarchy, which intended all the time to kill the Treaty, while pretending to favor a treaty with reservations. The deal with Borah and Johnson has finally been consummated, and Harding, after having backed and filled about the League in an endeavor to appease the Taft-Hoover group and the irreconcilables at the same time, now comes out in the true colors. He has clearly defined his position, which is a rejection of the League and a separate peace with Germany."

Chairman George White discussed a different phase of the Harding speech.

"I am amazed," he said, "at Senator Harding's reiteration in his speech yesterday of his statement, 'I have a sympathetic feeling for Irish freedom. I voted that way in the United States Senate.' On July 29, 1916, when the Senate was considering the Pittman resolution asking clemency from Great Britain toward Irish political prisoners, Harding voted against it. On Nov. 18, 1919, he voted against a reservation for Irish self-determination. On March 18, 1920, he voted against the Gerry resolution favoring self-determination. On the original resolution of sympathy for Ireland the record discloses that he dodged that vote by absenting himself from the chamber, and on every other vote tending to give due consideration to the Irish problem he voted 'No.'

"Senator Harding has now apparently scrapped the League and along with it a Lodge reservation."

TAMMANY HECKLERS HALT TALK FOR COX

W. Bourke Cockran Has Busy Half Hour with Irishmen at Democratic Rally.

HARDING ATTACK STARTS IT

"We Want No More Democratic Presidents," Says One Who Is "Irish and Proud of It."

Hecklers whose ancestry was the same as his own judging from their brogue gave W. Bourke Cockran a busy half hour last night when they persistently interrupted his speech in behalf of Cox and Roosevelt at a rally in Tammany Hall. They demanded to know what Governor Cox thought about the Irish question and what President Wilson had ever done to alleviate Ireland's wrongs.

Mr. Cockran had made the assertion that Senator Harding in saying he would not assume to tell England what to do in her internal affairs had practically given Great Britain the assurance that she might put the torch to a thousand villages in Ireland without the fear of invoking American criticism.

"Tell us what Mr. Cox has to say about Ireland. That's what we came here for," broke in a voice.

"Yes, yes," echoed from other parts of the hall.

"I will answer you in due time, when I have finished my speech," said Mr. Cockran, and taking up his address, said:

"No sooner did Senator Harding make that statement than the outrages in Ireland took a more direful form. Where formerly one village had been sacked and burned five more experienced the same fate."

"Wilson is in office, isn't he?" came a voice from the gallery.

"President Wilson never yet declared that the sword of destruction and the torch could be wielded without limit," retorted Mr. Cockran, pointing his finger at the heckler. The applause which greeted his answer lasted several minutes. When it subsided another Irish sympathizer yelled:

"It's too late."

Attempting to continue, Mr. Cockran alluded to Senator Harding's statement that he would no more assume to tell England what to do in her own sphere than he would allow England to tell us what to do in the Philippines.

"That a man should perpetrate such a foul lie as to compare our government of the Philippines with such butcheries and murders as have characterized England's rule of Ireland is beyond comprehension," Mr. Cockran said. "Let me tell you, there are some things we can do and among them not to tell England that she shall not outrage civilized government by such conditions as are found in Ireland."

"What have the Democrats done for Ireland?" asked a woman standing almost under the platform. A shout of disapproval drowned her voice as she asked other questions.

"The Democrats have never condoned murders," answered Mr. Cockran.

"Mr. Cockran, we want no more Democratic Presidents," he said. "We've had enough of them for some time."

"Well, that's your view," said Mr. Cockran. "Are you Irish?"

"Yes, I am; and I'm proud of it."

"I congratulate you on your opinion. Britain has burned Irish homes and killed Irishmen—" but he got no further, as another woman wanted to know why Britain had six votes in the League of Nations Assembly while the United States had only one.

"My answer to you is that I'm not in favor of giving Britain even one vote until she has cleaned her hands of her infamy in Ireland," replied Mr. Cockran.

Mr. Cockran then concluded his address by saying that when President Wilson's fourteen points were put across Ireland would be free. Seated on the platform with the Tammany notables were George White, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, and Wilbur Marsh, the National Treasurer.

Before taking up the national issues Mr. Cockran paid a tribute to Governor Smith, for whose re-election he made a strong plea. Then he took up what he believed was the great task confronting civilization today—universal disarmament.

"Unless the world is disarmed," he said, "the world will perish. Make no mistake about that. There must not be partial disarmament, it must be whole, complete. Which party is likely to effect disarmament is the question before the voters. There can be no doubt where the Democratic Party stands."

He outlined the Democratic position on the League and pointed out what he termed the vacillation and inconsistency of Senator Harding's stand as revealed in the Republican candidate's utterances.

"We all believe in disarmament and that the League of Nations will guarantee the peace of the world. That's the Democratic position," he said. Referring to the recent Republican success in the Maine elections, Mr. Cockran said it was the result of having plenty of money. The Democrats did not have the funds with which to carry on their campaigns, and he believed it a serious menace to our institutions if money were to decide national and State elections.

Mrs. Winter Russel was introduced "as the mother of five Democrats" by Miss Elisabeth Marbury, the Chairman of the meeting. Her plea for support of Governor Cox was based on his stand for the League of Nations.

Lieut. Gov. Walker, who is running for the Senate, and Corporation Counsel O'Brien also spoke. About 2,500 attended the rally.

in the Senate he voted for "going in." So I am for Cox.

The League of Nations offers the one practical opportunity for this generation to unite the nations in an effort to prevent war and effect disarmament. Democracies only make striking changes under the stress of great emotions. It was while fresh with the recollection of the millions of lives lost, the terrible sufferings endured and the billions of property destroyed that the people of the world would, if at all, rouse themselves to an arrangement designed to prevent repetition of such a horror. The fainter the recollection became, the less was the likelihood of action. We are told that the American people are tired of the League. They will be more tired of it after March 4. Less will be possible then than now.

Harding's expressions scattered through his speeches about an association of nations, an amended league and preserving what is good in the treaty—expressions plainly designed to secure the votes of pro-league Republicans, but intermingled with expressions equally designed to give comfort to those who wish the League scrapped—have induced many distinguished Republicans who desire to see the United States enter the League to support Harding. They are being deceived.

Harding will not accomplish anything constructive. All his talk is mush. He says he has no international program and that it is folly to be specific. He is a member of the Senate and of its Committee on Foreign Relations, and has thus had before him the treaty and the League for over a year, and he now says that he does not know what should be done. He never will know. He is negative and sentimental. On one point he is definite: He is not for what, after a year's consideration, he voted for in the Senate, the League with the Lodge reservations, although this is the solution which would come nearest to satisfying American aspirations and is substantially what will work out by the election of Cox.

Harding's real policy will be to do not what honor or the peace of the world requires—but what he will be squeezed into doing by the opposing pressures of the conflicting forces supporting him. It may be nothing at all, so long as it serves as a compromise to preserve harmony in the Republican Party and make possible continued Republican control of the Senate. In politics the man who is ignorant or a straddler or a sentimentalist—by which I mean a man who is unctuous in talk, but a cipher in action—compromises only one way—and that is, the way of those who know what they want and are determined to have it. Harding's delay and fatuity will result in "the scrapping of the League," if America's abstaining from it can scrap it, for he will be willing to sacrifice the League, even the world court as part of it, to the comfort of harmony.

The cause, the greatest of our day, calls for the aggressive, positive leadership of Cox, not the self-confessed ignorance of Harding. No straddler can lead a cause.

The many years of hard work that I have given to the Republican Party, the honors which it has bestowed upon me, the confidence that many of its members have shown in me, the valued friendships that I have made among its active members, and the splendid struggles for better government and improved conditions in which I have engaged with you and others have made me reluctant to take this step.

But before the war I was for "a" League of Nations. My experiences during the war, which, as you know, were at fairly close range, strengthened this conviction and created in me an intense desire to do what I could to prevent future war, and therefore since the war I have been for "the" League of Nations.

An international court is not sufficient. It would not have stopped the great war. One nation cannot prevent war. The nations must unite. Most of them have. To insist that the thirty-eight who have now joined the League forsake it and go into an association of nations which is to be designed along American lines when Harding discovers what those are, is no way to promote friendly relations between them and us, even if they could be persuaded to put up with such impertinence on our part. The way to promote friendly relations is to not, to join the League with such reservations as we think ought to be made in fairness to ourselves.

The issue is not between the League as Wilson brought it and the League with reservations. The situation in the Senate is such that the treaty cannot be ratified in the form in which Wilson brought it. There will be reservations such as will relieve America of obligations, even moral, under Article X., and will render Congress wholly free to declare war or not in any given case. The issue to the American voter is between going into the League with reservations and not going into it at all. Harding is and will be for not going into it at all. The only likelihood that the United States will, under Harding, enter the League is that he will find it impossible to erect an association of nations or a new league and so will have to crawl into this one.

To me it is monstrously immoral not to go into the League at all and to let slip this one opportunity to join in a great effort to prevent future war. I shall vote, therefore, for Cox as the certain way to have the United States join the League and do her full share to preserve the peace of the world by reservations making it clear that it is only the Congress that has the right, untrammeled, to commit us to war.

Yours truly,
HERBERT PARSONS.

Koenig Not Ready to Talk.

Mr. Koenig, long a friend and political associate of Mr. Parsons and who was originally elected County Chairman by Mr. Parsons's support, said he had not received the latter's letter and would not comment on it until he had.

George W. Wickersham, who is among the leading Republicans considered friendly to the League idea, said he had no comment to make on Senator Harding's speech. Oscar S. Straus, another prominent pro-League Republican, also declined to talk about the speech or Mr. Parsons's letter. At the office of Charles E. Hughes it was said he did not wish to make any comment.

"I am not at all surprised at Mr. Parsons's action because of conversations I have had with him several times since he returned from the war," said Bertrand H. Snell, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Republican State Committee. "He has taken no active part in politics for some time, and the only thing he seems to be interested in is the League of Nations. If he is for Wilson's League of Nations, one would expect him to vote for Governor Cox. I am certainly not for it."

George White, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, expressed gratification when informed of Mr. Parsons's action.

"It does credit to his patriotism and convictions," he said. "We welcome him, fighting with us for a cause beyond partisanship. There will be many more."

BAKER SAYS SENATE IS SEEKING MASTERY

DEFENDS WILSON'S COURSE

Lodge's Changing Attitudes Recited by Secretary in a Speech at Boston.

BOSTON, Oct. 8.—Speaking here tonight in behalf of Cox and Roosevelt, Secretary Baker went into a careful analysis of the Senate's course toward the treaty. He declared that the Republican Party under Lodge's leadership took its position on the League of Nations from that of the late Count von Hertling, former Imperial German Chancellor, who, in January, 1918, said, in reply to the speech of President Wilson enumerating the Fourteen Points:

"The German Government is gladly ready, when all other pending questions have been settled, to begin the examination of a basis for a bond or league of nations."

Mr. Baker went on:

"This hard, material and mediaeval position is strangely at variance with the enlightened idealism of America during the war. By this position we were to be idealistic, unselfish and helpful to mankind while the war lasted, but at its conclusion to play safe with our own special interests, demand our share of the spoils and leave the cause of civilization to the tender mercies of a map of Europe drawn as the interests and selfish purposes of victor nations might determine."

At the outset of his speech Mr. Baker said:

"Throughout the discussion of the League of Nations there has been a persistent disposition on the part of those who have opposed the covenant, or have desired fundamental modifications of it as a condition of America's acceptance, to comment upon the course followed by the President and to attribute the disastrous inaction of the Senate to an unwillingness on his part to recognize the right of the Senate to advise and consent to the making of treaties. To the extent that this controversy is a mere squabble on the part of the Senate about its dignity, it is beneath contempt. The issues of human life and happiness, the consequences to America and to the world, are too great to permit anybody to discuss seriously such questions; but the facts, when candidly examined, show that the President's course has from the beginning been both consistent and courageous."

How League Idea Grew.

He then sketched the early days of the war and how prominent Americans, shocked by the immensity of the tragedy, started in 1915 the League to Enforce Peace as a concrete expression of our belief that a means should be found to prevent future wars. The league's proposals obtained great publicity, and in May, 1916, the organization held a meeting at Washington.

At the closing banquet, said Mr. Baker, "but three speeches were made—an able argument by President Taft, an eloquent and scholarly speech by Senator Lodge, senior Republican member of the Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, and one by President Wilson. The object of the convention was accomplished; the President accepted the principle of the enforcement of peace by a league of nations, and in his address joined with President Taft and Senator Lodge in proclaiming that to be, as Senator Lodge in his speech declared it, 'the only way' in which the peace of the world could be assured."

"From that hour until this, the President has not wavered or changed. On Jan. 22, 1917, the President addressed the Senate and laid out to them the principles of the league as the basis for ultimate peace. In his inaugural address on March 4, he stated these principles to the people of the country; even in the message of April 2, 1917, which led America into the war on the side of the Allies, the President reiterated the object of America in entering the war to be a League of Nations to enforce peace. During all this time, in public addresses, the President pressed the plan upon the attention of the country.

"Nor did the power of his voice or the inspiration of his leadership stop at our own shores. His messages and papers were printed in every language which has an alphabet. Our Allies accepted the vision and appointed great statesmen to begin the study of practical details for the future arrangement. Neutral nations, oppressed and scattered peoples in remote parts of the world, hailed the doctrine and the purpose as a great message of salvation for humanity; and our enemies laid down their arms, beaten, it is true, on the field of battle, but disintegrated and demoralized at home because their peoples, too, had come to realize that America's purpose had become the purpose of the war, and that it was salutary and healing to them, as it was to all the rest of mankind.

"Then the President went to Paris. The victory was won; the peoples of the Old World were broken and in despair. With the removal of the military danger every sort of passion for indemnity and revenge broke loose to balk and confuse the plans for peace. All the old national and racial aspirations, all the old religious and racial animosities and hostilities revived; Paris became the boiling point of the passions of the world, inflamed by suffering and brought out from the hiding places into which they had been driven by the common menace of impending military defeat.

"It may well be that the treaty evolved out of this seething situation is not such a document as could have been written in the cell of a solitary, undisturbed by the conflicting cries and passionate ambitions of an unsettled world. The President had a choice to make. He could have come back to America and left the world to scramble for itself and finish an almost completed destruction of civilization by fresh alliances, fresh conflicts and fresh scrambles for what was left of the world's wealth and power. He elected to stay and secure such a composition as was possible in the main part of the treaty in order that he might bring back the covenant of a League of Nations which would moderate the treaty in its application and make firm the basis of peace for the future.

Turning to a question of the President conferring with Congress, Mr. Baker said:

"I have examined the messages and papers of the Presidents from the beginning of our Government until now, and in no other instance has any President ever consulted the Senate or the Congress before a war, during a war, or at the conclusion of a war, as fully as President Wilson consulted our Congress and our Senate on the subject of this war, its object, or the terms of the peace which should conclude it. In every other instance the President has taken the position that the war was to be fought through to a successful conclusion before the terms of peace could be discussed; but in this instance the President stated them before we went into the war, reiterated them while we were at war and returned from the Peace Conference during its negotiation of the treaty to lay the terms before the Senate and secure its suggestions and counsel."

Takes Up Lodge's Attitudes.

The Secretary then set forth Mr. Lodge's attitude on the League of Nations, saying:

"First—We see Mr. Lodge in his chancellor's address at Union College in 1914, declaring that there is no way in which to preserve the peace of the world except by a League of Nations.

"Second—We have Mr. Lodge at the banquet of the League to Enforce Peace in 1916, reiterating the belief that there is no other way, and urging that the United States become a party to such a league, nay, become the leader in the formation of such a league, and increase its own army and navy in order to have adequate force to match with that of other nations in the inforcement of peace.

"Third—We see Mr. Lodge formulating his round robin of the Senate of 1919 to repudiate the covenant of the League of Nations as drafted.

"Fourth—Mr. Lodge in the Senate engineering the defeat of the Treaty of Peace.

"Fifth—Mr. Lodge making the keynote address at the Republican National Convention in 1920, declaring that the peace ought not to have been of the new and modern and righteous kind, but an old-fashioned peace of victory with the spoils divided, and declaring this to be the position of his party and the belief of his associates in the Senate."

Commenting on the results of partisan attacks on President Wilson, Mr. Baker said:

"The task of the President in Paris was hard enough at best; great as was his prestige and that of America, he stood alone for the cause of permanent peace; but it was made cruel, and in part impossible, by the desertion of those who, like Senator Lodge, had urged him to undertake the peace as America's apostolic mission. What the President might have secured for America and the world at Paris if Senator Lodge and his associates had stood true and notified the world that the President spoke the unanimous views of America, it is impossible to say.

"The mind walks blindfold to the conclusion of these facts. The Senate, envious and filled with partisan hatred of the President, determined to destroy his prestige. They stabbed him with the Round Robin; they stabbed him with their constant discussion of his efforts and purposes in Europe; they recanted their own views on the League of Nations, tore up the treaty of peace and flung it in his face in order that he might see that the Senate was master in American government; they captured the convention of a great party and made it merely an instrument further to cement the solitary power of the Senate, and they nominated one of their own number who would parrot their phrases and yield alike the constitutional independence accorded to the Executive and his personal independence, to their domination when elected. And this, in the nature of the case, cannot be a consultation of the Senate; it speaks by resolution. The purpose of Senator Harding is to consult selected members of the Senate; not even the Republican caucus in all likelihood, but to disperse and scatter the responsibility for the executive function by distributing it among an unknown and unnamed group of 'leaders' who may themselves split into factions.

Mr. Baker took up and discussed the provisions of the League covenant of Article X. He said:

"Under the old order, the nations of the earth armed themselves for three reasons: First, to preserve domestic peace; second, to extend their national boundaries by aggressive action against their neighbors, or third, to resist aggression from neighboring nations. Such armament as is necessary for the preservation of domestic peace is, of course, to be retained; but all armament accumulated for aggression upon another people, either to seize their territory or change their political institutions, is essentially unrighteous, and there can be no peace in the world until that form of international lawlessness is denounced and prevented.

"Under Article X. it is prevented by the joint and combined action of the nations. When the fear of unrighteous aggression is removed, small States will no longer feel obliged to waste their substance in armament, but will be able to devote the energies of their people to the developing of the arts of peace, resting in assured security against lawless aggression by ambitious neighbors.

Secretary Baker was heckled good naturedly on Ireland and the War Department's attitude toward Brig. Gen. Edwards.

Concerning Ireland he said:

"That semes to me to be a domestic question for Great Britain. I do not see how anything could be done under the League. But certainly nothing can be done outside the League; while it is possible that within the League the problem of Ireland would receive consideration."

BANDITS GET $30,000 RUM.

Eight Armed Men Hold Up Garage, Taking Two Trucks of Whisky.

Eight armed men stole two motor trucks carrying about $30,000 worth of whisky from a garage at 541 West Fifty-second Street at 2 o'clock this morning. They had gained admission on the pretense that they were prohibition enforcements agents. The rum bandits gained a half-hour start with their loot by locking up the guards in a fireproof room.

One of the guards was Edward Roche, a truckman, who said he had come to the city from Waterbury, Conn., with a permit to withdraw from a Government warehouse about 400 cases of whisky. He said he loaded up the whisky yesterday afternoon and proceeded to the garage to wait for daybreak so that he could make an early start. With him was the driver of the second truck, Clarence W. Capps.

At 2 o'clock this morning he and Capps were awakened by a pounding upon the door. In response to their queries voices outside declared that "revenue agents" demanded admission to inspect the whisky. The men opened the garage door and the armed gang fell upon and beat them, locked them up and escaped with the whisky.

Plan 'Home and Harding' Meetings.

Mrs. Charles G. Cornell, Chairman of parlor meetings for the Republican Committee of One Hundred, a women's organization, announced yesterday that arrangements had been made to hold at least 150 "Home and Harding" meetings in New York City before election day. The committee will hold a school for women voters at its headquarters, 36 West Thirty-ninth Street, on Tuesday, Oct. 26. Sample ballots with the names of the Presidential electors will be on hand, so that women may accustom themselves to voting processes.

ALL PEACE RECORDS ARE KEPT SECRET

Paris Foreign Office Has the Proces-Verbal of Session When Wilson Spoke.

Writer Says He Had Official Record Loaned by Representative of Nation Concerned.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The official records of the plenary sessions of the Peace Conference over which a controversy has started in the United States between President Wilson and Senator Spencer are confidential documents and can be consulted only by special permission of all the parties concerned.

At the eighth plenary session, held May 31, 1919, when the subject under discussion was the protection of minorities in the small States of Eastern Europe, Rumania in particular proved difficult to persuade, and an interesting debate took place.

Premier Bratiano made a long speech, and President Wilson followed. While some points of the controversy cannot be cleared up without publication from official records of the words used by President Wilson, Premier Bratiano evidently regarded Wilson's assurances as sufficient.

In another quarter it was suggested that President Wilson, if he had the actual record of what was said, could easily confound his critics by publishing the official record. It was said that there could be no suggestion of the American official record being "edited" for any purpose, seeing that other records in the possession of foreign Governments would become available for comparison.

G. H. Perris, who was chief correspondent of The Daily Chronicle at the Peace Conference and was in close touch with the British Prime Minister furnished to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent today the following statement:

"The plenary session of the Peace Conference on May 31 was held in secret I was, therefore, not present at the sitting but I was, perhaps, more closely in touch with it than Mr. Simonds.

"The only note I can now find is to the effect that President Wilson made a conciliatory speech and the clauses in question were referred back to the Council of Four. The words as Mr. Simonds cites had been used, I believe I should have heard of and reported them. I have not the slightest doubt of the accuracy of President Wilson's correction."

PARIS, Oct. 8.—There exists at the Foreign Office what the French call a proces verbal of the eighth plenary session, printed and bound in leaflet form.

The Foreign Office discretion is now extreme, as the result of publicity, but an official there said today that with regard to the plenary sessions it was probable that there was a full proces verbal, that it was unlikely that this was drawn up without first receiving the approval of all parties present at the session, and that it was reasonable to suppose that all parties received copies.

Statement of Frank H. Simonds.

Frank H. Simonds, whose article quoting the now disputed speech of President Wilson before the session of the Peace Conference on May 31, 1919, was republished in the Congressional Record of Dec. 4, 1919, issued this statement yesterday through the McClure Newspaper Syndicate:

"The article in question was a transcript from the record of what took place at a preliminary session of the Paris Conference on May 31, 1919. The whole stenographic record for that day was placed in my hands by a representative of one of the nations concerned in the day's proceedings under pledge that I should not at any time disclose the source—naturally I shall keep faith.

"As to its authenticity I had two satisfactory indications; first, the source from which it emanated; second, the character of the document itself and the knowledge common to all in Paris of what happened on that interesting day.

"The document consisted of many scores of typewritten sheets presenting the verbatim record of a long series of discussions turning upon interests of the several small nations, Poland, Serbia, Rumania and Czechoslovakia. These nations had suddenly received copies of the portions of the treaty affecting their countries, and with only a few hours' notice had to appear to make their comments.

"It contains the protests of each of the countries over specified grievances, beginning with the quick notice which moved M. Clemenceau to make an apology. It proceeded to reproduce the long debate up to the moment when the crucial question of the right of the Big Four to interfere on behalf of minorities in these States was reached.

"It was over this point that the debate became personal between President Wilson and the Rumanian Prime Minister, M. Bratiano, and my article, which is now under discussion, reproduced this debate, omitting the remarks of M. Bratiano, which, although of very great interest to Rumania, had no immediate American significance.

"It will be seen, then, that if the document was a forgery not only would the author have had to forge all the conversation leading up to the debate over the minorities, but he would have had to forge it all with a foreknowledge of what was coming nearly two years later. He would have had to forge not one speech by one man, but a drama, filling many pages and assigning parts to many speakers, for the climax came after a very long debate, in the course of which the indignation of representatives of the smaller nations gradually reached a fever heat. It was to quiet this indignation that the President finally intervened.

"I regret that I have not now a copy of this day's proceedings, but mine was only lent to me and I returned it after making use of it. But as to its authenticity, subject only to the limitations incident to a translation first into French and then back to English, I had then and have now not the smallest doubt.

"Of course the real test now must be had by comparing the version published by me with the official version and with the versions of the several nations represented on that day."

MRS. CROSBY FOR HARDING.

Leader of Democratic Women Forms League to Aid Republicans.

The formation of a Harding and Wadsworth Democratic League of Women Voters, with headquarters at the Woldorf-Astoria, was announced yesterday by Mrs. John Sherwin Crosby, long a leader among Democratic women, who said she had decided to vote and work for the Republican ticket. Mrs. Crosby, who was formerly the associate woman State Chairman and the associate woman member of the Democratic National Committee from New York, was displaced in the latter place by Miss Elisabeth Marbury as the result of action by the New York delegation at the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco. She was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention.

In announcing that she will support Senator Harding and Senator Wadsworth, Mrs. Crosby said that she resented the dictation of Democratic leaders. She said:

"I am, as I have always been, a Democrat, but I intend to support and to work for Senator Harding, Senator Wadsworth and their associates on the Republican ticket, if only as a protest against conditions on the Cox side, which are intolerable to women voters of independence, intelligence, and, I may say, self-respect. Senator Harding appeals strongly to the support of women voters and the other Republican candidates do, too, not excepting Senator Wadsworth."

Mrs. Imogene King has been elected President of the Harding and Wadsworth Democratic League of Women Voters. Among those active in its organization are Mrs. Rebecca Richards, Mrs. Charles Coghlin, Mrs. James Dunham, Miss Beatrice Moreland, Mrs. Edward W. Rickard, Mrs. Sara E. Foster, Mrs. May Douglas, Mrs. Henry W. O'Neil, Mrs. Louis Silverman, Miss Josephine Burgess, Miss Estelle Abramson and Miss Josephine Levens.

SABIN OUT FOR SMITH.

Dean Robbins and Others Also Support the Governor.

Charles H. Sabin, President of the Guaranty Trust Company, is the latest recruit to the non-partisan Citizens' Committee which is working for the re-election of Governor Alfred E. Smith. In a letter yesterday to Chairman Joseph M. Proskauer of the committee Mr. Sabin said he would be glad to do everything he consistently could to help re-elect the Governor. Miles M. Dawson, a life-long Republican, also announced that he would vote for the Governor.

Mrs. Frederick L. Cranford of Brooklyn also accepted membership on the committee. The Very Rev. Howard C. Robbins, Dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in a letter to the committee said: "The social legislation which he has advocated has been humane and liberal without being unduly radical and has marked out a safe line of progress. He has been independent and fearless and on more than one occasion his vetoes have saved the State from the disastrous consequences of hasty, ill-advised and un-American legislation."

NEIGHBORS TO AID SMITH.

Personal Friends of Governor from Downtown Wards to Meet.

A campaign in behalf of the candidacy of Governor Smith will begin next Sunday afternoon, when the Old Neighbors' Association for Alfred E. Smith will hold a meeting at the organization's headquarters, 2 Lafayette Street. The association is composed of former residents of the First, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth and Tenth Wards, in the lower part of the city, all of whom are personal friends of the Governor.

In Governor Smith's campaign for the Governorship two years ago committees of his old neighbors were formed in practically every city in the State, as well as in many of the farming communities. All of the committees were affiliated with the Old Neighbors' Association. Magistrate Thomas F. Nolan, head of the organization, will preside at Sunday's meeting. Arrangements for the meeting are in charge of Timothy F. Brosnan, Secretary of the association.

CITY REGISTRATION NOW TOTALS 908,578

Nearly Double That for the Corresponding Five Days in Last Presidential Year.

Brooklyn Only 2,214 Behind—Heavy Enrollment of Women Is Expected Today.

Registration in New York City took another big jump yesterday, exceeding the totals for any previous day this week. All the boroughs showed a gain over the preceding days. The total for the five days this week has nearly doubled that of the corresponding five days in 1916, the last Presidential year, but the women are registering this year in their first Presidential election.

In one instance the total of registrants so far has more than doubled that of four years ago. In Queens 46,984 persons had registered on the fifth day in 1916, and for the five days this year 94,988 men and women have qualified to vote. Manhattan is the only borough that has not so far kept up with the ratio of four years ago, but election officials said this was to be expected, as its growth in population has not kept pace with the other boroughs.

The total registration for all boroughs yesterday was 218,810 and for the five days this year 908,578.

Every borough showed an increase over Thursday's figures, as well as an increase over any other single day this week. Although some of the Assembly Districts fell behind Thursday's figures, other districts greatly exceeded the previous day's total. The increases were mainly in Republican strongholds. The lower districts in Manhattan, considered Tammany strongholds, slumped somewhat from the previous day's registration.

76,326 Register in Manhattan.

In Manhattan 76,326 persons registered yesterday, as compared with 71,779 the day before. The Manhattan total for the five days thus far is 333,258. In 1916 the fifth day total was 204,644. The Bronx came through strong with a day's total of 31,883 and a five-day total of 129,426. Queens had its biggest day so far, 24,916 persons registering and 94,988 during the five days.

Brooklyn forged ahead of Manhattan on the day's result, the total being 80,125. The borough is still 2,322 behind Manhattan, however, on the five-day total. Richmond's total for the day was 5,425 and the five-day total of 19,862 being almost double that of 1916.

The following table shows the result yesterday by Assembly Districts as compared to last year and the five-day totals of the last four years:

Gerber Makes Complaint.

Julius Gerber, Secretary of the Socialist Party in New York County, complained to the Board of Elections that inspectors of elections in the Eighteenth Assembly District were violating the law in intimidating voters. He said:

"My specific complaint is that the inspectors refuse to register women who have no marriage certificates, though the names of these women appear on the naturalization papers of their husbands; the inspectors refuse to recognize marriage certificates in a foreign language, and even in the English language. They claim they have no affidavits as provided by Section 174a, and when I found the affidavits the Chairman refused to make them out, stating that even though she will make the affidavit out she will refuse to register them."

District leaders look for a heavy registration today when the polls will be open all day, from 7 A. M. until 10:30 tonight. The leaders expect that the women will make their best showing and come nearer to equaling the number of male registrants.

LAST DAY TO REGISTER!

Registration places will be open today for New York City voters from 7 A. M. to 10:30 P. M. Personal registration will be required in New York City. If you do not register you cannot vote.

COX CALLS ON TAFT TO STATE POSITION

we might as well confess ourselves a pagan people, whose only God is Beelzebub. On us would be the marks of Cain, who was driven out of the garden of God because he denied any moral obligation or social responsibility.

"Are we to substitute the creed of gain for the creed of Christ? The founder of Christianity preached the doctrine of mutual service, affirming the duty the strong owes to the weak and the duty that those who are happy and prosperous owe to those who are sad and those who suffer.

"If we were to heed the preachment of the prophet of Marion, we might just as well make our Declaration of Independence a scrap of paper. We might just as well burn all our great Americans, past and present, in effigy. We might just as well close the doors of all our universities. We might just as well make a bonfire of our busts and tear down our family altars. We might just as well begin now to train our future citizens to believe that greatest among us are those who recognize selfishness rather than service as the creed of America.

Analyzes Taft's Position.

"I am curious to see what ex-President Taft now will say about it all. In the face of open pronouncements by the Senatorial candidate to Senators Johnson and Borah, ex-President Taft has attempted to persuade the friends of the League that his candidate, after all, will be all right.

"Now let us analyze that. We have the definite statement of the Senatorial candidate that he is against the League now in any form, regardless of any kind of reservations. Are we to understand that in the face of these public avowals Judge Taft's candidate is giving him an entirely different assurance? If that be true can Judge Taft worthily continue a part of the conspiracy of deceit? He owes much to the American people. They have conferred upon him the greatest honor within the gift of the people. In common gratitude, in common good faith and in self-respect, he should tell in front of the curtain what is going on behind. This is no time for dissembling."

In declaring that the Republican advocates of the League, like Taft, showed bad faith if they supported Harding after the address which the Senator made yesterday, Governor Cox called attention to Harding's admission that the League could not put the United States into war, but that Congress had the final word.

"The League has no right to declare war," asserted Governor Cox. "The Senatorial candidate yesterday had to admit it. You have heard the statement made (the Senatorial candidate himself made it) that President Wilson would not let them dot an 'i' or cross a 't.'

"How unfair that is to the stricken man in the White House! Their malignant spite was directed at him from the very day he was stricken. When I stood by his side not many weeks ago I realized that he is the victim of the war as much as any wounded soldier in any hospital in America."

Governor Cox made in all thirteen speeches. It was a day of thorough enjoyment for the candidate with large crowds turning out to greet him.

Sees Court Control Sought.

In his first address, made at Paducah early in the day, the Governor developed a new line of attack upon the "Senate oligarchy," which he charges is seeking to obtain control of all branches of the Government.

He called attention to the fact that four members of the United States Supreme Court were eligible for retirement and that there would probably be four vacancies within the next Presidential term. It was only natural, he said, that a reactionary President of the United States would appoint reactionary members of the Supreme Court. His statement caused no little comment.

In part he said:

"There are several reasons why the Senatorial oligarchy should not be permitted to win this election. There are three branches of government—the executive, legislative and judicial. Throughout the years the Senate has trespassed on the authority of the House of Representatives. The Constitution provides that all legislation, providing for the raising of revenues, shall be initiated in the house. Yet there has probably not been a tariff measure in the last fifty years which was not changed in its every line after the enacting clause once it reached the Senate.

"By the nomination of one of its own members as the reactionary candidate for the Presidency, it now has the opportunity of annexing the executive department. If the Senatorial ring should win the election it would in addition to controlling the President, also possess the constitutional right of confirmation of members of the Supreme Court, appointed by the President. Four members of the Court being now eligible for retirement, there will beyond doubt be at least four vacancies on this court within the next four years.

"It will be seen at a glance that the Senatorial crowd is playing for big stakes, which are no more nor less than absolute control of the three constitutional branches of our Government. No President of the United States will appoint any one that he deems unworthy of a place on the highest court in the land, but we must be reminded that the Senatorial nominee for the Presidency has confirmed his faith many times in the theory of plural government, which means that he would not only confer with the group around him, but that this same group has the constitutional right to apply its check if the President should show any signs of independence.

"Besides, it would naturally follow that a reactionary President would appoint four reactionary members of the Supreme Court. This would bind the country to reaction for the better part of a generation. It is a simple matter for the people to make a change in the executive and the legislative branches of the Government, but not in the judiciary. As I see it, this is the real danger of a reactionary victory, next to the scrapping of the League of Nations."

Women Affected by League Plea.

While Governor Cox was making a plea for the League at Paducah three women were so affected that they had to be assisted from the crowd. The incident occurred while the Governor was telling a story about a mother and father of Ohio who had lost their only son in the World War. He has told the story at many meetings and frequently men and women in his audience have wept.

FISHER SAYS LEAGUE WOULD PREVENT WAR

MANY QUESTIONS BY WOMEN

American Participation Best Monument to Our Soldier Dead, He Says.

Professor Irving Fisher, economist of Yale University, told a quiz class at the Democratic National Headquarters in the Grand Central Palace yesterday afternoon that Article X. of the League of Nations covenant was simply the Monroe Doctrine extended so as to apply to the whole world. As a result of the Monroe Doctrine the United States for more than a hundred years had not been compelled to fire a shot to uphold it because this country was ready to enforce the principle, he pointed out. It followed, in his opinion, that the League of Nations would accomplish the same object.

The quiz class was attended by many women whose questions on various phases of the League showed an understanding and a study of the subject. Professor Fisher dwelt at length on the objections to the League as well as its commendable features.

"The Monroe Doctrine was one-sided," Professor Fisher said. "We had the heavy end. We had to help South America if the necessity arose, because we had pledged ourselves to do so. But the people to the south of us did not have to aid us against territorial aggression if they did not see fit to. Article X., on the other hand, is mutual; each side has an obligation to carry out."

Answering the objection to the six votes Great Britain has to our one, Professor Fisher said that England would have preferred to have had one vote to be cast for all her possessions. It was the colonies, he said, that demanded the right to cast a vote for themselves in the Supreme Council. Regarding the objection to the League held by some of those with Irish sympathies, Professor Fisher maintained that Ireland was better off with the League than without it.

Speaking in general of the advantages of the League, Professor Fisher said in part:

"The great mission of the League is to avoid a repetition of war. And why are we concerned in the League, you ask? Because the world today is a great neighbor. We are no longer isolated as in the days of Washington. And you must remember that war communicates from one to another with startling rapidity. Witness the quick developments of the late World War in which the whole of Europe and later the United States was embroiled in a short period.

"How will the League prevent war? If a conference could have been brought about two weeks before the World War had broken out that terrible cataclysm probably never would have taken place. Conference failing, the next step as provided by the covenant is arbitration or conciliation. The third step is boycott. No nation could successfully hold out long against an international boycott against her goods and people. All these three steps failing to accomplish peace the fourth move would be war. And the chances are about one in ten thousand of that happening under the League."

In concluding, Professor Fisher said the United States owes it to her soldier dead to join in this movement to prevent future wars. He said no better monument to our heroes could be conceived than the League.

GETS $1,200,000 AWARD.

Baltimore Steamship Company Wins Claim Against Government.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 8.—An award of approximately $1,200,000 has been made by the Board of Referees in Washington in the case of the Merchants and Miners Transportation Company against the Railroad Administration, covering claims for compensation and operating losses during Federal control.

The decision of the board was made known today by A. D. Stebbins, President of the steamship company. The Railroad Administration has the right to appeal to the Court of Claims.

The properties of the steamship company were taken over by the Railroad Administration on April 11, 1918, and operated until March 1, 1919, when they were returned to the owners. The company accepted the return on condition that such acceptance did not prejudice claims against the Railroad Administration.

CITY TO OPERATE TRANSIT SERVICE

cent. fare, ceased operating last January. This action followed much agitation on the part of the company, the Public Service Commission, the Staten Island public, the Board of Estimate and the various civic organizations. When Mr. Brenner was appointed receiver he tried to take possession of the company's property, but found very little of it. When he was urged to set the cars running he retorted that he could not find any cars.

The Board of Estimate ordered the company to resume operation, and its failure to obey the order resulted in a resolution passed by the board declaring the company's franchise forfeited. At the expiration of the ninety days required before such an order could become effective action was delayed by the fact that the property was in the possession of the Federal Court; that the company was bankrupt and that nothing could be done with it unless the court consented.

Late in September the company resumed operation, but charged an extra 3 cents for passengers to and from St. George, because it operated for a short distance over the tracks of the Richmond Light and Railroad Company. Staten Island citizens objected strenuously to this and declared it was only a trick to save the franchise of the company from being forfeited and to enable it to obtain an 8-cent fare, which the Richmond Company is charging by virtue of an order by the Public Service Commission. It was also charged that the receivers of the two railroads were acting as one and were in a plan to mulct the public.

During all of this time the city was engaged in an effort to get possession of the property. A few weeks ago Commissioner Whalen announced that the city was ready to take over the lines of the Midland and Richmond companies and operate them with a 5-cent fare. On July 13 last the Board of Estimate made an appropriation of $300,000 for the purchase of the rolling stock of the Midland Company.

Since then there has been a deal of letter writing and oral controversy concerning the project. It was said after yesterday's meeting of the board that the prospects now favored speedy city ownership and operation of the Midland line, with the prospect that Mr. Whalen would succeed later in having the Richmond property also turned over to the city.

SEEK SIX MORE REDS IN ANARCHY PLOT

PREACHED ARMED REVOLT

Documents Indicate One of the Suspects Was Associated with Russian Radicals.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Arrests of six other radicals in St. Paul and Milwaukee are pending following the seizure here last night of Nicolai John Jazzinski and John Holoeny and a quantity of anarchistic literature, the Department of Justice announced today. The warrants have already been issued.

According to Federal authorities, the present plot is one of the most daring that has so far been disclosed. Not only did its perpetrators seek the overthrow of the Government, authorities say, but they are alleged to have connived to assassinate several officials of State.

Jazzinski and Holoeny will be arraigned under two charges—violation of the Espionage act and conspiracy to overthrow the Government.

In Jazzinski's possession was found nearly half a ton of Communist articles, including samples of a new pamphlet advocating armed revolution by foreign elements in this country. One hundred thousand of these pamphlets, it was said, were shipped out of Chicago yesterday by Jazzinski via the American Express Company. They were traced and are being held for the authorities.

The agents said documents were found in Holoeny's possession which gave evidence that he was associated with a radical Russian anarchistic group in America. It was said that virtually every anarchistic document ever printed in the Russian language was found among his effects. Chief among these, they said, was the proclamation of the Union of Russian Workers calling upon all its members to rise and overthrow the Government of the United States by force of arms.

This proclamation was printed in Russian, the agents said, and translation of it revealed a complete plan for the revolution.

Holoeny, it was said, is 34 years old and unmarried. He has been under surveillance in New York City and Waterbury, Conn., for some time, the authorities declared.

The Department of Justice agents who made the arrests said they were now on the trail of the "mysterious anarchist print shop" believed to be located here, and which they declare has been turning out millions of anarchistic pamphlets.

WORK DAY AND NIGHT ON ARMISTICE TERMS

RIGA, Oct. 8 (Associated Press).—The Polish and Soviet peace delegations, working almost constantly since last night, were still trying today to complete the armistice and preliminary peace terms, hoping to be able to sign them by tonight. M. Dombski and Adolph Joffe, heads of the Polish and Russian missions, returned to their hotels at 7 o'clock this morning for a temporary respite after having worked since 10 o'clock last night. They returned to the Black Head House, where the peace negotiations have been going on, at 11 A. M. The hour for signing, if it takes place tonight, will probably be known only shortly before the event.

M. Ladeo, Secretary of the Polish Mission, said today the chief difficulty arose through technical questions. There was no disagreement on the important issues, he explained, but the working out of minor details took time with the limited facilities at the conference's disposal. So far it had been difficult to translate the terms into the Ukrainian language, owing to the absence of a qualified interpreter.

Food brought to the Black Head House in baskets is being served to the delegates while they are at work. All of them display signs of fatigue.

UNMASK PASSPORT SHOP OF RUSSIANS IN PARIS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—The bureau through which, by means of forged passports, Russians and Polish deserters and suspects during the past months have been enabled to travel to the United States, has just been unmasked by French police. The men who used the bureau all belonged to the lowest class, who, on account of military desertion or some other crime, could not obtain passports from the regular authorities. Some were Russians who were suspected by the French police, and found it convenient to leave the country. Others were Poles who wished to return home under false names, or to escape military service in America.

Two men who ran the bureau were Russians. One, Michel Zymansky, declared when he arrived that he was a Lieutenant in the Russian Army, who had been at one time Secretary to Kerensky. The second man, Kozlowski, he described as his secretary.

When the police arrested the two men they found a suitcase full of forged passports, with stamps exactly the same as those used by the Polish legation. Later Zymansky admitted that he had had passports printed in Belgium and had the stamp reproduced from an authentic one which the Polish legation had placed on his passport.

Suspicion was first aroused by the large number of Russians and Poles who were seen going to a hotel where the two men lived. Neighbors suspected that they were Bolshevist agents and warned the police. Zymansky now admits that he has been manufacturing forged passports for the past five months for his fellow countrymen, who paid from five hundred to one thousand francs.

The second man arrested, and woman, were used to get in touch with the Russian and Polish refugees who were anxious to clear out of the country. A close watch has been ordered at all ports on Poles and Russians leaving the country to see if any false passports can be identified.

"has been in direct contradiction of the conditions formulated in July and accepted without modification by the Russian Government. In its diplomatic support of Poland against Russia the British Government went so far as to threaten the Soviet Government with war and to mobilize the Baltic fleet. General Baron Wrangel was given an official reception on board the flagship of the British Black Sea fleet, while his representatives have been given facilities to purchase in England and send to South Russia all kinds of military supplies. They have been permitted to use the financial resources left in England by the Czarist Government."

The number of prisoners in British hands in Egypt, Persia, Constantinople and Batum, it is declared by M. Krassin, has not been communicated to the Soviet Government, which desires their return to Russia. Other charges are made by the Russian representative, who adds:

"In view of all these facts, the Russian Government is led to assume that the agreement of July cannot be considered as being in force, since its fundamental conditions are disregarded by the British Government."

Assertion was made by M. Krassin that the Soviet Government was in readiness to comply with conditions of the July agreement, and he proposed Great Britain should proclaim on Oct. 15 that all Russian prisoners in British hands would be free to return to Russia at fixed dates and by routes which were to be arranged by Maxim Litvinoff, Assistant Commissar of Foreign Affairs in the Soviet Government, whose stay in Norway and Denmark, he said, would be prolonged for negotiations to this end. M. Krassin promised the Bolshevist Government would use its friendly offices with the Government of Azerbaijan for the release of the British at Baku, whose retention and mistreatment were especially emphasized by Earl Curzon in his note. He declared, however, the matter must be decided by the Azerbaijan Government, and denied Earl Curzon's assertion that Russia had vetoed the release of the prisoners at Baku.

Regarding Russian prisoners under British control the Foreign Minister said in his note: "A very limited number of Russian subjects are in our hands, and Great Britain desires to get rid of them. They are being retained solely as a means of inducing the Bolsheviki to fulfill their undertaking."

It is noteworthy that a Stockholm telegram announces that Litvinoff and his party left there for Russia on Thursday, going by way of Reval.

Advice to a Man Who Doesn't Like Milk

There are more ways to use milk than any other food in the cook book.

YOU have probably noticed that more men are drinking milk, these days. Particularly noticeable in the lunch rooms and restaurants. Sometimes we hear a man say that milk doesn't agree with him. That it makes him bilious. Of course it does. He goes right along eating a full meal and then adds a pint of milk to it. He's over fed and blames the milk. Milk is a food, not simply a temperance drink. Leave out some of the fat, greasy things and stick to the milk. And watch the result.

If you happen to be one of those who thinks he doesn't like the taste of milk put in a pinch of salt. We know many milk drinkers who take it that way.

JOHN DAVID

STEIN-BLOCH SMART CLOTHES

Court Street at Montague, Brooklyn

John David Has Opened
His Brooklyn Establishment At Court Street, Corner Of Montague Street

THE PREVISION of this establishment first flashed into the mind of a Brooklyn man. Standing in our Manhattan Shop he exclaimed: "If only Brooklyn had a store as fine as this, it would save me many a trip!" To-day that vision comes true in mahogany and plate-glass.

As at Broadway and 32nd Street, so at Court and Montague Streets, we shall present the Smartest New York Fashions of the Day and Night. We shall strive to make it needless for any Brooklynite to leave Brooklyn to buy his Clothes, Furnishings or Hats. We shall offer only wares of unquestioned quality, and unimpeachable workmanship and unsurpassed style. We shall make it the cardinal point of our service that we are dissatisfied with the sale, unless you are satisfied with the purchase. We shall rest content with a modest price mark-up, because, we would rather acquire a reputation for Value, than amass a fortune from Profit.

With this conception of mercantile obligation and conscious that Brooklyn is going to weigh our Promises on the Scales of Fulfillment, we bespeak the patronage of Men of this Borough, asking that they judge us not by empty words, but full values.

evidence dug out disclosed that one coal-carrying railroad recently discharged a car distributer who had been taking graft to the extent of from $1,200 to $1,500 a day. A dealer who paid $1 in graft, it was explained, would add $2 or $3 to the price of his coal on the ground that the risk should be well paid for.

Witnesses testified that a profit of $250 a carload of coal was fair and that anything above this was unfair. Some of the dealers, it was learned, made thousands of dollars on a carload. One dealer, who held a bargeload of coal in the harbor waiting for the peak of high prices lost the entire load by spontaneous combustion. Other dealers, more fortunate, made as much as $8,000 on a single bargeload.

During the inquiry before the Grand Jury it was stated that speculators had 11,000 carloads of coal on the tracks at Philadelphia, Baltimore and Hampton Roads, and some of these cars, it was stated, are still lying idle. Information was obtained showing that no effort was made to release these cars, and a principal cause for the frequent cry of no cars was due to the fact that no effort was made to compel their movement and unloading.

Honest mine owners, it was stated, find it impossible to ship more than half the coal they can mine while those willing to pay largely for favors have the power of shipping coal or withholding it as they please. The result is that the market has passed into their control. In several instances coal was sold ten times before it reached the consumer with the result that the latter paid ten profits.

Representatives of the dealers who appeared before the Grand Jury were asked to stop the dishonest practices and they promised to do so. A representative of the Government said to them at various times:

"Why don't you try being honest for a little while and see how you come out? Maybe you will be able to earn money without indulging in any of the practices charged against you."

Several promised to try the honest plan and hope was expressed yesterday that these promises had been kept. One bit of testimony was to the effect that 164 carloads of coal were held on the tracks at Baltimore waiting until $19 a ton was paid for it. This did not happen for several weeks, and no complaint was made concerning the fact that the cars were lying idle during this time while there were frantic cries for cars all over the country.

Other testimony concerned the contracts made between coal producers and big buyers. These contracts called for coal from a certain specified mine, and absolved the mine owner from responsibility in case of car shortage or strikes. It is alleged that in a number of cases, where the owner had more than one mine, a strike would be fomented and the men would be transferred to another mine and rates, far above the contract price, would be demanded. It was also alleged that the prime reason for outlaw strikes of miners grew out of the fact that the men demanded more than $1.25 a ton for bringing out coal when they learned that the operator was getting far in excess of four dollars a ton for his coal.

It was also learned that if all of the mines produced as much coal as they were capable of, the price of coal would quickly get down to the old rate of about four dollars a ton to the big consumers.

RECORD CORN CROP IS NOW IN SIGHT

Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri Will Send Yield Ahead of Any in Country's History.

WHEAT THRASHINGS POOR

Flail Uncovers More Rust Than Looked For, but Other Food Crops Are Abundant.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The 1920 corn crop promises to be the largest in the history of the country by more than 90,000,000 bushels. A yield of 3,216,192,000 bushels, compared with the previous record production of 3,124,746,000 bushels in 1912, was forecast today by the Department of Agriculture from a condition of 89.1 on Oct. 1. The yield would exceed that of last year by practically 300,000,000 bushels. Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri will contribute practically all of the increase.

Spring wheat is thrashing out poorer than had been forecast; damage, principally from rust, had proved greater than anticipated. The yield was estimated today at 19,000,000 less than forecast a month ago, reducing the combined Winter and Spring wheat yield to 750,648,000 bushels—about 180,000,000 bushels below the big crop of last year. The Government forecast as to Spring wheat is 218,007,000 bushels, and all wheat 750,648,000 bushels.

Thrashings of oats indicated a yield of 1,444,362,000 bushels, almost 200,000,000 bushels more than last year's yield.

Although the tobacco crop showed a loss during September of 75,000,000 pounds in the expected yield, the forecast of 1,478,788,000 pounds is 89,000,000 pounds larger than last year's production.

A bountiful crop of potatoes also was forecast, the yield being estimated at 414,986,000 bushels, an increase of 2,053,000 bushels since Sept. 1.

The outlook for the various crops from the Oct. 1 conditions may be thus tabled:

Production figures on agricultural crops of the world, outside of the United States, assembled by the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome and given out today by the United States Department of Agriculture, show greatly increased yields for 1920 in almost every division. The 1920 wheat crop in countries of the Northern Hemisphere, including Bulgaria, Spain, British India, Finland, Sweden, Switzerland, Canada, Guatemala, Algeria, Egypt and Tunis, the Institute reports, is 1,046,670,000 bushels—101.6 per cent. of a five-year average production for the same countries, and 119.4 per cent. of 1919 production.

POSTAL SAVING PLAN CRITICISED BY KAHN

System Unnecessarily Harsh and Creates Impression of Unfairness, He Says.

SHOWS THE NEED OF THRIFT

In emphasizing yesterday the need for thrift and knowledge of banking methods, Otto H. Kahn of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., said the postal savings system tended to impress upon depositors a feeling of unfairness. Mr. Kahn was the principal witness before the United States Senate Committee on Reconstruction and Production, of which William M. Calder is Chairman. The Committee resumed its hearings at the Engineering Societies Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street.

Mr. Kahn thought the present postal savings system unnecessarily harsh and thoughtless, and while the rate of interest was normally 2 per cent. "nominally, as pointed out by Herbert Hoover, but a little more than 1 per cent. This was entirely inadequate.

"There is nothing more important than the practice of thrift," he said. "On the other hand there is scarcely any condition so unfortunate as the accumulative effect of habits of waste.

"The practice of thrift by a whole people found example in France. Without the Frenchman's ability to save, his country never could have rehabilitated itself. France could not have remained a great power without the thrift of her people.

"The present saving system of the Government tends to impress potential and actual depositors with unfairness. The Government should explain by extensive propaganda the seriousness of thrift and economy of spending. In a campaign to inculcate thrift there would result, in my opinion, not only an actual financial, but a very moral and educational benefit to the people and the country as a whole. I am convinced that private savings banks will not suffer by extension of the Postal Saving system.

"With regard to protecting citizens of small savings from reckless and dishonest promoters, the education propaganda would be of great benefit.

"With the coming of the opportunity for saving under Government protection and the payment by the Government of a high rate of interest free from hampering regulations, the confidence of the citizens in small savings will be established, business throughout the country will be aided and without doubt a great deal of money now hoarded and lost by unwise speculation will be put into circulation."

A statement was submitted by Eugene Meyer, Jr., former Managing Director of the War Finance Corporation, in which he said:

"Cursory investigation leads to the conclusion that excess profits tax collections in 1921, based upon the earnings of the year 1920, will be reduced at least from 25 to 50 per cent., and that the tax returns on income likewise cannot fail to be very materially reduced as a result of the reduced profits in business.

"In a statement on Sept. 23 the Secretary of the Treasury said: 'It is my theory that the revenue of the Government should be sufficient to care for ordinary disbursements, including the interest on indebtedness, a sinking fund and enough to provide for the retirement of the floating indebtedness by the end of another fiscal year.'

"Inasmuch as I stated to your committee when I appeared on Aug. 27 that the expansion of the postal savings system would, in my opinion, with proper organization and administration, gain savings deposits sufficient to pay off the floating indebtedness of the United States Government, now approximately $2,500,000,000, as evidenced by Treasury certificates, or at least materially reduce this amount of Treasury certificates, the statement of the Secretary of the Treasury bears directly on the question of the value of the expansion of the postal savings system, a question now being considered by your committee in connection with the reduction of the floating debt.

"There is hardly an industry in the country whose earnings will be as large this year as last year, and there are many industries which are paying heavy excess profits taxes this year on last year's profits which will pay none at all next year on this year's business."

Malcolm Kerlin, Director of Postal Savings, was heard by the committee.

Camel CIGARETTES

Greetings, Pete!

CAMEL CITY—U.S.A.

Here I am tonight in Winston-Salem where more tobacco is manufactured than in any other place on the face of the earth! And, W-S is some speed city, as well as the largest in North Carolina! They're rushing up a million dollar hotel, got a corking league ball team, regular skyscraper buildings and as much action as you'll look for in New York!

When I knocked off for the day, I buzzed around like a hungry bee in a buckwheat field—up and down long streets of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. factories!

As the Reynolds enterprise proved out more and more gigantic and I talked with more men about it, I got the real and true answer as to why Camels are so good and so entirely different from any other cigarette! I'll spin it for you, old top—listen:

Every man I talked with made the one big point that the officials and the more than 350 Reynolds foremen have an inborn knowledge of the tobacco business; that (putting it into a North Carolina expression) they were virtually "born and raised in a tobacco patch"; that they know tobacco; how to grade it, blend it, and how to manufacture and sell it!

And, what's most important of all, Pete, these Reynolds folks sure give men what they want—the best that can be produced! Why—Peter, it took months to perfect Camels Turkish and Domestic blend—and that refreshing flavor—and wonderful mild, mellow body—before a single Camel cigarette was sold! Guess that will repay your interest, old liberty bond!

Tomorrow, I'm going to meet some of the Reynolds folks. Got to see inside of those factories!

And, you know me!

Shorty.

FANS IN CLEVELAND EXUDE CONFIDENCE

SPEAKER'S FAMILY PRESENT

Mother and Brother of Indians' Manager Predict Ultimate Triumph—Tickets Hard to Get.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—This city is experiencing the first world's series thrill in its history tonight. The streets are jammed with visitors, many of them not knowing where they are going to sleep. The hotel lobbies are crowded with men who are talking of nothing but Cleveland's chances in the fourth game of the series with Brooklyn which is to be played here tomorrow.

There is more real baseball interest and enthusiasm in any one hotel lobby here than there was in Brooklyn and Manhattan put together. The demand for tickets far exceeds the supply, and the scalpers are getting anywhere from $15 to $35 a ticket for tomorrow's game alone.

Fans have flocked here from all over the Middle West, and there is none of the indifference toward the series which was evident during the first two games in Brooklyn.

Cleveland stands behind its ball club to a man. There is a "Stick to the Finish Club" here which has furnished noise and inspiration to the Indians all season. It was a small band of fans at first, but now everybody in the city is with it in spirit. There is supreme confidence in the air, and the fact that Brooklyn has won two games to a single victory for the Indians makes no difference in the optimistic attitude of the home folks.

Jim Dunn, the owner of the club; Tris Speaker, the manager; all the players, the bat boy and the trainer, all the hotel clerks and every last mother's son acts tonight as if the only thing that the Indians had to do was to jump in and take the next four games straight.

A Holiday Spirit.

The city is in holiday spirit and business cares and worries are going to be laid aside for the next few days. Never was a major league city so proud of a pennant winner as Cleveland is about the Indians.

Mayor Fitzgerald issued a proclamation on the home-coming of the Indians today from Brooklyn, and at 12 o'clock all the whistles blasted a scream of welcome, and all the bells in the city joined in the joyful din. There was a big crowd of fans at the station to welcome Speaker and his players, and along the streets the crowd gave the players a continuous cheer as they came from the station in automobiles.

Whereas in Brooklyn the series was regarded as just so many ball games, the world's series here has assumed the proportions of a great event. When Manager Speaker got in he hurried to one of the hotels to see his mother, who has come here from Hubbard City, Texas, to see her son's team play ball. One of Tris's younger brothers is along, too, and if Tris doesn't play tomorrow as he never played before he has a reckoning coming with his admiring parent. She says that Tris was a good boy and always obeyed her in his Texas days, and she expects that he will carry out her orders tomorrow. Those orders were for Cleveland to win.

All of the Brooklyn and Cleveland players went out to the baseball park this afternoon and tossed the ball around just enough to limber up.

The Pitching Problem.

Uncle Bobbie warmed up all his pitchers and after all the guesses about his nomination E. T. been sifted down it looked as if Pfeffer would try his luck against the American Leaguers. It is a certainty that Coveleskie, the taciturn Pole who thrust back the rush of the Dodgers' hitting fury in the opening game, will climb the pitching ridge for the Indians.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon the first fan was lined up in front of the ticket window, starting his long vigil for the sale of rush seats which starts tomorrow morning.

His name is Jim Strong and he came all the way from Seattle to see the game. He was armed with a heavy overcoat and the pockets were furnished with enough provisions to satisfy his appetite and thirst all night long. Late tonight hundreds had joined him. Before morning it was expected by the park attendants that thousands would be in the crowd.

The police and club officials are doing everything they can to squelch the speculators, but have met with little success. This afternoon the club cancelled an order for one of the boxes which had been sold to a well-known business man and had found its way into the hands of a scalper, who sold the pasteboards, four of them, for $125. These tickets will not be honored at the gate tomorrow. If the officials are able to identify any of the other tickets now in the hands of the scalpers they will not be honored at the turnstiles.

The Weather Ideal.

It is as warm here tonight as it was in August and the weather man says that Indian Summer has arrived, which ought to be just what the Indians desire. The weather is almost too good to be true.

Cleveland hospitality is to the visitors' liking, and although there are crowds everywhere, nobody is complaining. In all the shop windows the Indian banners catch the eye and the first question the clerks ask is not "What can I sell you today, mister?" but "Who do you think will win the series?"

The only source of the unbridled confidence of the Cleveland fans seems to be the fact that they play much better ball on their home grounds than they do abroad. Just whether this will make as much difference as the natives expect, is a question. If one listens to any of these Indian fans for two minutes the only conclusion one can come to is that it is all over but the shouting and that the Indians are going to tear the Brooklyn pitchers to shreds on their home playground.

Local enthusiasm has cast a glamor over the local gladiators, which covers up the true facts of the case. Experienced baseball men know that Robbie's pitchers now have a decided edge on the Cleveland pitching staff, and they expect that the Dodgers will hold on to this advantage. The Robins are rich in flingers and Robbie is in a position to use two or three flingers in every game, if necessary.

Bagby failed Speaker in his first tilt with the Robins and Cleveland has only Coveeskeskie and Mails to fall back on. Speaker, however, is confident that Bagby will still win in a game for him, as he is now familiar with the Brooklyn batsmen. Speaker also expects that Mails will turn in a victory if he faces Brooklyn on Sunday.

30,000 Are Expected.

The Cleveland Ball Park has been enlarged with additional stands in left and centre fields and it is expected that close to 30,000 spectators can be jammed in there tomorrow afternoon if standees are permitted in the stands.

Here is one place where no one is talking about the crooked work in last year's world's series. The only baseball crimes mentioned are stolen bases and the theft of tickets. Several forgeries of applications for seats have been unearthed by the police, and, it is believed, that these are the seats which are now being hawked around town by the speculators.

This evening a late arrival in town leaned over the cigar counter in one of the leading hotels and whispered to the clerk, "Where can I get a ticket for the series?"

The clerk was eagey and hesitated until the inquirer showed him a roll of bills. Then the clerk told him to come around tomorrow morning, go to the barber shop and see the barber at the third chair. They are pretty careful about speculating, but, if one can prove that he is not connected with the Police Department, it is not so difficult.

Probable Lineup of Teams In the Fourth Game Today

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—It was practically assured tonight that Tris Speaker, manager of the Cleveland Indians, would call upon his pitching ace, Stanley Coveleskie, to twirl against the Brooklyn Robins in tomorrow's all-important clash between the rival clubs. Coveleskie pitched the first game of the series last Tuesday and defeated the Dodgers. He proved very effective against the National Leaguers and local fans were pinning their hopes on him tonight. Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn club, was expected to use either Jeff Pfeffer or Al Mamaux. With a right-hander working W. Johnston, Jamieson and E. Smith are sure to play for Cleveland.

The batting order:

Wambsgans, 2b.	J. Johnston, 3b.
Speaker, cf.	Griffith, rf.
E. Smith, rf.	Wheat, lf.
Gardner, 3b.	Myers, cf.
W. Johnston, 1b.	Konetchy, 1b.

INDIAN FANS KEEP ODDS NEARLY EVEN

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—Abstruse calculations, involving logarithms, geometrical progression, conic sections and other branches of higher mathematics, seem to have convinced the baseball fans of Cleveland that the Indians have pretty close to an even chance to annex the major portion of the world's series cash. It appears, as nearly as one can judge through desultory chatting with local rooters, that with Coveleskie on the rubber tomorrow the fourth game of the series is merely a formality, and the count, therefore, is already two and two on games, to all intents and purposes. Now, with the games two each and the Indians playing on the home grounds, what's the answer? Ask the Cleveland fans; please ask them.

The above reasoning may not appear entirely cogent to any save the supporters of the American League aspirants for worldwide baseball honors. Nevertheless, it satisfies Cleveland this evening, and Cleveland is a city not easily satisfied. The money of the fans is within easy access of their finger tips, and they seem not one whit averse to producing slices of lucre in support of their arguments. The volubility of money is well known and the money of the Indians' rooters is quite eloquent this evening.

Of course, rooters do not bet with great thudding blows, as do gamblers. They bet generally with little $10 and $20 taps, and it is species of loyalty rather than the money lust that prompts their wagers. Nevertheless, the coin follows the convictions as the Constitution follows the flag, and the Cleveland fans are not betting practically even money tonight with any expectation of losing their tens and their fifties. They just naturally think that the Indians are going to win.

The prevailing odds, therefore, hereabouts on the series range pretty close to even money, which may seem a bit surprising in view of the treatment meted out to the Indians on Wednesday and Thursday by Messrs. Grimes and Smith. The prevailing figures at which simon-pure amateur bettors are placing money this evening in the hotels and other meeting places is 10 to 9, with Colonel Ebbets's pets in the position of honor. Even money, too, for small bets is not uncommon, but these wagers are so evidently tinged with sentimentality that they must be classed, from the local standpoint, as hopeful rather than hard headed.

Professional gamblers are not yet in evidence around the lobbies and cafés. They are betting, nevertheless, and in sums that appear substantial when compared with the rooters' wagers. The big money and the wise money seem to consider the ultimate outcome of the series how a 10-to-7 shot on the average. A wager of $5,000 to $3,500, with the Robins, of course, favored, is reported, the Brooklyn money coming from outside this city and being covered by a small local group. Cleveland supporters got somewhat the better of another wager of substantial size, placing their shekels at odds of 5 to 4. The figures given for this bet are $8,000 to $6,400.

WINS SECOND CUE VICTORY.

Servatius Defeats Clemens in Billiard Tourney by 150-115 Score.

Louis A. Servatius scored his second victory last night in the Class C balkline billiard tournament for the interborough championship of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players at the Rational Recreation Academy in Brooklyn. The veteran player defeated J. H. Clemens by a score of 150 to 115. It was the most decisive victory that has yet been scored in the event. All of the other scores have been much closer than last night's. The winner averaged 3 6-48 and the loser 2 21-47. Servatius's best run netted him 20 buttons and Clemens's high run was 15.

Experience was the deciding factor in the match. Clemens, who is a comparatively new comer in tournament play, blew up just when it seemed that he was on the high road toward scoring a victory. After a rather poor start Servatius finally found himself, and, once his stroke started working, he soon overhauled his opponent and pranced away to win by a big margin. It was Servatius's second victory, he having beaten Edward McGill earlier in the week.

Although Servatius's victory was decisive, the score of the match does not truly depict the skill with which Clemens played in the early innings of the game. He showed that he is a promising balkline billiardist, one who will have to be reckoned with when he acquires a little more tournament experience. He has a smooth, delicate stroke and has mastered the fundamentals of balkline play. His execution is good and his second ball play at times last night would have done credit to a player boasting a higher rating in the billiard world.

Clemens led for more than half the game. He got away to a good start and plied his cue to such purpose during the early innings that he managed to remain from four to eight points ahead of Servatius until the twenty-eighth inning, when the veteran managed to tie the score at 57 points each. In the following inning Servatius made his high run of the game, a cluster of 20, and forged into a commanding lead. From that time to the end of the game Servatius never again was in danger. He played consistently good billiards during the closing innings and had he attained his best form earlier in the game there is little doubt that he would have won by an even greater margin and that his average would have been much more impressive. He ran out the game in the forty-seventh inning with an unfinished run of 12.

Servatius has shown excellent form in the two games he has won in the current tournament, and now looms up as a possible winner of the title. He has been playing billiards off and on all Summer, and, as a result, he has attained his midseason form much earlier than most of the players who are pitted against him in the interborough clash.

ROBBIE SAYS TEAM WILL KEEP WINNING

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—"Good pitching will win ball games on any park, whether your team is at home or playing on the other fellow's field, so I can't see why we should not keep on winning here," said Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Brooklyn champions, tonight on the eve of the opening game at Cleveland.

"Naturally, the Indians will get more encouragement than they got in Brooklyn, and that often makes a lot of difference with a ball team. Then, again, they will be playing on a familiar field, which also helps.

"But if our pitching holds up to the standard that has been shown in the three games played so far, I don't see how they can beat us. Perhaps the pitching has been a bit better than any manager can expect to get, day after day, but I have as much confidence in my veteran pitchers who have not started a game as I have in those who have been called upon. I still have Pfeffer, Cadore and Mamaux at my call, and Mitchell also is a possibility. A left-hand spitballer would be a novelty to the Indians.

After Three Straight.

"We had a good workout this afternoon and the boys are all fit and full of confidence. Some of them seem to think that we will not play again in Brooklyn this year, the idea being that we will take the necessary three games out here. Perhaps we will, and we are going to try for three straight, but I have spread the word around that no one need believe that the series is a certainty for us, because we won two games in a row after dropping the first. Confidence is a great thing, if it stops at the right place. I don't want any of my players to get overconfident. We are playing a great team, one that will be dangerous until the last out is made in the last game of the series. I believe we can beat the Indians and will, but prefer to count the victories day by day instead of figuring in advance that we can't lose.

"I expect to use either Pfeffer or Cadore in the first game at Cleveland. I have no particular preference at this time. Marquard, of course, is ready, if I wanted to come back with a left hander, but my plan now is to use a right hander tomorrow and after tomorrow—Well, the pitching program will work out itself as the series goes on."

Speaker Still Hopeful.

"If any one thinks that we think we are beaten, they have another guess. We have just begun to fight," said Tris Speaker, manager of the Indians, today.

"I am not going to offer any alibis beyond the fact that, while we have batted hard, we have hit in hard luck. Brooklyn has been lucky enough to poke a few balls just outside of our reach. We have hit the ball harder than Brooklyn, but right at some one.

"I was told today that Brooklyn resorted to the old stuff of fixing the third-base line so that bunts would roll foul, that the box had been elevated and the diamond soaked. I don't take any stock in any of the rumors. We were beaten because we could not hit the ball safely. Brooklyn won because it was able to get a few lucky breaks.

"As far as we are concerned, the series is just starting. We have played three games in the home of our rivals. While I hoped to win two of them, I am not discouraged because we got but one. We shall make a much stronger showing at home.

"We are sure to bat better and our hits will be more timely. Our fast infield may bother the Brooklyn players considerably, while, on the other hand, we are used to it.

"I still think our pitching staff is as good as that owned by Brooklyn, perhaps not in numbers, but in quality. They say Brooklyn has seven first-stringers. Well, you can pitch only one at a time.

"The series will be even-up tomorrow night. From then on we shall be stepping along in front."

World's Series Echoes.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 8.—It may be said in starting that Cleveland is more aghast and agog than it is aglow as it prepares for the opening game of its first world's series. Those two defeats in Brooklyn took out a lot of the glow that otherwise would have been noticeable now.

One of the interested spectators when the Indians and Robins grapple at League Park tomorrow will be Tris Speaker's mother who has made the long trip from Hubbard City, Tex. She is in for a very happy afternoon listening to the applause which her son will receive from close to 28,000 fans.

The town is just bulging over its bounderies with umpires. The series is being cared for by O'Day, Klem, Connolly and Dinneen and one sees in the hotel lobbies Charley Rigler, Ollie Chill and Bill Evans. Whoever heard of seven umpires in the same city at one time!

Clarence Rowland, former manager of the Chicago White Sox, President George Grant of the Boston Braves and Business Manager Bobby Quinn of the St. Louis Browns are among the baseball men who are fans enough to follow the series from Brooklyn to Cleveland and back again if necessary.

The Brooklyn squad has its own mascot and bat boy for the series, and he is the happiest 10-year-old kid in Cleveland tonight. He is Richard Claude, who had acted in the same capacity for the Robins during the greater part of the season.

Speculators will be able to get more tickets here than in Brooklyn. The cards may be cut into four sections, and the seat number is on each one. That makes it easier to handle. In Brooklyn the number of the seat did not appear on the same coupon, but on the stub at the end of the ticket. It was impossible to separate the tickets for the different games.

The train bearing the Robins from New York was almost three hours late, and did not reach Cleveland until after 12 o'clock noon. While passing through Syracuse a fan scribbled in chalk along the side of the car: "Good luck, Brooklyn, we're all pulling for you."

Colonel T. L. Huston of the New York Yankees, who returned from the Chicago meeting in time to attend the third game at Brooklyn, made the trip to Cleveland to see the games here. Two carloads of New York newspaper men, chaperoned by Business Manager Charley McManus of the Yankees, rolled into Cleveland this afternoon.

As Cleveland views it, Stanley Coveleskie will take another fall out of the Robins tomorrow. Jim Bagby will make up for his defeat when he gets another chance on Sunday, and then Duster Mails will make it three straight for Cleveland. The program reads all right, but the Robins may upset it. This will be a blue town if the Indians take another trimming tomorrow.

There is no National Commission car, as has been the case in other series when a jump was made from one city to another. Ban Johnson got in this morning, and John Heydler is expected tomorrow. Garry Herrmann, who formerly completed the trio, arrived during the afternoon.

This being the first world's series in Cleveland the club officials are putting up a hard fight against scalpers. They have announced through the papers the cancellation of certain seats which were found in speculators' hands. The name of the person to whom the seats were sold also was announced. He will get his money back. Two seats at $4.40 each or $17.60 for the four games, were sold to a Columbus fan for $120. He will not be allowed to use them.

Nightingale, Hampshire Star, Soon to Enter West Virginia

DURHAM, N. H., Oct. 8.—Gordon T. Nightingale, star athlete of New Hampshire College, will soon enter the University of West Virginia, it was announced today. Nightingale won high honors for New Hampshire at the University of Pennsylvania relay carnival last Spring. He scored a brilliant victory in the three-mile run, defeating E. A. Montague, Oxford University star, by twenty-five yards in a gruelling contest.

ISSUES LICENSES TO BOX IN THIS STATE

Committee Grants 145 Permits at Weekly Meeting—1,500 Applications Received.

The ranks of registered boxers, managers, seconds, trainers and others connected with the sport under the Walker law, were swelled by an additional 145 licenses yesterday, when the Boxing Commission and License Committee issued a prepared statement of licenses granted at the latest meeting of the two bodies. The distribution of licenses disclosed in this latest collection of awards represents hours of Herculean labor by the Chairmen, Joseph Johnson and Larry Maguire, and their colleagues on the respective committees. At their annual meeting Thursday night the officials intrusted with safeguarding the sport were the task confronting them and left the work unfinished. Yesterday morning the session was resumed when the issuance of licenses was concluded for this week's session.

This latest list of registered exponents, followers, attendants and officials of the ring sport has been selected from among a veritable maelstrom of applications which have, figuratively, swamped the committees. Secretary Charles White, son of the late "Good Eye" Charlie White, in making the announcement yesterday, said that more than 1,500 applications have been submitted to the boxing and license committees and are engaging the attention of the officials in long drawn-out sessions. Everybody is working overtime at the headquarters and the officials are all prepared to continue until the task of formally installing the sport in all parts of the State is finaly completed.

Jim Corbett, former heavyweight champion of the world, will make his appearance as a jurist and don the judicial ermine, pugilistically speaking, inasmuch as he is among those who were yesterday granted judges' licenses.

Battling Levinsky, who is to engage Georgeen Carpentier in a twelve-round bout at the Jersey City baseball park next Tuesday night, is among the list of eighty boxers who were granted licenses. The blonde battler, in his application, registered from Philadelphia, when he is making his home in Gotham.

The complete list of licenses issued follows:

J. COHEN BILLIARD WINNER.

Defeats McDaniel in Well-Played Three-Cushion Match.

Two games were played last night at Joe Thum's Academy in the first annual amateur handicap three-cushion billiard tournament. J. Cohen defeated J. McDaniel in the first game by a score of 35 to 23 in 63 innings, and Frank Becker won the second game from Monroe Cohen, 35 to 30 in 90 innings. J. Cohen had a handicap of 5 points and McDaniel had 9, so that Cohen had to concede 4 points to his opponent. Becker is one of the scratch men in the tourney and Monroe Cohen had a handicap of 9 points.

The game between J. Cohen and J. McDaniel furnished some of the best carrom billiards that has been seen thus far this season. Not only was the game played in surprisingly short time, only sixty-three innings being consumed, but it was especially well played by the winner. J. Cohen outclassed his opponent and scored just as easy a victory as the score indicates.

Becker had his troubles defeating Monroe Cohen in the second game. He finally managed to win, by a margin of five points, but it was not until after the eighth inning that the scratch man was able to shake off his opponent.

No match will be played tonight, but on Monday night Mannie Letster and A. Surkein will meet.

TOMMY NOBLE GETS JUDGES' DECISION

Defeats Murray in Fifteen-Round Battle of Featherweights at Garden.

Tommy Noble of England won the judges' decision over Johnny Murray, Harlem featherweight, in fifteen rounds, in their bout at Madison Square Garden last night.

Noble, fighting at a steady pace from start to finish of the bout, clearly outpointed his opponent in nine of the fifteen rounds. Murray, fighting furiously in the closing three rounds, earned the honors for this part of the contest. The remaining three sessions were even.

A hair-raising finish, which he started in the thirteenth round and followed right through to the final clang of the gong, failed to turn the tide of battle in Murray's favor. The little Harlemite cut loose with all he had in that dying effort to avert disaster, but the attempt fell short. Murray lashed out viciously with rights and lefts to the Briton's jaw and stomach in a hurricane finish which brought the crowd to its feet yelling madly, but though bewildered by the storm of punches rained on him, Noble clung doggedly to his task and sought blindly ot return blow for blow to the final bell.

Noble kept Murray's head bobbing with a left hook, which he followed quickly with a right cross. In the seventh, tenth and eleventh rounds Noble shook his opponent with heavy rights to the jaw and forced Murray to the ropes with a steady attack. Murray was wild in his attempts at returns and missed many blows.

Through the twelfth round, Noble continued to force the fighting, belaboring Murray with an assortment of swings and hooks for which the Harlemite had no defense. In the thirteenth session, however, Murray assumed the aggressive, and, throwing caution to the winds, battered Noble through the last three rounds. Murray could not, however, overcome his rival's earlier advantage.

In the thirteenth round Murray fought like a tiger and forced his rival before him with a terrific assault. Rights and lefts bounded off Noble's jaw in quick succession until it seemed as though he must crumple under the attack. Forced to the ropes, Noble valiantly sought to retaliate, but his comparatively weak efforts were smothered under Murray's savage onslaught. Through the fourteenth and fifteenth rounds Murray continued his heavy bombardment in an effort to score a knockout, but Noble was able to withstand the attack to the final bell.

The judges' award was popular. Noble gained an insurmountable lead through his efforts in the early rounds. The Briton led in all except the second, fifth and sixth, which ended with honors even. Noble forced the fighting continually. At close quarters the Briton was outslugged, but Noble's work at long range overshadowed that of his opponent.

Panama Joe Gans won the colored middleweight championship when he gained the judges' decision over George Robinson, Boston negro, in their twelve-round bout. The verdict was unanimous, for Gans had the better of every round. The contest was the first between negroes here since boxing was revived under the Walker law.

Gans, black as night, displayed a brand of boxing which made him a pronounced favorite with the crowd. He outclassed his rival by a wide margin and was not forced to extend himself at any stage of the bout.

Although he was continually on the receiving end of an assortment of blows, Robinson held his feet. The nearest thing to a knockdown came in the eighth round, when, in a clinch on the ropes, Robinson was pushed into the press stand. The only damage was inflicted on a poor, harmless folding typewriter, which up to that stage had been doing exceptional work. When Robinson was hoisted back into the ring the machine was a sight to behold.

Gans displayed admirable cleverness and was fast with his hands and feet and carried the attack consistently to his rival throughout. Against his comparatively slow and cumbersome opponent Gans never wasted a blow. He seemed to know the exact landing spot for each punch and never uncorked a thump that was not well timed and directed.

In the first four rounds Gans made his rival look like a novice. The Boston negro, though enjoying an advantage of eight and one-quarter pounds in weight and with his reach as an additional asset, was bewildered with the speed and agility of his dark rival. Gans smothered Robinson with a volley of darting rights and lefts and easily avoided Robinson's attempts at retaliation. Robinson was forced to the ropes frequently before Gans's persistent attack and his efforts to get free were ludicrous.

In the second round Gans opened a cut over Robinson's right eye and the injury bled thereafter. Through the third, fourth and fifth rounds the milling lagged. Gans was inclined to take things easy and Robinson simply couldn't do anything. Referee Bill Brown was forced to warn the combatants of the consequences and repeatedly to caution the boxers.

In the closing two rounds Gans continued his battering without letup and when the final bell rang was crashing home rights and lefts to the face and body with withering effect.

A remarkable crowd turned out for the show, particularly in view of the fact that the card was a comparatively ordinary one. There were no really important bouts scheduled, but the big arena of fistiania was comfortably filled with a crowd of more than 6,000. The smaller priced seat sections were jammed, but there were yawning gaps in the boxes surrounding the arena.

Johnny Clinton, East Side boxer, and Dave Medar of the West Side, were the principals in the opening number, which went six rounds. The contest was declared a draw by the Judges, Joe Ruddy and Assemblyman Marty McCue.

Danny Frush, British featherweight, who has established a permanent home in Baltimore, punched the everlasting daylights out of Artie O'Leary, a local boxer, in the second bout of ten rounds. The final gong was sweet music to the ears of O'Leary, who was being rocked dizzy in a veritable sea of blows. The Judges were unanimous in their verdict favoring Frush, who gained the honors in every round.

DICK WILLIAMS LOST TO DAVIS CUP TEAM

Master of Doubles Play Prevented by Business from Going to New Zealand.

WASHBURN IS SUBSTITUTED

Tennis Observers Expect Johnston Will Now Be Paired with Tilden—Team to Leave Next Week.

Richard Norris Williams, 2d, former national lawn tennis champion, has resigned from the Davis Cup team, which will go to New Zealand in the attempt to bring the famous international trophy back to the United States. In the team which will leave New York on the 10,000-mile journey to the Antipodes next week, Watson M. Washburn will be the substitute for Williams. He is the No. 10 man on the ranking list.

It was explained that pressure of business due to the reorganization of an exporting firm, of which Williams is a member, is responsible for the retirement of the former national champion. He intimated to the officials three weeks ago that it might be necessary for him to abandon the four months' trip to New Zealand, although his final decision not to accompany William T. Tilden, 2d; William M. Johnston and Samuel Hardy, the captain, was not arrived at until yesterday.

The loss of Williams to the Davis Cup team is serious. According to the plans, Williams was to have played with Tilden in the doubles. Williams is, barring none, one of the greatest doubles players in the world. Many competent tennis observers believe that Tilden and Williams together would have been an unbeatable combination in doubles. In their last and only official appearance as a team, Tilden and Williams defeated the national champions, Johnston and Griffin, in the East-West matches at the Germantown Cricket Club in Philadelphia, in most decisive fashion. The margin was so great as to leave no doubt in the mind of any regularly accounted representative of the game as to who should represent America against Australasia.

Twice the Singles Champion.

Richard Norris Williams, 2d., has twice been the national tennis champion in singles. In 1914, he defeated the California comet, Maurice E. McLoughlin, after the latter had gained the most sensational victory in his career against Brookes and Wilding in the Davis Cup matches at the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills. McLoughlin was then at the top of the form that made him the most popular tennis champion in the history of the game in this country, and Williams's victory, unexpected as it was, was all the more to his credit. Nobody who saw it will ever forget that magnificent battle which Williams won by sheer merit, offering against the wicked service and smashing game of his opponent the only tactics that could possibly have won the decision. Williams hit the line, taking all kinds of chances on every occassion, but persisting in his victorious tactics of placing his whole reliable on the next point. On the next point he always won the decision, or practically always, by shaving the line. Williams won the national title again in 1916, and his opponent on that occasion was the man who, in the opinion of many, has been the greatest champion we have ever had, barring only Tilden and Whitman. That was William M. Johnston, the doughty and plucky Californian, capable at any time of upsetting the greatest player in the world.

Williams plays an erratic game. If he is able to raise it to its height, he is quite capable of competing on a plane of equality with Tilden and Johnston. His strokes are not so readily at command, however. Perfect conditions, mental and competitive, are required for Williams to show at his best. The psychological element enters more strongly into his play than into that of any of the men who have customarily been opposed to him.

Strongest in Doubles.

But in the doubles Williams has always excelled. His wonderful backhand shots shine even more in doubles than they do in singles. No one else can pull off quite the magnificent shots from the left side that Williams can. He does it with no effort and apparently for the fun of the thing, but almost invariably his strokes go through for passing shots, finding the opposing team completely unprepared. In combination with Tilden, Williams has been potentially the greatest doubles player in the world. He proved his merit, in fact, by winning the British championship with Garland in a contest in which Tilden and Johnston were his closest opponents.

The loss of Williams is serious. In the opinion of American observers of the sport no one can beat Tilden or Johnston in the singles. But Brookes and Patterson of Australia are quite capable of beating the two in doubles. As a team Tilden and Johnston shine individually, but not in the finished sort of teamwork necessary to beat a pair like Brookes and Patterson. Temperamentally, their games are unsuited the one to the other. But Tilden and Williams have teamed magnificently. What one has been unable to do the other has always been quite capable of performing. As a team they are capable of beating the world.

New Up to Tilden and Johnston.

Every follower of tennis in America will regret the loss of Williams. It means that everything will have to depend upon Tilden and Johnston, unaided. They are quite capable of winning the cup back, but the team loses one of its most powerful elements when Dick Williams is cut out of the picture.

The choice of Washburn to succeed Williams is entirely worthy of approbation. Washburn is especially successful in doubles. He is one of the brainiest players in the game and his coolness and gameness as well as his wonderful execution of his strokes count for even more in the doubles game than in singles. For four years Washburn has been ranked among the first ten players in the country in singles, and he was also the A. E. F. champion. His famous slap drive has beaten many players. But it is in the doubles, paired with a man so conversant with every angle of the game as Tilden, that he excels.

MISS STIRLING AND MRS. HURD IN FINAL

SETS NEW COURSE RECORD

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 8. — Miss Alexa Stirling of Atlanta will go after her third consecutive women's national golf championship at the Mayfield Club tomorrow morning, when she meets Mrs. J. V. Hurd of Pittsburgh, who, as Miss Dorothy Campbell, won two championships in England and repeated the same feat in the American field. A battle of champions, both Scotch, and one that should prove one of the best golf matches in the history of the women's championship is assured.

In winning her semi final match with Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck of Philadelphia today by 2 and 1, Miss Stirling played one of her greatest games, a round that brought to the surface every bit of championship ability she possesses. The score does not express adequately the calibre of golf she played.

For the first nine holes it appeared as though the champion would have a walkaway from her old rival. Miss Stirling surpassed her opponent in every way. She outdrove, outapproached and outputted Mrs. Vanderbeck and turned the corner 3 up, Mrs. Vanderbeck having won only one hole in the nine, that being the eighth, on which she got a birdie 2.

Then the brilliancy left the champion for a time, and settled about the Eastern home of Mrs. Vanderbeck. She had made bad approaches and topped iron shots on the first nine, her play in this particular sparkled on the inward nine. On seven greens Mrs. Vanderbeck chipped her ball within a few feet of the pin so that it was possible for her to put the ball down in one putt.

Match Squared on 15th.

Playing this remarkable brand of golf she evened the match on the fifteenth by taking the tenth, eleventh and fifteenth, the others being halved.

By forcing Mrs. Vanderbeck to play the odd by reason of longer drives Miss Stirling again took the lead. The break came on the sixteenth, when Mrs. Vanderbeck with a cuppy lie on her tee shot, took out her brassie, then she chose a spoon. But the result was unsatisfactory for she pulled her stroke, and the ball sliced into the rought to the right. The champion also played a spoon, but played the ball safe and short of the green, getting on in three while the Philadelphian from the rough needed four to reach the green. Each took one putt.

The end of the match came at the seventeenth when the champion was down in four. Both put their tee shots in the rough; Miss Stirling's ball lodging on a grassy mound back of the right trap, while Mrs. Vanderbeck had a hanging lie on the inside back of the sand hazard. The title holder chipped safely to the green but Mrs. Vanderbeck's effort was strong and the ball ran across the green.

Miss Stirling Outdrives Rival.

In every instance where distance was required, Miss Stirling was out in front, forcing Mrs. Vanderbeck to drive odd. Her drives were more typical of a man than of a slight girl, and there were few instances where she was forced to play out of the rough from the wood. Miss Stirling used thirty-four putts on the seventeen holes, Mrs. Vanderbeck in her marvelous work used only seventeen on the first nine and twelve on the second eight.

The cards:

Out—
Miss Stirling.....5 5 4 3 4 6 4 3 5—39
Mrs. Vanderbeck.5 6 6 4 5 6 4 2 5—43

In—
Miss Stirling.....6 6 2 3 5 5 4 4 5—41—80
Mrs. Vanderbeck.5 5 3 3 5 4 5 5 5—40—83

The match between Mrs. Hurd and Mrs. David Gaut of Memphis was constantly in doubt and not decided until Mrs. Hurd sank her putt on the eighteenth for a five while Mrs. Gaut took a six, bringing victory to the former by 2 up.

The first nine was turned with the players even, each having won three and halved three. Mrs. Hurd assumed the lead by winning the 450-yard tenth and the 525-yard eleventh, but lost the 230-yard twelfth when the Southerner dropped her ball, with one putt, after two shots to the green. The fourteenth was a hoodoo for Mrs. Hurd and she picked up her ball, after experiencing much trouble in the rough. After having halved the fifteenth and sixteenth the seventeenth presented Mrs. Gaut an opportunity to win. But she flubbed the chance when she took two to reach the green and halved the hole.

Mrs. Hurd's long game won her the match on the eighteenth, when she put her ball on the green in three and took two putts, while Mrs. Gaut used five to the green but was again down in one putt.

The cards:

Out—
Mrs. Hurd.....5 5 5 5 4 6 4 4 5—44
Mrs. Gaut.....5 5 6 4 5 7 4 3 5—44

In—
Mrs. Hurd.....6 6 4 3 7 5 5 4 5—44—88
Mrs. Gaut.....6 7 3 4 5 5 5 4 6—45—89

As a supplement to the championship a driving and approaching contest was held. The distance prize was won by Miss Dorothy Klotz of Chicago, who in her three tries, sent the ball for 230, 235 and 220 yards. Mrs. Vanderbeck was second. Miss Katherine Starbuck of Columbus, Ohio, State women's champion, and Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson of New York tied in the approaching contest with eight strokes each.

Lower Half.

Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, Pittsburgh, defeated Mrs. David Gaut, Memphis, 2 up.

MISS HIGHTON IS VICTOR.

English Golfer Makes Low Gross Score at Knickerbocker C. C.

Miss Sylvia Highton of Hackensack, the young English girl who came to America during the Summer of 1919 and proceeded to demonstrate that she is a coming golfer, yesterday carried off the low gross prize in the metropolitan women's one-day tournament held at the Knickerbocker Country Club, Tenafly, N. J. It is getting to be a habit with her. Last week she won similar honors in the affair held at the North Jersey Country Club.

Miss Highton had a gross of 99, the only player of the fifty entrants yesterday who was able to keep under a hundred over the beautiful Knickerbocker course. Her handicap is 7, and except for the rule against winning two prizes she would have carried home the low net trophy with her 92.

After playing in several minor tournaments last year in which she commanded attention because of her easy, graceful swing and her uncanny ability to smack down the fairway a long ball, Miss Highton went away to school. She spent most of the last Summer at sports and has only recently re-entered the field of tournament players in the local district. Great things are expected of her in the next few years.

A tie resulted for low net honors between Mrs. F. B. Ryan of Baltusrol and Mrs. L. C. Coe of the home club. Mrs. Ryan had 102, 5-07 and Mrs. Coe, 110, 18-97. In the division of prizes Mrs. Ryan took second and Mrs. Coe third.

Next best was the score of Mrs. Irving Brown of Haworth, 106, 7-99. Miss Julia Bradt, the Essex County star, had 109, 7-101 and four tied with net totals of 102. They were Mrs. Henry Blumenthal of Fairview with 108, 4-102, Mrs. F. Y. Kesler of Knickerbocker with 114, 12-102, Mrs. R. Bert Taylor of Hackensack with 109, 7-102 and Mrs. S. Prosser of Knickerbocker with 120, 18-102.

Sportsmen Display Interest In Negofol, French Stallion

Sportsmen have displayed much interest in the noted French stallion Negofol, purchased several months ago by Edward F. Simms and which arrived here a few days ago. He is stabled at Belmont Park. Negofol lost some flesh during his sea voyage, but otherwise is in fine condition and is an excellent specimen. He will soon be shipped to Mr. Simms's Xalapa Farm, in Kentucky, where he will be one of the several noted sires of an already highly successful breeding establishment.

REEKIE CONQUERS ARMOUR IN GOLF

Defeats French Champion, 4 and 3, in Semi-Finals of Tournament at Arcola.

The best links battle in the Arcola Country Club's invitation tournament was held yesterday altogether too prematurely. Those two native Scots, William M. Reekie of Upper Montclair, who has been in this country long enough to win the New Jersey amateur championship, met the newcomer of this season, Tommie D. Armour of Lothianburn, holder of the French amateur crown, in the semi-finals and defeated him, 4 and 3. It was a downright shame that the caprices of the draw couldn't have allowed this to be the final, which will be played today between Reekie and G. A. Hobart of the home club.

But, inasmuch as the clash of these two masters of golf had to come in the semi-final, the gallery critics at Arcola made an event of it. There was never any want of a sizable crowd behind the players, many to study Reekie's game, now becoming so well known to Metropolitan linksmen, and others to view for the first time the young Scottie, Armour.

Reekie took the lead on the first hole, and, not only was he never headed, but Armour was never able to square the match. Reekie went out in 36 and home in the same number, the bye holes having been played for purposes of comparing the medal scores. Armour lost several opportunities on the first nine and took 40, but he displayed a dazzling brilliancy on the incoming half, especially with his irons, and had a 34, two under par, for a total of 74.

Reekie Wins First Hole.

Reekie won the first hole, 4 to 5, when Armour's hands slipped playing his second shot, the ball curling off on a slice into rough. On the long fourth, Armour slammed his third into a trap at the side of the green, and lost this. He holed a twelve-foot putt to win the fifth with a birdie 3. Both took fives on the par 4 sixth, as the result of three putts each on this treacherous green.

The Jersey champion put his tee shot to the short seventh on the edge of the green and got his 3, but Armour's tee shot was wide to the right, and he needed 4. On the eighth Reekie came within a half inch of doing something no other player at Arcola had ever achieved. This hole is 515 yards long, with baffling contours of the ground. Not one golfer in a thousand gets home in two shots, yet Reekie did this. He not only gained the green, but his ball stopped rolling only three feet from the cup. With this glorious opportunity to sink a short putt for the first eagle ever made on this hole, the tap curled around the hole, missing it by a half inch. He took a birdie 4 instead. Reekie also won the ninth to become 4 up at the turn. Although he put his tee shot over this plateau green, he chipped back surely and got his 3. Armour's tee shot was on, but he wasted a putt.

The same occurrence gave Reekie a win, 3 to 4, on the eleventh. Armour taking three putts and he himself sinking a 20-footer after putting his tee shot across the green. The French titleholder carried off the twelfth, 3 to 4, as the result of chipping on with deadly accuracy, and then won the fourteenth with the greatest iron shot of the day. This hole is 160 yards long, calling for a full iron shot off the tee. Armour's ball stopped less than eighteen inches from the pin, and he made his birdie 2 without half trying. Reekie took a 4 here, but won the fifteenth, which ended the match, by sinking a twenty-five-footer for the birdie 3.

Their cards:

Out—
Reekie .....4 5 3 5 4 5 3 4 3—36
Armour .....5 5 3 6 3 5 4 4 5—40

In—
Reekie .....4 3 4 5 4 3 5 4 4—36—72
Armour .....4 4 3 5 2 4 4 4 4—34—74

Hobart Springs a Surprise.

Hobart sprang a surprise when he won his way into the final via the lower half of the bracket by defeating Charles P. Eddy, the Arcola tournament Chairman. Eddy won five of the first six holes and was 5 up going to the seventh, but Hobart started a rallying streak which never ended. Although not an active tournament player except at his own club, Hobart showed the stuff that makes great golfers and finally closed the match on the fifteenth, winning by 4 up and 3 to play.

Today's final match between Reekie and Hobart will be over the thirty-six-hole route.

Defeats Tableau d'Honneur in the Caledonian Handicap—Victory Pleases Players.

The Caledonian Handicap, a six-furlong sprint, which was the feature at Jamaica yesterday of the most ordinary card that has been offered at a local track in a long time, proved to be a good enough contest to make up in a large measure for the general lack of good performers. This developed into a two-horse race between Jefferson Livingston's Major Parke and F. Hutchings's Tableau d'Honneur, which drew away from the rest of the field and fought out every inch of the distance for a furlong through the stretch and provided just as many thrills as if they had been high class stake horses. Major Parke proved to be the gamer of the two, and in the last fifty feet poked his nose in front to gain the decision by a head, after it appeared as though he were beaten. Leading Star took third place, four lengths back of the winner.

Major Parke has given some good performances over the sprint distances, and yesterday he proved that he was courageous, for after yielding the lead slightly he responded again to hard urging by Jockey Kummer and made the effort which won for him. Meantime Buddy Ensor was making a strong finish with Tableau d'Honneur, and his jockeyship alone came near winning for him.

The victory of Major Parke was particularly agreeable to the players, as the Livingston horse was a well played favorite and was also the first public choice to win during the day. Three favorites had been toppled over in the earlier events, and so when Major Parke got his head over the line he received an outburst of cheers.

Gains a Length Early.

Major Parke broke in front of his field and gained a lead of a length in the first furlong, but Tableau d'Honneur quickly joined him and the two raced head and head around the turn and into the stretch, the Livingston horse always maintaining a slight advantage. The fast pace carried them away from the others. At the head of the stretch Major Parke drew out to a lead of nearly a length, but was no more than straightened out when his rival was at his neck again and Kummer was forced to go to the whip. Tableau d'Honneur got his nose in front at the sixteenth pole and appeared to have the race won, as the Livingston horse seemed to be tiring, but another lash of the whip sent Major Parke on to another effort and the victory. Different Eyes, which had considerable support, showed speed for half a mile and then quit badly. The others never came close up and Crystal Ford refused to extend himself at all.

The patrons were treated to some surprises in the earlier numbers. The five and a half furlong dash for two-year-olds, which opened the card, resulted in a victory for C. A. Applegate's Tout Or, which scored easily at 8 to 1, while J. W. McClelland's Mlle. Fleurs, the only horse in the race which was in demand and which went to the post an even money favorite, finished far back in the ruck. Segurola was second and Lady Stella third.

Tout Or rushed away from the barrier and gained a lead of two lengths in the run through the backstretch. He ran to much better form than he has displayed recently and was never seriously threatened. Mlle. Fleurs was pinched off right after the start and was knocked back when Robinson attempted to get through, going through the backstretch. This knocked the filly out of the race and she had no chance. Once clear, she closed some ground, but Robinson did not urge her at the end.

The Day's Real Upset.

The real upset came in the second race, when P. S. P. Randolph's Titanium romped home an easy winner in a mile and a sixteenth test at 20 to 1, finishing three lengths in front of The Wit, which had been made an odds-on choice. L'Enjoleur was third. Titanium had all the speed in the race and, forcing a fast pace, had his field beaten at the head of the stretch. From there to the end he drew away easily and had three lengths to spare at the wire. Ensor permitted The Wit to drop too far out of it in the early running, and when it came to closing the gap his mount could not make up the ground. The Wit made a strong effort in the stretch run, but succeeded only in taking the place by two lengths.

Another favorite went down to defeat in the third race, when Lovely failed to finish in the money after going to the post a 4 to 5 choice. The race was won by Keziah, which got up in the stretch drive to win by a head from Sir Clarence with Gueland third. Lovely and Gueland were used up setting the early pace and tired badly in the stretch run.

George Peterson's George Boves accounted for the final race, a five and a half-furlong dash for two-year-olds. He led home Ross R. and Omar K. among others, and won easily after leading all the way.

Tommy Murphy Leaves Bed To Attend Lexington Meet

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Tommy Murphy, veteran Grand Circuit driver, early this afternoon announced that he would leave St. Joseph's Hospital tonight and go to Lexington, Ky., to attend the Grand Circuit stewards' session and racing meeting. Murphy's statement followed a long session with physicians, who tried in vain to convince him that he must stay in the hospital for at least another month. He was out yesterday for the first time, and on his return to the hospital his temperature was found to have risen to 102.2 degrees. For the last two weeks, however, his condition had greatly improved.

SEVEN FAVORITES BEATEN AT LAUREL

Form Players Experience Bad Day at Maryland Track When All Choices Lose.

LAUREL, Md., Oct. 8.—Form players experienced a very bad day at the Laurel course this afternoon when all seven favorites went down to defeat in a series of upsets that came with monotonous regularity. This, naturally, resulted in a number of long shots being returned winners.

One of the best played favorites of the day to meet defeat was J. W. McClelland's Toujours in the one-mile test for fillies and mares. This was won by Walter J. Salmon's Betty J., which got up in the stretch drive and just lasted long enough to win by a nose from Rubidium. The favorite was third, Betty J. was outrun for the first half, but moved up and came around the field at the stretch. She raced Toujours to submission and got to the front, but was tiring badly and just lasted long enough. Rubidium closed with a rush and would have won in another stride. The winner paid $13.90 for a $2 ticket.

CLINTONVILLE IS WINNER.

Defeats Marjorie Hynes by a Nose in Latonia Feature Race.

LATONIA, Ky., Oct. 8.—Favored by the weight and the distance, S. K. Nichols's Clintonville gained a close decision at Latonia this afternoon in the six-furlong dash for fillies and mares, which was the feature of the program. She won by a nose from Marjorie Hynes, getting up in the last few strides to get the verdict. Lady Fair Play was third among the six starters, but was badly beaten and finished eight lengths back of the winner.

Clintonville ran to her best form today, and showed excellent speed for the entire distance. She kept close to Marjorie Hynes, which set the pace, and finally raced the latter into submission in the final drive. Marjorie Hynes seemed to tire right at the end. The others were badly outrun and were never contenders at any stage of the contest. The victory of Clintonville was something of a surprise after her recent poor showing. This was indicated when the mutuels paid $27.30 to holders of $2 tickets.

GREAT RACERS SHOW SPEED IN WORKOUTS

Special to The New York Times.

WINDSOR, Ont., Oct. 8.—The champion racers, Man o' War and Sir Barton, that are to meet here on Tuesday in their now far-famed match race at a mile and a quarter for a purse of $75,000, began their final preparations for the test at Kenilworth Park this morning. Each took a short but fast sprint, which showed that they had their speed after the long journey.

Man o' War was asked to go only a quarter of a mile, but he did that short distance in very fast time, stepping it in 0:22 1-5. It was enough to show that he had all his speed. Sir Barton went a half mile in 0:49 and, like his younger rival, indicated that he was in tiptop shape and had all his early foot. His fractional time was 0:24 3-5, 0:36 3-5, 0:49.

Both trainers, Louis Feustel and H. G. Bedwell, plan to give their horses a final trial tomorrow morning. These trials will probably be at a mile or more, and each of the champions will be sent along at a good clip. After that a short dash Sunday morning will wind up the training which the horses have undergone for this great race which is to decide the American championship among thoroughbreds.

Horses Are Guarded.

Ever since Man o' War and Sir Barton arrived here thousands have tried to get to see them and have been disappointed. The management of the Kenilworth Park track has taken special care to guard the racers. Both horses will be watched every minute of the day and night until they go to the post on Tuesday. This precaution would have been taken anyway, it was explained, because of the size of the purse and the importance of the race, but it was deemed all the more necessary because of the stories that grew out of the recent baseball investigation at Chicago. It is intended to frustrate any plan gamblers might have to injure or otherwise hurt the chances of one of the horses in the race.

Because of this heavy guard many admirers of the horses were turned back when they attempted to go to the palatial stables where the rival champions are quartered. Many of these persons had started out early in the morning in the hope of seeing the horses in their workouts, only to find that all entrance to the track was barred.

The coming race has been the only subject of conversation among racing folk here for days and as the race draws nearer the opinion grows stronger that Man o' War will be returned the winner. There is no way, of course, of estimating what the odds will be in the mutuel machines, that depending entirely on the public play, but already it has been ventured that Man o' War will be no better than 2 to 5.

It is even doubtful if sentiment will play much of a part in the betting. Sentiment naturally favors Sir Barton because he is owned by Commander Ross, a Canadian sportsman whose many friends throughout the Dominion would like to see him successful. However, it is generally believed that Man o' War will prove too much for the Ross colt.

Sir Barton in Fine Form.

Trainer H. G. Bedwell has refused to make any predictions on the race, but he declared today that Sir Barton was as fit as he ever was in his life and that there would be no excuses for him. He said the colt had done everything asked of him, had responded to the rigorous siege of training remarkably well and that he would be ready to run the race of his life.

"Whether he can beat Man o' War," said Bedwell, "remains to be determined Tuesday. I am now only concerned in getting the horse into the best possible condition."

Louis Feustel has had little to say about Man o' War, for it was not necessary to say much. His short dash this morning was evidence that he had suffered none from his trip. He ran just far enough to get his legs to moving freely. His final trial will show his exact condition, though it may not be an exceptionally fast workout.

Racing men from all parts of the United States and Canada will be present for the big race. Requests for boxes are pouring in. Among noted horsemen who will be here are Major August Belmont, who bred Man o' War, and John E. Madden, who bred Sir Barton. Others who have asked for reservations are W. R. Coe, R. T. Wilson, Jr.; Lawrence Waterbury, M. L. Schwartz, Walter J. Salmon and Joseph E. Widener. Commander Ross will entertain a number of friends who will come here on a special train from Toronto. Samuel D. Riddle will have a party of friends with him on his special car, which will arrive Monday.

GRIDIRON SEASON ON IN EARNEST TODAY

COLUMBIA MEETS N. Y. U.

The gridiron at State College will be the scene today of the 1920 season's first football clash between two of the leading elevens. While some of the other big fellows are still unlimbering at the expense of some of the weaker elevens, Penn. State, leading candidate last year for honors in the first flight, together with Dartmouth, the powerful and always dangerous team from Hanover, which was tied for first honors last season, will be coming to grips in a battle that will be the real inaugural of the current season.

From this prophetic angle, Penn State has a slight edge on its opponent from New Hampshire. Leaving aside the always doubtful criterion of comparative scores, it is a hard and unescapable fact that Dartmouth is not ready for such a big game. Captain Robertson will be missing from the line-up on account of injuries, and joining him on the sidelines will be Shelburne, the hard-hitting fullback, and Brown and Allen, both linemen. This quartet is one that Dartmouth can ill-afford to dispense with, even with a weaker opponent than Hugo Bezdek's warriors promise to be. On the other hand, Penn State will be in full strength. It defeated Gettysburg last Saturday, 15 to 6, while Dartmouth was making 31 points against Norwich, but Bezdek was fortunate enough to escape with his Varsity line-up intact. Dartmouth, however, is buoyed up by its last year's victory over the lads from Centre County, who succumbed by a score of 19 to 18.

Two other leading elevens will clash at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, where Glenn Warner will send his Panthers against West Virginia. The latter is in hot pursuit of intercollegiate honors this season, although it was rather sobered last Saturday when it was held to a tie by Lehigh. The Mountaineers were easy for Pitt last year, being on the short end of a 26-0 verdict, but they are always menacing and may upset the closest calculations of the foxy Warner. At all events, the tussle promises to give the experts something of a line on the merits of two of the leaders in intercollegiate football.

Columbia-N. Y. U. Encounter.

Here in New York, interest will centre in the Columbia-New York University encounter on South Field. Few games have more real, honest-to-goodness rivalry attached to them than this annual contest, which in the past has gone far in determining the championship of the city. Both teams are confident of victory, and there the matter will rest until the referee has blown the fatal whistle.

Stevens and Fordham will not play at home this afternoon, leaving the metropolitan field open to Columbia and N. Y. U. On the gridiron of Boston College, however, Fordham will be facing its first real test of the season and will be extended, indeed, to emerge with a triumph. Stevens, in the meantime, will be tackling Haverford on the latter's field and priming itself for another possible romp to metropolitan honors, which the Hoboken eleven gained last year by defeating both Columbia and N. Y. U.

Harvard's myriad of supporters are likely to look with mingled feelings on the game scheduled for today on Soldiers Field. The Crimson's opponents will be none other than Valparaiso University, from the wilds of Indiana. The date had originally been awarded to Notre Dame, but the Faculty of the Catholic institution put its foot down on the long trip, especially in view of the fact that Notre Dame was to come East later to play at West Point. So Valparaiso was substituted on the Harvard schedule. It is understanding, it is said, that the Hoosiers had taken the measurements of Notre Dame last season. Further investigation disclosed that it was merely the Notre Dame freshmen that Valparaiso had conquered, and this resulted in some talk at Cambridge of cancelling the game. Valparaiso, however, was loud in its promises that stiff enough opposition would be provided. Whether or not the promise will be lived up to will be determined this afternoon. Harvard's crushing victory over Maine last week, however, should give the mid-Westerners much food for thought.

Both Princeton and Yale will meet teams from the sunny South. The Tigers will engage Maryland at Princeton, and should have nothing more exciting than a practice session. Yale's opponent at New Haven will be North Carolina, which should not be confused with North Carolina State, which trounced the Navy last week. The Elis are topheavy favorites, particularly following their impressive triumph against Carnegie Tech. last Saturday.

Swarthmore to Battle Penn.

Swarthmore, which scored a touchdown against Princeton a week ago, will meet John Heisman's Penn. eleven on Franklin Field in a game that should result in aggressive and colorful football. Penn showed little to become enthusiastic about in its encounter with Bucknell last week and will have its work cut out for it against Swarthmore, which is heavy in line and backfield and possessed of a good defense. At Providence, Brown will not be greatly troubled with Maine, which was easy for Harvard.

The Navy, licking its wounds after a beating from North Carolina State, will clash with Lafayette, the conqueror of Lehigh in the annual battle between the two last year. Lafayette will be strong enough to test Folwell's machine to the fullest, and another downfall would not be an exact upsetting of the dope. The Army should make hay at the expense of Middlebury, which will be the attraction at West Point.

Other interesting battles will be the Syracuse-Johns Hopkins tilt at Syracuse, Lehigh against Rutgers at South Bethlehem, Georgia Tech against Davidson at Atlanta, and Centre against Howard at Danville. Two conference games will be held in the middle West—Northwestern against Minnesota at Evanstown, and Chicago against Purdue in the Windy City. Other Western and Southern elevens will be busy.

TWO CONFERENCE GAMES FOR TODAY

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Every Western Conference football team will get into action tomorrow, but in only two instances will Conference elevens meet each other. Northwestern will play Minnesota at Evanston, and Chicago will tackle its traditional nemesis, Purdue, here.

With Indiana already virtually eliminated from the championship race through its defeat by Iowa last Saturday, it is considered probable that the list of "also rans" will be increased to three through tomorrow's contest, for defeat for any eleven will make its championship possibilities very slight.

The Minnesota-Northwestern game probably will attract most attention, for it is expected to show definitely how strong an eleven the Gophers have in the field this year. Northwestern's team, although somewhat discouraged by its poor showing against Knox College last week, is said to be in perfect condition, while Minnesota today reported three of its men out of the game. Douglas Larson, centre, was disqualified for failure in his classes and Tolberg and Ruben were said to be too badly injured to play tomorrow.

Purdue will have the advantage of having played one hard game when it lines up against Chicago, but the Maroons have been well developed by intensive scrimmage.

Michigan will meet Case, and Illinois will open its season against Drake at Urbana. Wisconsin will tackle the Michigan Aggies, and Iowa, conqueror of Indiana, will face a comparatively easy foe in Cornell College. Ohio State, runner-up in last season's race, also has a foe considered weak in Oberlin. Indiana will play against Mississippi A. and M.

COLUMBIA CUBS BEATEN.

A fumbled punt in the shadow of the goal posts gave Kent School a 7-6 victory over the Columbia freshmen in a close battle on South Field yesterday afternoon. When the mishap occurred the cubs were leading, 6 to 0, having shoved over a touchdown in the first period. In the next quarter, however, after being held for downs, the visitors kicked to the Columbia goal, where the ball rolled along the line. Dillingham, the yearling quarter back, in attempting to retrieve the truant sphere fumbled and it rolled across the goal line, where Noble fell on it for a touchdown. Bergen kicked the goal that gave the visitors a 7-6 victory.

The freshmen were superior on the offense, but marred their play by fumbling at critical moments. They had the ball in their opponent's territory during most of the game and seemed headed to an easy success when Dillingham's fumble occurred. The yearlings scored their touchdown after two forward passes and a series of line bucks had taken the ball to the 10-yard line. From this point Dillingham plunged over for a touchdown. The try at goal was missed.

VALPARAISO MAY PLAY RADICAL GAME

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 8.—In anticipation of having to meet a lot of radical football in the game with Valparaiso tomorrow the Harvard Varsity eleven has been put through a preparation course for the last few days. Special workouts for so early a game are unusual, but Fisher is eager to see his men make an encouraging showing and has done his best to show his men enough of the Westerners' style of play so they will not be surprised. The team tomorrow will be handicapped by the absence from the rush line of Kim Tolbert, the sturdiest of the tackles. But Hubbard is expected to be in the game as one tackle, while in the backfield Fisher will use the strongest combination he has on hand.

Captain Horween, Owen and Humphrey will start in the game, with Johnson at quarter. On the line the ends will be Gaston and Kane, tackles, Hubbard and Faxon; guards, Woods and Brown. Havemeyer will play centre. Tierney, however, is sure to have a chance to play at centre sometime in the game. And with the first string line Buell, who is running Johnson closest for the quarterback job, is likely also to get in before there is much of a rush of substitutes. The coaches had been hoping to use Roscoe Pitts, who at the start of the season was banked on for kicking, but he is not yet in shape, while Sedgwick, who needs Varsity work at tackle, is still tender. If Sedgwick plays at all, it will be only for a short time.

The team has been working hard on attack this week and doubtless will vary its play against Valparaiso, although having to date shown only the simplest of old plays. On defense, against spread interference and forward passes, the Crimson has also spent much time in preparation for tomorrow. The Indiana team will be nearly as heavy as Harvard and is confident it will be able to make a showing. If the game is close the Crimson coaches will play the first team for three quarters at least, except for possible shifts at quarterback and for Captain Horween, who until today seemed likely to be on the sidelines.

PRINCETON'S CAPTAIN OUT.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 8.—When Princeton meets the University of Maryland tomorrow the Tiger will go into the fray minus most of its first string linemen. Captain Callahan, Dickinson, Rutan and Witter will all be on the sidelines with minor injuries. The absence of the first three men will mean a heavy loss of power in Princeton's defense, for Roper has been handicapped from the start by a lack of substitute linemen of 'Varsity calibre.

The 'Varsity team went through a signal drill today, and Roper was pleased with the snap exhibited in this session. The drill was chiefly in plays of the open variety, upon which Princeton is relying this season more than in former years. Forward passing received attention both on the offensive and the defensive, and at the close of the afternoon's work Roper lined up his 'Varsity against the scrubs and walked the two teams through plays in a short dummy scrimmage. The outstanding feature of this entertainment came when Johnny Poe, at quarter on the third team, emulated his famous forebear by contributing the only touchdown of the day on a 30-yard end run.

Roper announced at the close of the practice that he would start Thomas in Callahan's place at centre. This will be the blond veteran's first appearance at the position which he played last season. Towers, who played well in the Swarthmore game, will play left guard, and Speers, the hammer-throw champion, will get a chance at this position on the other side of the line. Hooper and Reckers are Roper's first choice for tackles, and Raymond and Davis have again been selected as ends.

Despite the fact that Lourie has been appearing but rarely in the scrimmages this week, he will start the play tomorrow. Murrey and Gilroy have been selected for halfback posts, and Hank Garrity will make his first appearance of the season at fullback. Garrity reported late because of illness but he has been rapidly rounding into condition during the last week, and his showing in the scrimmages makes the coaching staff believe that he is up to last year's form.

PENN STATE MEETS GREEN.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Oct. 8.—The Penn State and Dartmouth elevens both went through light workouts this afternoon, closing their preparation for the game tomorrow. At a huge student mass meeting held tonight speeches were made by Coach Bezdek and members of the Penn State team, and this was followed by a parade about town in which more than 1,000 alumni, who are here for their annual Home Coming Day, joined.

Following the game tomorrow Governor William C. Sproul will be the guest of honor at a dinner commemorating the time when, as a member of the Swarthmore football team, he saw State College for the first time. The game was played in 1889 and Swarthmore was defeated. The Governor will attend the game tomorrow afternoon.

While neither coach has announced his lineup for tomorrow, the personnel of the teams will probably be as follows: Penn State—Ends, Brown and McCollum; tackles, Beck and Schuster; guards, Griffiths and Hess; centre, Bentz; quarter back, Killinger; halfbacks, Way and Haines; fullback, Snell. Dartmouth—Ends, Jordan and Threshie; tackles, Sonnenberg and Neddlinger; guards, Moore and Crisp; centre, Cunningham; quarter back, Bower; halfbacks, Robertson and Holbrook; fullback, Shelburne.

WEST VIRGINIA TO FIGHT.

Special to The New York Times.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 8.—Twenty-five players composed the West Virginia football squad which left here this afternoon for the games with Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh tomorrow. Quinlan accompanied the squad, but will not be in uniform, Nicholson taking his place.

It is not generally felt that West Virginia can win from Pitt, but a great struggle is assured. West Virginia will line up with Captain Lentz and Beck as halfbacks, Martin, fullback; Dawson, quarterback; Hardick and Meredith, ends; Johnson and Quinland, tackles; Kay and Setron, guards, and Emeweller, centre.

CORNELL LOOKS BETTER.

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 8.—The Cornell football team will play its second game of the season when it meets St. Bonaventure tomorrow. Another week's hard practice behind closed gates has overcome some of the grude playing that characterized the Ithacans' work in the game with Rochester. The development of an open style of attack is also looked for, although Coach Dobie keeps his plans quiet.

It would not be surprising to see Munns and Gouinlock, who played the last period again Rochester, at ends, although Finn and Wagner are expected to get in, too. Dodge and Kay continue to show the best form at tackles, but Rollo, pitcher on last year's freshman team, also looks good for a green man, and Knauss, of last year's 'Varsity, is again in shape. Goetz and Miner seem to lead at guard, although Pendelton may also get a chance in the original lineup tomorrow. Horrell and Brayton are the leading centres and Dobie has not indicated which one will have the call.

The backfield is likely to be much the same as last week with Carey at quarterback, Bosworth and Mayer at halfbacks and Jewett at fullback. The showing of Kay is winning attention, while Dunleavy, who has been out with injuries for a month, is also returning to form.

ARMY WILL USE BEST TEAM.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 8.—The Army's drill today consisted of a running through of signals and a rehearsal of the plays which will be used against Middlebury tomorrow. Although the Cadets expect to win from the Vermonters, the coaches will use their best men at the outset of the game. Middlebury played a tie game with Springfield a week ago, and this has set the Army mentors thinking.

COLUMBIA TO MEET N. Y. U. ON GRIDIRON

Columbia and New York University, the opponents in the first of New York's big football games today, had drawn up their battle lines last night and were ready for the whistle that will send them off in their annual gridiron clash. Coming so early in the current season, there was more than the usual amount of speculation as to the outcome. Almost nothing is known of N. Y. U.'s strength, the Violet having yet to show its wares in public, and Columbia has disclosed little more of its real ability.

The attendance records at least are certain to topple this afternoon. Athletic officials at Columbia said last night that the supply of pasteboards had been practically exhausted, although there will be still a few seats to be purchased at the ticket windows before the game. The late rush of fans, it is predicted, will result in hundreds standing around the playing field to watch the annual tussle. Play is scheduled to start at 2:30.

Even money was offered last night on the outcome. James W. Ball & Co., 67 Exchange Place, reported that it was offering even money that Columbia will win, but that New York University supporters were shy with their money. Columbia is placing its chief reliance on the shoulders of Coach Buck O'Neill, who has driven the Blue and White eleven hard all week and will send his team into the game with practically all of his 'Varsity players in top form. Although N. Y. U. has won three out of the last five battles between the two rivals, Columbia undergraduates believe that O'Neill will be able to turn the tide with his first Columbia eleven.

Calloway, the negro guard, will start at left guard for Columbia in place of the veteran Hinch, and Burtt, the speedy halfback, will displace Thornton at left halfback. These two alterations will be the only changes in the Morningside lineup. New York University will also present its full strength, although the Violet will be severely handicapped by the loss by graduation of Howard Cann, who played such havoc with Columbia in last year's game.

Pullern	L. E.	Adams
Modarelli	L. T.	Caddell
Galloway	L. G.	Harrigan
Johnson	C.	Erbe
Waldor	R. G.	Edgar
Scovil	R. T.	Pitt
Foregath	R. E.	Levin
Harris	Q. B.	Bourignon
Burtt	L. H. B.	Sherry
Canspary	R. H. B.	Weinheimer

N. Y. U. IS CONFIDENT.

Violet Eleven in Good Shape for a Stiff Battle with Columbia.

Coach Gargan put the New York University football team through the final workout yesterday in preparation for their game today with the Columbia eleven and expressed his satisfaction at the condition of the men. The students at the Violet college are very optimistic as to the outcome of the contest with their old rivals and look for an exciting battle.

Yesterday's workout consisted entirely of signal drill and was quite short. This was the first day of the week that the team has not had at least an hour's scrimmage, so the players were glad to lay off. All of the work for the last three days has been conducted behind closed gates, so little is known of the methods to be used today.

A few changes have been made in the lineup by the Violent mentor, Horrigan, the veteran guard, will probably be seen at the left guard position. This gives the uptown team added weight in the centre of the line, as well as one more seasoned player.

In the backfield will probably be two men who did not get into last week's game. Ryan, who was out of last Saturday's contest with a bad shoulder, will be at fullback. The other man is Sherry, a fast halfback, who has shown up well in practice. With these two men available, Gargan has a wealth of backfield material and will be able to use two distinct sets of backs if necessary.

Adams will be at his regular place at left end, but on the other wing will be Levin, last year's diminutive player. Bates, who filled this place last week, has been out with a bad elbow, but is now in shape and may get into the play.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 8.—Yale will try out a large number of promising substitute players tomorrow against the light University of North Carolina eleven. Dilworth will be started at right end, Into at right tackle, Cruikshank at left guard, French at right halfback and Strum at fullback. Of those players French has had some previous Yale 'Varsity experience, but the others are third string selections.

Dilworth has been given his opportunity because of the unsatisfactory situation at end. Half a dozen candidates are about evenly balanced in their ability for the job, and Walker and Calhoun probably will also get into the play tomorrow in that position. Into will have his tryout because Walker has been shifted to end, and MacKay, the former freshman guard, who has been at tackle the last two weeks, is slightly out of condition. Into is a six-footer who weighs nearly 200 pounds, but he is very fast. Phil Cruikshank is a player with only freshman experience, but his chance has come because Acosta is out of the lineup. Strum's line-forcing has of the lineup. Sturm's line-forcing has last week.

It is likely that Frank Kelly, the former Rutgers College captain, will get into the play in the second half. Although unacquainted with the Yale style of play, he has been a consistent groundgainer. He will probably replace French.

The Yale squad spent an hour today in signal drill and punting practice in the Bowl. Yale is eager to atone tomorrow for last season's score by the Southerners, who, although light and weak, played till the final minute with a desperate end seived an eleventh hour opportunity for a score.

TO the truck owner who is looking for facts about pneumatic truck tires, this much may be said—

There are pneumatic truck tires—and there are pneumatic tires made in truck sizes.

It is just as wasteful to put pneumatics that are not truck tires on a motor truck as it would be to put enlarged bicycle tires on an automobile.

So far as we know—and we have gone into this proposition thoroughly—the United States Rubber Company is the only tire manufacturer that has realized the full import of this distinction.

That is building a pneumatic truck tire—not simply a passenger car tire made larger. Building it to haul heavy loads under hauling conditions—not merely because there is a demand for pneumatic truck tires.

If these pneumatic truck tire facts interest you, there are more to be had at our service station for the asking.

HARDING AND FOREIGN AFFAIRS.

Among the reasons given by Mr. OWEN WISTER for supporting Senator HARDING is that we are in "need of "clear heads to manage our foreign "policy." The Republican candidate, Mr. WISTER thinks, is "equipped." "HARDING has long served upon the "Senate Committee on Foreign Rela- "tions." As a matter of fact, he has served as a subordinate member of that committee for less than two years. But let that pass. The real question is of the knowledge and competence which he has displayed in his public discussions of foreign affairs.

It would be easy to draw up a considerable list of Senator HARDING'S blunders and misapprehensions since he began touching upon our international relations in his stump speeches. His extraordinary vacillations and uncertainties about the League of Nations need not be included. His notion about making a satisfactory peace with Germany by joint resolution of Congress has been condemned in advance as impossible by Mr. TAFT and, impliedly, by Senator KNOX—two of those "best minds" with which Senator HARDING promises to consult. In one of his attacks upon the President for betraying the simple trust of the Chinese, Senator HARDING stated that China had no representatives of her own at the Peace Conference. Yet the Treaty itself enumerates among those represented at Paris "The President of the Chinese Republic," by his Minister for Foreign Affairs and former Minister of Agriculture.

Another illustration of Senator HARDING'S "clear head" in foreign affairs was given by him in his speech in Iowa. He referred once more to the repeal of a bill granting American ships exemption from tolls in passing through the Panama Canal and declared that this was done by President WILSON "at the instance of Great Britain." This was British "domination," to which Senator HARDING would never submit while the breath was in his body. But it is apparent that this master of foreign affairs can never have read what was said by Senator ROOT in 1914, when the repeal bill was before the Senate. Some passages of his speech are highly apposite:

> But we are told, Sir, that we must not repeal this statute "at the behest of Great Britain." The behest of Great Britain! What has Great Britain said to us? She has said that she considered this statute to be a violation of the contract. * * * Do the American people wish their representatives to treat all the other nations that are in conventional relations with us * * * upon the theory that any question of right by them is an insult, that any according of a right to them by us is a surrender? Do they want us to conduct our foreign affairs on the principle of the thoughtless youth who flings up his cap and shouts for the flag?

This looks pretty straight and pretty hard at the Ohio Senator. If Mr. ROOT'S is one of those "best minds" which Mr. HARDING is going to be happy to have about him, the consequences when it collides with the ideas of the thoughtless youth at Marion are something fearful to contemplate.

STOPPING THE WATCH ON THE RHINE.

A few days ago Senator HARDING said that he was "a nut for France." There are nuts and nuts; the Republican nominee showed on Thursday what kind he is. He promises to bring back the American troops who form part of the Army of Occupation on the Rhine, as soon as a Republican Congress can pass a resolution declaring peace. "They haven't any business there," says the Senator, "and "just as soon as we declare formal "peace they will be coming home, as "they ought to come."

Senator HARDING may think those troops are there under Article X. He does not speak as if he knew that they are there, along with British, French and Belgian troops, to see that the Germans live up to their obligations. He rejects the League, but heretofore he has not said that he favors cutting adrift from all the responsibilities of victory. He is a nut for France, but is willing to let the French look out for themselves. If they want an indemnity, let them go get it; if they want to protect themselves against Germany, let them hold the Rhine alone.

There are men in France who would like to annex everything west of the Rhine and who would overrun all Germany, if need be, in order to get the indemnity. These patriotic but unwise gentlemen, whose activities would make another European war highly probable, were beaten in the Peace Conference and beaten at home. France turned aside from them and their policies because her allies and associates promised that she would not have to stand alone against Germany. The President left American troops on the Rhine and the Republican candidate would bring them home.

"We are at peace," he says; "why "not say so and enable America to "resume her trade with the world?" Does he think there is no trade now between America and Germany? There is a considerable direct trade and a very much larger indirect trade; but none of it is done in Marion, Ohio, so the Senator has never heard of it. He would not make a separate treaty with Germany, "although those with "whom we were at war have already "done so." Twenty-two nations signed a treaty; one refused to ratify. Therefore the other twenty-one have made a separate peace. If this is not logic, it is at least normalcy.

RAILWAY RECUPERATION.

The American Railroad Association reports that all traffic records were broken in the week of Sept. 25. Cars loaded were 994,687, a record for both this year and 1918. The shortage of cars fell from 96,114 to 89,947. Shortage of cars has meant shortage of goods, and particularly of coal. When there are cars enough there will be goods enough for all who want goods. All this is along lines familiar since the roads passed into private control, but more novel as well as gratifying is it to learn that more work is being done with fewer men. The roads centring in Chicago find that they have from 10 to 15 per cent. more men than they need, particularly in the clerical and equipment departments. The release of supernumeraries, according to the Railway News Bureau, is not brought on by business depression.

The country has fortunately, perhaps harrowly, escaped from being committed to an experiment of running the railways for the benefit of the workers rather than that of the consumers of goods. This would have been as lamentable as the demonstration that some of the railways had been run in the past for the benefit of security manipulators. The new pages in the history of the railways promise to be brighter than the earlier ones.

INDEPENDENT PUBLIC SERVANTS.

Too much of the choicest American energy and talent goes into business and is diverted from political life. This is inevitable, since the financial rewards of business are so much greater. THOMAS B. REED had to give up a brilliant career to make a long-neglected provision for his family. Senator HOAR used to live in a Washington boarding house, as plenty of members of Congress do now. Many men, after displaying admirable administrative or legislative faculties at Washington, go into the service of corporations or capitalize their temporary distinction by practicing law. In the several States the case is the same or worse.

There is a considerable class of well-to-do young men who feel their responsibilities to the community and serve it to the best of their power, mostly in private station. They devote themselves to charities, philanthropies, social welfare, sometimes to literature and science. The example of THEODORE ROOSEVELT showed the possibilities of public service and public life that are within the reach of every young man of independent means. Of course, Mr. ROOSEVELT had a rare genius for politics; but it is among the many useful corollaries of his success that many young men of fortune or in modestly comfortable circumstances have caught from him the taste for political life. They have fared according to their merits or their luck or their adaptation or want of adaptation to the political condition of their States; but however they have used their opportunities, the entrance of men of their kind into public life is welcome and a good sign.

Prime, original, compelling force will make its way usually, no doubt, in spite of iron fortune; but too often that force is spent in business. Mr. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT is an excellent type of the well-equipped public servants with generous aims, with popular manners, with something incurably straightforward and loyal in his moral and mental constitution. At 28 he was a useful member of our State Senate. That body, like the Assembly, needs to be refreshed from time to time from sources quite different from mere partisanship, and a few members of some private means are not out of place.

The Democratic candidate for Senator from the Fifteenth Manhattan District is Mr. NATHAN STRAUS, Jr. He has hitherto served the public fruitfully as a private citizen. He has labored in many ways for the benefit and improvement of the community. He has exactly the experience and the training that fit him for the discussion and consideration of those measures of social relief and betterment that occupy every year a larger place in the public thought and legislative programs. He is not much of a "practical politician," perhaps, but he is exceptionally fitted to serve the people of his district and of the State.

OBREGON AT EL PASO.

El Paso was en fête for President-elect OBREGON when he crossed the Rio Grande Wednesday on the first train that had arrived at that border city from Juarez in eight years. A pacified and busy Mexico means more to El Paso than to any other place in Texas. It has a large Mexican population, and in normal times does a remunerative business with the northern States of our neighbor. For ten years El Paso has been waiting hopefully, but without much encouragement, for the advent of a stable Government in Mexico. On Wednesday it was host to a man whom the occasion called for, the one-armed farmer-soldier of Sonora, who was unknown to fame when FELIX DIAZ with BERNARDO REYES brought about the downfall of the ill-starred MADERO, but who has since proved himself a great military leader and a politician with some pretensions to statesmanship, as popular as he is capable.

It was an auspicious coincidence that on the day General OBREGON came to El Paso as a welcome visitor the announcement was made in the City of Mexico that the provisional Government had rejected the demands of FELIX DIAZ and decided to banish him. Not for him were pardon and rewards, for he could never clear himself of the odium of compassing the death of MADERO, who still holds a warm place in the hearts of Mexicans. With DIAZ disappears the last insurgent and conspirator who could make trouble for the new constitutional Government.

General OBREGON was the distinguished envoy of a pacified Mexico to the American people. For four years after Dec. 1 he is to rule in Mexico, if he can maintain his authority. His visit was, therefore, an event of the first importance. He came to El Paso with the purpose of announcing a policy and making friends. He told his hosts at a luncheon given in his honor that he hoped the entire Continent of America would always be free from war, and he pledged himself to do his share in maintaining cordial relations with the United States. He urged such visits as his by the leading men of both countries to bring about a good understanding. In a statement given out later General OBREGON promised that foreign interests would be protected by his administration, and said that Mexico would have room for all investors who should have legitimate business there. He must have impressed El Paso as a man far removed from the Carranza type of provincial Mexican, which is narrow, suspicious, intolerant. Liberal, democratic and practical, understanding Americans as well as his own countrymen, General OBREGON, who can be firm as well as amiable, bids fair to make a successful administrator in a period of post-war reconstruction.

THE CENSUS.

The Director of the Census, Mr. ROGERS, attributes the falling off in the percentage gain of population in the last ten years—it is 14.9 as compared with 21 in 1910—to the slackening of immigration during the great war, to the influenza epidemic and the casualties of the war. Is it not, however, the fact that immigration fell off in the first four years of the decade from 1910 to 1920? The outstanding feature of the census is the great gain of the cities at the expense of the country. In 1910 the latter had the larger population by about 7,000,000, whereas at the present time the cities are ahead by about 4,000,000. It may be predicted that so long as high wages prevail in the cities and employment can easily be had the drift will be away from the country; but if hard times should set in the tide may turn. There is usually a living to be had on the land when the supply of work in the industries declines. Bad as industrial depression would be, it would have the effect of promoting a healthy movement back to the soil.

With Alaska and the overseas possessions included, the United States, it is estimated, will have a population of 118,000,000. Among civilized countries Russia, with about 175,000,000 people, alone leads the United States. But America stands forth as the most powerful nation in the world on account of her resources, her solvency and the intelligence of her people.

The continental United States, with its forty-eight States and its great population, has become a somewhat difficult country to govern from Washington; but the problem would not become easier of solution by increasing representation in the House, which an addition of almost 14,000,000 of people suggests. The membership of the House with 435 seats is top-heavy now, and the legislative machinery is cumbrous. A comparatively few members run the machinery, and the average Representative is active only in committee meetings. It is obvious that it would be better that members, with the addition in population, should have more constituents than that there should be an overflow of members in the chamber after the new apportionment.

WELFARE PERPLEXITIES.

Judge MILLER'S attack upon Governor SMITH as a champion of welfare legislation suggests many reflections, among them that the subject is ill-adapted to the purposes of a whirlwind campaign. "An eight-"hour law for women and children, "applicable to all mercantile and in-"dustrial establishments, passed the "Senate; and, on the very day that "it passed, Governor SMITH signed "the repeal of a nine-hour law "applicable to the employment of "women by the elevated, subway and "surface roads of New York."

An eight-hour law may or may not be for the general advantage of women in mercantile and industrial establishments; but the nine-hour law had proved most disadvantageous to the women ticket choppers, who found the work more remunerative and less exhausting than any other at their command. The repeal which Governor SMITH signed had their hearty approval and that of all who were acquainted with the facts of the case. In a similar manner the eight-hour law which the Senate passed bears heavily upon a considerable number of women in industrial and mercantile employment—upon all of them whose work is of an irregular or seasonal character. The employés of milliner., dressmakers, printing shops and the like were highly incensed against it and voiced their opposition through an "Equal Opportunity League." Pickers and operatives in the canning industries were less vociferous, but their case was as bad or worse. In many industries women make a very large part of their annual earnings by means of rush work and long hours—to recover from which they have more than enough leisure in long periods of unemployment. Incidentally, it may be noted that the women who founded their appeal upon the principle of equal opportunity with men were ill-advised. Their true grievance was a particular and personal hardship.

That is the case with most welfare problems, and in his less contentious moments Judge MILLER seemed fully aware of the fact. The general rights and wrongs of the situation are clear enough and universally recognized. Women and children stand for the future of the nation, and their welfare is its most precious asset. But to protect them requires a vast amount of special legislation and Government regulation of industry. What the situation needs is wise deliberation and earnest co-operation of all forces for good—and it needs a lot of it. No one in this State, and very few people anywhere, have urged the cause as loyally and persistently as Governor SMITH, and when Judge MILLER hints that his long labors were "designed for political effect" most people will not agree that he is "speaking within moderation."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

The Art of Saying Nothing.

Mr. BOOTH TARKINGTON deserves some kind of political medal. Finding that he has nothing to say about the Presidential campaign, he refuses to say anything. This is so unique as well as gratifying that it ought to have special recognition. The Outlook had requested Mr. TARKINGTON to state his views of the situation in two or three hundred words, but he replied that he felt "a great vacancy" in his mind, "due to thinking nothing." Again urged to write something, he answered: "Regretfully discover that nothing cannot be spoken."

In this he is surely wrong. He himself must have heard party orators say nothing for two hours on end. That constitutes the high art. If you have something to say, it is comparatively easy; but with nothing, the speaker requires genius. Yet it may be that Mr. TARKINGTON had in mind the men—whom one of SHAKESPEARE'S characters railed at, it is true—who are "accounted wise for saying nothing."

Mr. Debs and His Friends.

Mr. EUGENE V. DEBS has been telling his troubles to Mr. NORMAN HAPGOOD, and, as might have been predicted, he blames the newspapers for most of them. Mr. HAPGOOD suggested that "if we had any public opinion in this country no administration could keep EUGENE DEBS in prison a week." Mr. DEBS naturally agreed with this view, but would not blame the public. It is all the fault of the newspapers. "Oh, those lies! Those lies!"

"Before the war," said Mr. DEBS, "there was not a man, woman or child in my home town who wasn't my friend. * * * Today, if EUGENE DEBS should go back to that home town of his, he would no longer find it a family of friends. The people there now believe him some kind of horrid thing, an enemy of what is good. The newspapers have done that."

As well might JOE JACKSON and EDDIE CICOTTE complain that the newspapers have destroyed public confidence in their integrity as ball players. It may be doubted if any newspaper has ever used the somewhat feminine locution "horrid thing" in speaking of Mr. DEBS, nor would many of them accuse him of being "an enemy of what is good." Mr. DEBS is a friend of what he thinks is good, but at the greatest crisis of the last half century his notion of good differed from that of his fellow-citizens. He probably did not think the Germans were good, but he thought the war was bad. He went about telling every one that the war was wrong, that it was a conspiracy of capitalists, and that the people should refuse to give it any support in men and money. Naturally, if that had been done the armies which we had in France would have been destroyed. There were people in Terre Haute who had sons and husbands in the American Expeditionary Forces, and it is not to be wondered at if Mr. DEBS'S tirades got on their nerves.

If his friends have turned against him, it is because of what he said and did—and that he said and did it he admitted gladly, even boastfully, at his trial. A man of such pride in his convictions should hardly blame the newspapers for reporting what he said. If his neighbors who wanted to see Germany beaten did not like it, the fault must have been with them. Of course, it couldn't have been with Mr. DEBS.

The New Scenario Value.

The era of the theatrical star reversed EUCLID by proving that the "part" is greater than the whole, and now the era of the moving picture has established an equally insolent paradox that the scenario is greater than the play. That, at least, is what one gathers from a recent conflict between dramatic authors and managers.

It appears that managers have been accustomed to accept a play, give it a perfunctory tryout, discard it—and sell the plot to the movies. Thus the author found himself bereft of dramatic fame and fortune, with only his share in the moving-picture royalties. As a protest against this practice it was threatened to form a union of dramatists after the manner of the Actors' Equity Association. The managers, only the less reputable of whom could have been guilty of the objectionable practice, capitulated on the spot. Hereafter they will waive all moving-picture rights until they have given a play at least seventy-five performances.

If the incident illustrates the strength of the new art, it also reveals its weakness. Film directors agree heartily with ARISTOTLE that the prime requisite of drama is plot. You can film "Pollyanna" or "Deadwood Dick" in a thousand different settings, but the time comes when even the movie public realizes that it is being put upon. Plot is "character in action," and a new and filmable human type, with an incident or two to develop it effectively, is worth much fine gold.

Putting It Up to Mother.

The New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs devoted the opening session of its annual convention to the good old sport of viewing with alarm. The subject naturally was the degenerate morals of these times, which was the favorite theme of alarmists before the Pyramids were built. But the New Jersey women, or one of them, introduced a certain novelty into the discussion with the declaration that "mothers must dress properly, dance decently and act with propriety in every function of life that they may be able to exemplify modesty in the presence of their sons and daughters."

Of course, this raises some delicate questions. What is propriety in dress and action? There are millions of excellent people in the United States who do not believe that dancing can be decent. However, the lady from Jersey puts it up to mother; and one feels that she is not altogether fair. Mother has probably heard a good deal from the younger generation about the freer standards of the new day and has listened to a good deal of denunciation of the Victorians. Is it surprising that mother, who probably resented the limitations of her generation, but without active effort to throw them off, should welcome the glad tidings that things are loosening up a bit, and embrace the opportunity to see a little for herself before old age comes upon her?

The moral reformers might at least let mother alone. Let them denounce the younger generation; it would be lonesome without it, and it needs to learn the vocabulary in order to be able to denounce the aberrations of its own children in its own due time. The viewers with alarm we have always with us, but they might leave mother a little opportunity to enjoy the new freedom before it is the turn of another generation to wonder what the world is coming to.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to call your attention to an error which appears in an article published today concerning the registration at Columbia University. The article refers to Columbia University as "the largest in the world, with Leland Stanford, Jr., University second in registration." The fact is that Leland Stanford, Jr., is a small university with no desire to be large. For years it has succeeded in remaining small by restricting the number of freshmen and the number of women admitted.

The writer of the article probably was thinking of the University of California, which is about thirty miles from Stanford. There the registration is unrestricted, as is characteristic of State universities. For several years the University of California has been second in size to Columbia.

Symbol and ceremony, and the spell
Of sweet enchained words that once were prayer,
These—or the charity of prison-cell—
Were offered freemen for their ghostly fare.
And they whose loyalty unto their Lord
Outweighed obedience to their King's command
Were persecuted by the double sword,
And harried, exiles, from their native land.
Yet unembittered, and with courage great,
As Pilgrims they adventured forth to sea
Upon the Mayflower. None could tell their fate
In the New World, save that they should be free.
They found a welcome on those wintry shores

Thrice hath an age dawned slowly and grown late
Since in New England men of honor lit
The lamp of Freedom, and did found a State—
Their royal charter that of Holy Writ.
Now children of a mighty nation come,
Deep-stirred in spirit, to the Motherland
Of those revered men. That early home
Is holy ground where pilgrim-feet shall stand.
At length the sound of those same feet was heard,
Retributive and dread, by tyrant foes
Who threatened liberty. Thousands did gird
And arm them swift as that fierce challenge rose.
To those who fought as Pilgrims in the War,

THE HARDING CABINET.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In this abnormal campaign tepid followers of each of the two chief Presidential candidates become positively heated in their denunciations of his opponent. Much of what passes as argument seems based on the acceptance of that wise warning to a child:

"Keep fast hold of nurse—
For fear of getting something worse."

The supporters of Harding in particular comfort themselves with a formula now threadbare through repetition: "Well, he is sure to have a good Cabinet." When all else fails, this appears to strengthen the weak-hearted.

As a matter of fact, how much comfort is really to be derived from it? How generally is it realized that Cabinets, especially those appointed by enemies of "one-man government," are, quite notoriously, monuments of political gratitude? Even the "autocrat" now ruling in Washington was under the necessity of seating Mr. Bryan at his right hand.

What are the debts of political gratitude which Senator Harding will be obliged to pay? High among the preferred creditors stand the old, backward-looking men of the Senate without whose advice—if not theirs, then whose?—the heckled candidate admitted in Baltimore that he could not express an individual opinion on so important a matter as his own attitude toward the League of Nations. Then there are the bitter, consistent, but sincere "irreconcilables"—if, indeed, any number of them can be held in line to the end of the campaign. "He's got them on the hiat"—at least so far—and the day of settlement is sure to come.

But are these all? By no means! There is the element in our population embodied in William Randolph Hearst, whose newspapers are giving Senator Harding his warmest support. There are the Sinn Feiners, and all those whose antagonism to the League of Nations grows out of their hatred of England. There are the pro-Germans, the Viereckes and the von Machs, and their fellows, whose kindred antagonism grows out of their love for Germany—and their hope that a separate peace will make things a little easier for the beaten enemy. And with these must be counted—strangest bedfellows of all—the devotees of the American Defense Society.

This array of quaint companions is bound together for the present by a single common sentiment—a blind hatred of President Wilson, stricken down in the fight for what has been the highest hope of the world, a fight against foes who were "out to kill," it mattered not much whether an idea, a party, or a man.

When that broken man returns to private life next March, the bond of union which holds together Senator Harding's political creditors will automatically and instantly dissolve. But the debts will remain to be paid.

Should a single group from this Falstaff's army of counselors be chosen for special reward, it must obviously be that of the backward-looking men of the Senate, of whom the candidate has been one. From the sway of such a group the inevitable revulsion in 1924 is something to be considered with grave concern. Extreme "reaction" is the surest seed-ground for extreme radicalism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In 1915 Jacob H. Schiff presented to Barnard College to commemorate his fifty years of residence in New York City the Students' Building, costing $350,000. The conditions upon which Mr. Schiff did this so illustrate his broadness of vision that I quote from his letter to me, as Treasurer of Barnard College, outlining his plan:

"The building when completed is to be the property of Barnard College, but it is to serve as a centre for the social and ethical activities of the entire female student body of Barnard College, Teachers College and Columbia College. It must be forever understood that there shall be at no time any preferment in favor of the religious and ethical activities of any class of the students. To insure as perfect an administration of the building as possible, having in view the carrying out of the purposes for which it is to be erected, there shall be appointed by the Trustees of the three colleges a standing committee to consist of three nominees to represent Barnard College, one to represent Teachers College and one to represent Columbia College, and it is suggested that there be included in this Committee of Five one member of the Catholic and one of the Jewish faith."

Mr. Schiff believed that nothing but education can break down all barriers, whether of race, religion or social status. Who can measure the influence of his munificent gift in molding the minds of those who are to be the future citizens of this great metropolitan and cosmopolitan city?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Emma Goldman, the notorious anarchist deported from the United States to Russia, must be considered a competent judge on Bolshevism after she has observed Soviet Russia during four months. She expressed her views in the Travailleur Libre (Free Workman) as follows:

"Everything is rotten here. Russia is undergoing the most painful decadence. Indeed, we could not expect to see anything else. We knew that Marxism would bring about only tyranny. During the four months that I have lived in Russia I am persuaded that there is nothing healthy in that theory. State socialism, or the State capitalism—use any term you like—made of Russia what it would do of any other country; it deprived men of the last grain of liberty which they had under capitalism, and submitted them to the caprices of bureaucracy which assures its tyranny, saying that all these things were done in the interests of the workmen. Every form of government is bad, but, bound to make the choice between State capitalism and private capitalism, I would prefer the latter form. The best remedy for Bolshevism seems to me a journey through Bolshevist Russia, for a large number of those who came here as pro-Bolshevists returned hence as anti-Bolshevists."

It is evident that Emma Goldman has not lived in this country over thirty years in vain.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why do Americans condemn and discriminate unjustly against diligent, efficient Japanese laborers who are law-abiding, while we endure and receive inefficient laborers from Southern and Central Europe who are to a great extent law-defying boarders?

Did you ever know of a case where the Japanese formed socialistic or communistic radical organizations and sought to blow up banks, bridges or overthrow our form of Government?

When we preach the necessity of greater production, more saving and economizing, which the thrift of the Japanese exemplifies, are we consistent in damning them for not striking for more wages and damning them again if they do?

Our territory of Hawaii would cease to prosper without the Japanese, who number virtually one-half the total population. Why do 3,500,000 people in California object to the presence of merely 80,000 Japanese and deny them a square deal?

No more Orientals can now enter this country, its mainland or territorial possessions, therefore these questions apply only to the Japanese now residing among us.

SUPER-POWER SYSTEM.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—A saving of 30,000,000 tons of coal annually, representing $150,000,000 in value, the labor of more than 30,000 miners and the release of vast railroad carrying capacity for other freight were pictured as among the possibilities of the projected Eastern industrial region super-power electric system, in an address here today by W. S. Murray, before the Water Power League.

Mr. Murray is Chairman of the engineering staff now assisting the Government in developing plans for the project. Stretching from Washington to Boston, and drawing its electrical power from steam and water generation, the system would be the paramount feeder of energy, he said, to all utilities, industries and railroads throughout that territory.

Plans had been developed, Mr. Murray said, to the point of locating tidewater points where great generating stations, designed to form the backbone of the super-power system, might be erected.

ASKS PEACE BE ORDERED.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Harry S. Mecartney, Chicago attorney, carried to the Supreme Court today his efforts to compel Secretary Colby to promulgate the joint peace resolution passed by Congress last May and vetoed by the President.

Declaring that "vital public interests required the early as possible consideration of the question involved," Mr. Mecartney filed a petition for a writ of certiorari asking that the case be taken from the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, where it is pending.

The case reached the Court of Appeals from the District Supreme Court, which last July dismissed Mecartney's petition for mandamus to compel Secretary Colby to promulgate the resolution.

BALLAST FOR EAGLE BOATS.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Fixed ballast will hereafter be placed in all navy Eagle boats, as a result of the findings of a board of inquiry, which investigated the capsizing of one of the vessels in the Delaware River last June, when nine lives were lost. The boats were of a special type, built at the Ford automobile plants during the war for submarine defense.

The board, in a report, found that no person was responsible for the disaster, but that the vessel had a "small range of stability," which, with a light load, made it an unsafe seaboat."

It was stated that the capsized boat had been struck by a squall, which shifted liquid fuel and water in her tanks and allowed her to be swamped by water entering open air ports.

COALITIONIST IS ELECTED.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Fred Wise, the Government candidate, was elected to Parliament in the by-election for the Ilford constituency, rendered necessary by the death of the incumbent, Sir Peter Briggs. The result of the polling, which took place Sept. 25, was announced today. Mr. Wise, Coalition-Unionist, received 15,612 votes; Joseph King, Labor, received 6,577 votes, and J. Thompson, Liberal, 6,515 votes.

The election created much interest, particularly as Premier Lloyd George had written the Government candidate saying he was fighting against the forces of "unreason and unrest." Mr. Wise argued in his speeches that his election would mean that the country was giving Premier Lloyd George a vote of confidence in his fight against the nationalization of industries.

SAMUEL DRIVES ENGINE.

British Commissioner Also Puts Last Spike in Palestine Railroad.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 7.—Sir Herbert Samuel, British High Commissioner for Palestine, today drove the last spike into the sleeper which completed the new, widened gauge railway line between Ludd, two miles northeast of Ramleh, and Jaffa. He then donned overalls and drove the engine from Ludd to Jaffa. Sir Herbert stopped the train in Tul-Aviv, the Jewish suburb of Jaffa, where a large crowd showered the engine with flowers.

At Jaffa station, the High Commissioner was greeted by General Hoxton and Rear Admiral West of the super-dreadnought Empress of India, which had just arrived at Jaffa. In acknowledging the greeting Sir Herbert said that completion of the new railway line was the first step in facilitating business with Jaffa, which he declared would in the near future become the largest port in the Eastern Mediterranean.

URGES "BLUE SKY" LAWS.

C. J. Andre Puts Annual Loss in Fraudulent Stocks at $500,000,000.

BOSTON, Oct. 8.—The annual loss to the American public through the purchase of fradulent securities was estimated at $500,000,000 by Charles J. Andre, Secretary of the National Association of Securities Commissioners, in testimony before the special State "blue sky" law commission. Mr. Andre said that about 10 per cent. of the stock offered to the public was worthless, and that although thirty-eight States have "blue sky" laws "some are so loose that practically everything gets through."

Mr. Andre's estimate of worthless stocks was cut by Roy C. Osgood of Chicago, President of the Investment Bankers' Association of America, who told the commission that only 5 per cent. of stock issues were bad. He said that investment bankers do not oppose reasonable regulation.

George W. Rodges of New York, former President of the association, expressed the opinion that 80 per cent. of the promoters now selling fradulent or questionable stock could be put out of business in ninety days if existing laws were enforced.

CONGRESS MUST FIX HOUSE MEMBERSHIP

SOME FAVOR A REDUCTION

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Whether Congress will continue the same basis of Congressional representation, one member for each 211,877 of population, and thereby increase the membership of the House of Representatives about fifty, or whether the ratio will be increased so as to confine the membership to about its present number of 435, was being discussed here today. The census for 1920, just completed, shows that the population has increased 13,710,842 in the last ten years, and a reapportionment of the membership of the House must be made every ten years to give representation to the increased population.

One of the first acts of the next Congress will be to report a reapportionment bill. This will be prepared by the Committee on Census, of which Representative Isaac Siegel of New York is Acting Chairman. The committee will probably employ Prof. Willcox of Cornell, who, for the last twenty years, has worked out scientific reapportionment bills. What ratio will be adopted will depend probably upon political logrolling, but the best information is that the membership will not be increased over fifteen members, if at all.

Generally speaking, the increased population worked out on the basis of one member for each 211,877 of population, clerks of the House figure, would increase the next House to nearly 490. It is impossible to figure accurately, even on this basis, because some States with a population in excess of 211,000 would not gain a new member.

States Which Would Gain.

Under the present ratio California would obtain five additional members and New York, Pennsylvania and Michigan four each, Illinois and Texas three each, and Massachusetts, New Jersey and North Carolina two each, while the following States would gain one each: Alabama, Arizona, Connecticut, Georgia, Maryland, Montana, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, Tennessee, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Virginia, Arkansas and Minnesota.

An increase in the ratio will certainly be made. It has been figured out that the ratio can be increased to 219,427 without any State losing its present representation.

It is the opinion of some Republican members who usually speak for the House that every attempt will be made to restrict the reapportionment to not more than 450 members. A ratio worked out on this basis would, it is believed, not reduce any State's membership, while such States as New York, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and California, which have made great gains, would get additional representation.

At present the House is too large in its membership, say older members who have seen it expand every ten years. It is too unwieldy to enact legislation effectively and even the committees, they say, are almost too big to permit of proper and deliberate consideration of measures.

Two Ex-Speakers for a Reduction.

Two former Speakers of the House, Joseph G. Cannon and Champ Clark, have declared in favor of a smaller membership. If the membership should be increased there would be sufficient space on the floor of the House to accommodate at least 535 members, but any increase beyond ten would require the building of an addition to the House office building, which is hardly large enough to accommodate the present membership.

Toward the close of the last session ex-Speaker Clark said in a speech in the House that he favored the adoption of a Constitutional amendment to limit the membership in the House to 300.

Representative S. D. Fess, Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, agreed with Mr. Clark that the membership of the House ought to be limited to 300 and that an amendment to the Constitution to provide for such should be submitted. But nothing was done.

Mr. Clark said that after every decennial census since the Government was organized the membership of the House has been increased except in 1830. At that time it was reduced. He said that ten years ago, when it was increased by forty-four members, great agricultural sections had not gained enough in population to obtain an additional member, and it is believed that the basis of representation will be made so high this year as to bring about the same conditions.

The British House of Commons has 709 members, but 40 members constitute a quorum.

REJECTED AS WIDOW IN $10,000,000 FIGHT

Louis O. Van Doren, appointed referee by Surrogate Cohalan to take testimony in a proceeding by Consuelo Carreras to establish her right to a wife's share in the estate of Rafael Arocena, who died at the Plaza Hotel in June, 1919, leaving an estate of between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000, on the ground that her relationship to the decedent with whom she lived at the Plaza, was that of a common law wife, filed his report yesterday. He decided that the evidence submitted tended to prove that the aged Mexican never held any woman out to be his wife.

In addition to deciding against the attractive Cuban woman of 28 years who sought to prove that she was the wife of the seventy-two-year-old Mexican, the referee suggested that documents offered in evidence in behalf of the youthful claimant should be brought to the attention of the criminal authorities because of his belief that they were manufactured for the occasion. The report says:

"So here we have a picture of a man who for more than forty years prior to the alleged common law marriage maintained relations with one woman after another, terminating each by purchasing immunity for his acts. He showed entire lack of respect for womanhood. He had carefully all his life avoided entiring the sacred and responsible obligations of marriage."

Arocena's will gave his estate here and in Mexico to grandchildren and when it was offered for probate by Enrique Buj of Mexico City, who managed the decedent's property and was named executor, Miss Carreras filed objections to the probate based on an alleged oral agreement made by Arocena on April 10, 1918. The referee took testimony from December to June last and examined 250 exhibits offered by the alleged widow, including the one he characterizes as a bungling attempt to deceive the court and establish her claim.

Became an Exile.

Referee Van Doren states that Arocena was born in Spain and went to Mexico early in life. He prospered there until 1914, when the troubled condition of the republic caused him to become an exile, and he came to New York to live at the Plaza. Although he was 72 years old, he was of powerful physique and "his great wealth enabled him to live here in great luxury and self-indulgence." He lived with an illiterate woman in Mexico until 1900, the referee says, and she bore him a son and daughter. He acknowledged paternity of the children under the Mexican law and supported the family. His nephew, Francisco Arocena, married his daughter, Zenaida, and their two children inherit his estate.

The testimony showed that when Buj, the executor, was married in Mexico City, Arocena was one of the witnesses and his daughter, Zenaida, was a guest. Arocena signed the marriage paper as a single man, which the referee says so affected his daughter that she fainted.

The referee says that Arocena supported three young women before he met Consuelo Carreras, who, the referee finds, was born in Havana of a good family, was educated in a convent in Halifax, speaks Spanish, French and English, and was introduced to Arocena by a man for whom she was doing clerical work. He installed her in an apartment at 100 Central Park South, and when the lease expired he took her to his suite at the Plaza.

Gave Her Jewels Worth $76,000.

Paul Pene, a jewelry salesman, testified that Arocena bought the young woman $76,000 worth of jewels. Among the persons who testified that the young woman had been introduced to them as Arocena's wife were Mary Adelaide Wall, telegraph operator at the Plaza; Frank K. Zimmerman, paying teller at the Metropolitan Trust Company; a manicure at the Plaza, and Mrs. Myra Kingman Miller, a writer and lecturer.

Miss Wall testified that she once asked Arocena why he had not married prior to meeting the claimant and he replied, "No, I am no crazy. You think I crazy?" When he showed the picture of his daughter's two children to whom he left his property and she asked who they were he replied, "God-children from the church."

The document which the referee believes is a forgery is addressed to "Mrs. Myra Kingman Miller, 1,363 East Broadway, Long Beach, Cal.," and reads:

"Very esteemed Madam—I desire to announce to you my marriage in the second week of April with the señorita of whom I have spoken to you before, the Señorita Consuelo Carreras. When you and your charming daughter come to New York I hope to have the pleasure of presenting her to you. She is a girl of high education, which she received in one of those fine institutions, a convent. I am sure that she will please. Affectionately, RAFAEL AROCENA."

MUSIC

By Richard Aldrich

The National Symphony Orchestra.

The season of orchestral music in New York, which is to be unprecedented in the number of concerts to be given by the three orchestras now belonging to the metropolis, was opened last evening in Carnegie Hall. The National Symphony Orchestra, renamed, reorganized, reanimated, if reanimation was necessary, under the direction of Artur Bodanzky, gave the first of its innumerable concerts. The program comprised the overture to "Der Freischütz," Brahms's second piano concerto, played by Ossip Gabrilowitsch, and Strauss's tone poem, "Death and Transfiguration."

There was abundant interest, obviously, in the prospects and promise of the renovated organization, in which there have been so many changes of personnel since the close of last season, and whose ranks have been filled up with so many recruits from other and older orchestras all over the country. The hall was full and there was an atmosphere of expectancy.

The orchestra is, of course, greatly improved in its qualities and in many of the things that go to make fine orchestral playing. It has a great power and an imposing sonority in which Mr. Bodanzky takes delight. He has already remolded it largely in the direction of his heart's desire, in precision, in finish of ensemble, in capacity of nuance, in brilliancy, in rhythmic energy and incisiveness; and in all these things it is plastic and instant in response to his direction.

In quality of tone, in transparency, in the minuter gradations and fusions of the diverse timbres and in sheer beauty of sound, there is still something to be wished for. The golden purity of tone that still remains an unmatched memory, left by an unequaled organization, has not been reached by Mr. Bodanzky's efforts yet. These are subtler qualities, not attainable by the first waves of even the most skilful baton. They remain to be striven for, to be laboriously worked out, and to take the place of some of the too strenuous sound-production that is the basis of the orchestra's tone at present.

This is not, of course, to say that there is not a splendid efficiency, a dazzling brilliancy and a stirring musical vitality in the orchestra's playing at present. These were reached in the performance of the "Freischütz" overture, which was of the most dramatic and vivid order, an intelligent and cunningly wrought fulfillment of Weber's conception of the piece. That conception, as he has detailed it, has led to many clumsy and uncomprehending exaggerations, which are impossible to a musician of Mr. Bodanzky's intelligence and musical prescience.

Of the same sort was the playing of Strauss's tone poem, from which he squeezed the last drop of delineative effect, of pathetic and melodramatic eloquence.

Brahms's concerto does not lend itself to this sort of treatment; yet in certain passages, especially of the first movement, it was submitted to something of the sort.

Mr. Gabrilowitsch gave a masterly performance of the concerto, profoundly felt, passionately energetic, brilliantly executed; but his conception of the work seemed sometimes to pass over into a vehemence not quite native to it. Of glowing and ecstatic loveliness was his playing of the andante.

The orchestral portion of the work was given the truly symphonic elaboration that it claims, now anu again lapsing into vehemence likewise.

The results were unconventional, but they were stirring. Not only was Mr. Gabrilowitsch enthusiastically applauded, but Mr. Van Vliet, the first 'cellist, to whom falls the "long, sweet, gravely amorous song," as Mr. Gilman in his note called it, of the andante, was also made to take a share of the applause for himself.

DAYTON, Ohio, Oct. 8.—The Senate Sub-Committee, composed of Senators Pomerene, Democrat, of Ohio, and Edge, Republican, of New Jersey, today concluded its investigation of the circumstances surrounding the giving of a $5,000 note by Governor Cox to a local bank in August, 1917, and the payment of the note by the Dayton Metal Products Company in June, 1918. The committee will meet in St. Louis Oct. 18 to continue investigations.

Clarence Heifer, who was Vice President of the City National Bank of Dayton, which discounted the note, testified that "he thought" he had paid the proceeds to Clarence N. Greer, Chairman of the Montgomery County Democratic Committee. Greer testified that he had received a $5,000 certificate of deposit from the City Trust and Savings Bank, which interlocked with the City National Bank, the day following, and that he used it to pay expenses incurred by the Democratic Committee in conducting its primary campaign for the nomination of candidates for City Commissioners.

H. E. Talbott, President of the Dayton Metal Products Company, testified that the company had paid the note, but that it was considered a personal obligation on himself, Colonel E. A. Deeds and C. F. Kettering, company officials. He said that Governor Cox had asked him and others forming a committee interested in securing the nomination of desirable candidates for City Commissioner, to assume the obligation, inasmuch as their efforts to bring about a coalition between Republicans and Democrats to defeat Socialist candidates had delayed campaign plans so long that the Democratic organization had not had time to collect sufficient campaign funds. Talbott said that he agreed with Governor Cox and consequently assumed the obligation.

Carl J. Sherer, who was Treasurer of the Dayton Metal Products Company in 1916 when officers of the company contributed heavily to a campaign fund for the re-election of Governor Cox, explained from the company's books how the company advanced the money to officials and how most of it finally was returned to the company. He asserted that all of the officials were vitally interested in flood protection.

Concerning the delivery of the proceeds of the Cox note, Marvyn Scudder, a New York accountant, testified that in the course of the Hughes aircraft investigation he had talked with Heifer concerning the payment of the note and that Heifer had told him "I paid the money to Governor Cox and he put it in a bag and took it away with him."

This testimony was strenuously objected to by Senator Pomerene, who said: "This is only for personal reflection on Governor Cox."

"Governor Cox was here day before yesterday and I wish he were here now," retorted Senator Edge.

"I wouldn't allow this business to go on against Senator Harding," Senator Pomerene replied.

After the hearing was concluded Senator Pomerene issued a statement in which he declared that certain witnesses who had been connected with the Hughes and Frear aircraft investigations and others had demonstrated that they were more interested in besmirching Governor Cox than in ascertaining the truth." He also said that the entire investigation here had shed no light on Presidential campaign contributions, the investigation of which was the primary purpose for which the committee had been appointed.

Senator Edge issued a statement in which he said:

"I do not care to discuss the things that have been made clear before the committee. The matter is now up to the prosecuting attorney. We have clearly established there has been violation of the Corrupt Practices act of Ohio and irregular proceedings in the Cox campaigns of the past, but these are not within our jurisdiction. We cannot conduct the prosecution, but steps should be taken immediately to act upon the evidence disclosed before the committee."

W. L. GEORGE AT HILL CLUB.

W. L. George, English novelist and feminist, gave his impressions of American women last night at the opening of the Hill Club, 151 East Thirty-eighth Street, a leading association of feminists. The guest of honor analyzed the subject's restlessness, her curiosity and "her vivid intelligence," as well as offering some sidelights on the morals of American women.

"If I might say a prayer to American woman," said Mr. George, "it is that she should place herself at the head of the national movement for the protection of the child and the ennobling of human relations; and to this I might add the message, 'We may be on the threshold of a new world. I ask the women of America to be the new women of that new world.'"

A reduction in prices among auto supply distributers was inaugurated yesterday by the Times Auto Supply Company, which announced a 20 per cent. price cut, amounting to $1,000,000 on its present $5,000,000 stock of accessories. The firm which maintains branches in thirty large cities declared that the movement if successful will force manufacturers to standardize the lower prices.

BOND PROFITS PAID TO JUDSON IN CASH

Fanshawe Says Travis's Agent Asked for Most of $368,000 Gains in Currency.

$800,000 LOSS TO STATE

BANK GAVE BROKER'S FEE

Albert L. Judson, who, as agent for State Controller Eugene M. Travis in the purchase of bonds for the State, is said to have made $800,000 profits, asked for and received payments in cash of the greater part of $368,000 profits on bonds obtained for the State through one dealer, according to testimony given yesterday at the John Doe inquiry into the conduct of the Controller's office.

Judson twice asked for cash payments of more than $100,000 each within a few hours of the time the bond sales to the State had been made, William H. Fanshawe, the bond dealer, who acted for him in the transaction, testified. The larger part of the remainder of the profits was, at Judson's request, in the form of checks made out to the Metropolitan Trust Company, who credited them to Judson's account.

Other points relating to Judson's transactions, which were brought out before Chief Justice Frederic Kernochan of Special Sessions at yesterday's hearing, were:

Judson was believed by one dealer to be acting for wealthy friends, and not until his purchase of bonds had run up into the millions was it known that he was buying them for the State Controller for sinking fund purposes.

Also Got Broker's Commission.

The profits which Judson made included not only the sum gained by buying the bonds at one price and then selling them to the State for a higher price, but also a broker's commission from some of the concerns from whom he bought bonds.

The State, by buying the bonds at the market prices which were charged Judson, could have saved the $800,000 or more profits which went to Judson.

Judson's profits in transactions in which Mr. Fanshawe acted as agent totalled $368,906, after all deductions had been made.

The National City Company, according to the testimony of one of its representatives, is carrying bonds worth $750,000 for Judson without security or margin of any kind, and at the coupon rate. Assistant District Attorney Pecora pointed out in this connection that call money is now quoted at almost double the coupon rate, and the bonds have depreciated almost 10 points since Judson gave the original order last Summer.

Mr. Fanshawe, with the aid of checks, vouchers and receipts, told the details of his dealings with Judson. The chief transactions, six in number, were as follows:

Date of Sale.	Par Value of Bonds.	Judson's Profit.
Mar. 17, 1915	$175,000	*$3,300
Apr. 16, 1915	1,061,100	16,884
May 11, 1915	1,554,000	23,077
July 6, 1916	4,061,000	94,292
May 25, 1916	4,379,950	140,292
Oct. 26, 1916	3,674,900	143,228

Large Cash Payments Made.

Large payments in cash were made to Judson following each of the last three sales. On July 8, 1915, Judson, according to Mr. Fanshawe's testimony, directed that $25,409 of his $33,352 profits be drawn in cash. The remaining $7,492 he asked to have in the form of a check, the indorsements on which disclosed that he had cashed it immediately.

The May 1, 1916, sale of bonds of a par value of more than $4,000,000 netted $148,292 to Judson. He asked to have $12,292 of this sum paid in cash and the remaining $25,000 credited to his account in the Metropolitan Trust Company. The checks for the $25,000, in number of which one was for $15,000 and the other for $10,000, were made out to the order of the Metropolitan Trust Company.

After the October, 1916, sale, in which there was a profit of $143,228 for Judson, he drew $114,140 in cash the following day, in addition to a check for $15,000 to the order of the Metropolitan Trust Company, which was credited to his account. In November Mr. Fanshawe paid $1,000 of the remainder to a third party at Judson's request. Three months later the remaining $13,000 was paid by check to the order of the Metropolitan Trust Company.

Mr. Fanshawe, in reply to questions by Mr. Pecora, said he did not know why Judson took cash or what he did with it. It was usually paid in bills of large denominations, which made only a small package, the bond dealer said. He never knew Judson to carry large sums of money on his person, he testified.

"Did you not think that it was very unusual that Judson should have asked to have such large payments made in cash?" Mr. Pecora asked.

Mr. Fanshawe replied that, while such large payments in cash were not customary, there was no reason why they should not be made that way. As to the reason for drawing the checks to the order of the Metropolitan Trust Company instead of to Judson, the bond dealer said that was his firm's method of having the money deposited to Judson's account.

Several other items in the statement which Fanshawe presented will be taken up in detail at a future session of the inquiry.

Transactions with National City.

Mr. Kohl said he took Judson's name from a building directory at 30 East Forty-second Street and reported him to the company as a prospective bond buyer. He called on Judson several times, and, according to his testimony, Judson told him that he was acting as the agent of wealthy men who were in the market from time to time.

His first sale of bonds to Judson was in November, 1915. That was the only sale in which Judson did not receive a broker's commission from the company in addition to the profits from the State. The commission on the other sales was one-eighth of one per cent. of the purchase price, which the company paid in the belief that Judson was acting as broker.

The first sale was city bonds of a par value of $288,000, which were quoted at 94.85. These bonds, according to the records, Judson sold to the Controller a day later at 95.00. His profits from the State were $11,880.

All of the bonds sold to Judson were at the prevailing market price and, according to Kohl, it was presumed that Judson's resale of them to his friends was also at the prevailing market price. It was this belief, the bond salesman asserted, that resulted in the payment of a commission to Judson.

On only one occasion, the first, did Judson haggle over the price, Kohl asserted. The bond salesman added that both he and Judson followed the market very closely and that both knew when the price was right. In all his transactions, said Kohl, the bonds were sold at the prevailing market rate and any other buyer could have bought them on the same terms and under the same conditions.

Colonel Fairservis Recalled.

Colonel Thomas Fairservis, a partner in the firm of George B. Gibbons & Co., which also sold bonds of a par value of several million dollars to Judson for the State, was recalled at the afternoon session. Colonel Fairservis said he wished to amplify some of the testimony he gave at Thursday's session, particularly with regard to his statement that there were only two cases in which written bids, offering bonds to the Controller, were rejected. He said that after consideration he believed there were many such cases. He said also there were other customers who had bought bonds of Long Beach illage at the same price as that paid by the State Controller.

Colonel Fairservis denied that most of his conferences preliminary to the sale of bonds were had with Deputy Controller James A. Wendell, but admitted that most of the letters of acceptance from the Controller's office were signed by Wendell "at the direction of the Controller."

George B. Gibbons, of the same firm, admitted, on question by Mr. Pecora, that he was related to Mr. Wendell. There was a stir for a moment, but Mr. Gibbons added: "He is a nephew of my grandfather's cousin."

The hearing will be resumed on Monday.

Hears Two Tomatoes Sell For $1.70 in a Boston Hotel

BOSTON, Oct. 8.—United States Attorney D. J. Gallagher, who is investigating alleged profiteering by hotel and restaurant keepers, said today that he had been informed that one hotel in this city was charging $1.70 for "two whole tomatoes with skins removed."

Another hotel, Mr. Gallagher said, was charging 20 cents for one boiled potato and the same for a boiled egg. Potatoes are retailing here generally for 35 cents a peck and the best eggs are quoted from $1 to $1.05 a dozen.

The State Commission on the Necessaries of Life has joined with Mr. Gallagher in his attempt to bring about a reduction of prices charged by hotels and restaurants. He has intimated that he will present evidence to the Federal Grand Jury if a revision of prices is not made.

PLEDGED TO A CONFERENCE.

British Writer Thinks Allies in Honor Bound to Meet Germans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Oct. 9.—G. H. Ferris says in The Daily Chronicle this morning:

"For several weeks past the British and French Governments have been in correspondence with regard to the method by which the German indemnity may be fixed and its realization provided for. As the communications continue, it is impossible that any texts should yet be made public. The matter is, however, of so much importance, and the references in the French press present it so imperfectly, that it will be useful to define it rather more closely than we have hitherto done.

It will be remembered that on the last day of the Spa Conference, July 16, by the exertion of all the influence and resource Premier Lloyd George could bring to bear, an agreement on the amount of German coal deliveries was with difficulty reached. On the other hand, it was agreed to set up at Geneva early in August a sub-commission on which Germany should have equal representation with the other powers—two members each—to explore and report upon—not in any way to decide—the question of the total amount and liquidation of German liabilities for reparation. Premier Millerand fully accepted this agreement. To the British Government it seemed to rise naturally out of the terms of the treaty and of the allied reply to German objections to the conditions of peace, by which the Berlin Government had promised "a just opportunity to be heard," and "serious and fair consideration" for its proposals.

"When Herr von Simons and the Chancellor returned home and reported that, though the coal terms were hard, they had gained this concession, the British Government regarded the Geneva Commission as not only a sensible arrangement, but one to which the Allies were publicly pledged. It was therefore a sharp surprise to them to find during the following weeks that M. Millerand had changed his mind and wished, instead of a joint commission in a neutral country, to hold a special meeting of the Reparation Commission in Paris with German representatives in attendance.

Earl Curzon expressed his surprise with friendly bluntness. The first result was a deviation from the International Financial Conference, the chief task of which, as originally designed, was to consider the Geneva findings with a view to planning the mobilization of the indemnity by a loan or otherwise. The French Government, however, persisted and still persists in its objections to the Spa project, pleading what it regards as deliberate German evasions of the treaty.

"Belgium is naturally drawn toward the unity with which she has just concluded a military treaty, but there is reason to think that Premier Delacroix fully appreciates the British desire to go the speediest way toward fixing an indemnity.

"It has been stated in the Paris press that France was supported by the United States. This is a mistake. The American Government is in full sympathy with the British point of view. This has not changed, and, indeed, being governed by a pledge as well as by the sense of a EuEuropean policy which is held more or less strongly by practically all British statesmen, cannot fundamentally change, but there is the keenest wish to maintain in this, as in all other International action, the comradeship of the great war, and, if we are more impressed than our allies by the steady reduction of the German army and the satisfactory delivery of coal, to mention no other facts, to weigh duly the legitimate susceptibilities of France.

"The suggestion has been made that the Reparation Commission should meet the German representatives otherwise than in Paris, for instance, in Cologne. If such a meeting is understood to be preliminary to and not a substitute for the longer and more effective conference the British Government will make no objection. Otherwise there owuld be a breach of promise which would intensify the unrest throughout Central Europe.

"It is almost inconceivable that when the determination of the indemnity is declared by so many economic authorities to be a primary condition of European recovery, the two leading democratic powers, bound by so many ties of interest and sacrifice, should continue to differ as to the method of reaching it. Britain favors the large and liberal way. If any progress can be made by going to Cologne or by the separate negotiations which are said to be taking place in Paris and Berlin, we shall rejoice. Sooner or later a larger conference will be necessary, and the longer it is delayed the harder the problem is likely to become."

TURKS STORM MINISTRY.

FRANCE SHIFTING CONFERENCE VIEWS

Apparently Preparing to Meet British Wishes for Financial Parleys.

MOVED BY GERMAN ACTION

Simons's Effort to Force Direct Reparation Discussion Caused Change of Front.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—The financial conference at which the Allies will meet the Germans will probably be held after all, whether at Geneva or elsewhere. It was announced today that the French Government had received a note from the British Foreign Minister, Lord Curzon, reiterating the English wish to have the conference held at an early date. Lord Curzon suggests that the allied and German financial experts meet as soon as possible, with a view to formulating reparations proposals which shall then be submitted to a formal conference of allied and German leaders.

It is generally believed here that Premier Delacroix of Belgium was commissioned to convey to Premier Lloyd George some such suggestion on behalf of France. His proposal was to be in the nature of an olive branch extended by France to England—a sort of amende honorable on France's part. Whether intentionally or by mere coincidence, Lord Curzon's note meets France half way, with the result that the conference he proposed is almost certain to take place.

France has swung around to a more conciliatory attitude not only because of the probability that the Reparation Commission will not take the stand she desires, nor yet because MM. Millerand and Leygues were afraid of awkward questions in the Chamber with regard to the enormous hole in French finances that twenty-odd billion francs of annual expenditure for reparations now produce. There is another reason, namely, the so-called "direct negotiations" between France and Germany.

German Proposals to France at Brussels.

I am in a position to state that pourparlers on the subject of reparations were unofficially begun between French and German financial representatives at Brussels soon after the present League of Nations conference opened there. The suggestions Germany put forward were hardly less vague than the proposals on similar lines made at Spa. They concerned:

First—The flotation of an international loan, the famous gold bond issue, which was so coldly received by American, British and neutral financiers and economists.

Second—That Germany should undertake under international auspices the rebuilding of devastated French territory with German labor and German material. This found no favor whatever with the French, who realized the undesirability of the colonization of a part of their territory for an indefinite period by a host of Germans not represented as many hungry mouths that France would have to feed and whose presence would lead to inevitable complications.

Third—The Germans suggested that a part, at least, of their debt might be paid in manufactured goods, and another part by tariff privileges given to France and Belgium which would represent a positive cash value which could thus be written off. There was a rider to this suggestion in the shape of a request for raw materials, the argument being that the more raw materials Germany obtained the more manufactured goods France would receive. Special emphasis was laid upon the furnishing of iron ore from Lorraine. The French iron mines owners were not unwilling to consider this point, because before the war most of this ore had been smelted and afterward worked up in Germany, and from a practical business point of view that was the most natural and economic arrangement.

The attitude then, alone of those tentatively made by Germany, appeared to the French worth considering. Although it did directly concern reparations, it was primarily a question of improving commercial relations between the two countries which, justified by the French statement that it was the latter question and not the former which had been under consideration recently.

The Brussels pourparlers were, however, interrupted before they got much beyond the embryonic stage. In a diplomatic quarter which is likely at present to be rather critical of French behavior I was informed that the reason for this break was the French demand that other nations be notified separately of any concrete proposals which might be developed from the pourparlers, rather than collectively in conference. The motive of this claim was said to be the desire the French then had to avoid a general conference, as scheduled for Geneva, and their wish to escape discussion by others of proposals acceptable to them if any such should result.

Effort to Force France's Hand.

At the end of last week, however, the German Foreign Minister, Dr. von Simons, resumed pourparlers on the same lines with the French Ambassador, M. Laurent, who is said to be favorably disposed toward the German plan of paying France in goods and by tariff privileges. Obviously the improvement of commercial relations was the first step toward its realization. At this early stage of the discussions it could be honestly said that proposals for this improvement were all that Laurent brought to his Government from Berlin. This France promptly did say when von Simons tried to force its hand and score a diplomatic point by informing the English press that Laurent was the bearer of proposals with regard to the direct discussion of the reparation question between France and Germany.

In point of fact Laurent had nothing more than a proposal preliminary to the reparations discussion, namely, the improvement of commercial relations. From the point of view of policy it was clearly impossible for the French Government to let Frenchmen or any one else think that direct discussion with Germany had been substituted, not only for the settlement of the question by the Reparation Commission, as France had been demanding, but even for the settlement by a general conference, which it had been trying to avoid.

The net result of von Simond's disclosure has been to set France's face definitely in the direction of a general conference, toward which for the other reasons above mentioned she was already slowly moving.

Rejection of German Plan Forecast.

PARIS, Oct. 8 (Associated Press).—At the Ministry of Foreign Affairs today the correspondent of The Associated Press was informed that the new German proposition with regard to reparations, brought to Paris from Berlin by Charles Laurent, the French Ambassador to Germany, was very much the same as that presented at the Spa conference, and that it would probably be rejected.

The German plan includes the rebuilding of the devastated regions of France by a German syndicate over which France would have no control, and through which it is believed Germany would profit materially. It was added that there was a probability that France later might alter her position, but at present there was no indication of it.

It was also the impression of the Foreign Office that the note of Earl Curzon of Kedleston, the British Foreign Secretary, asking about the projected Geneva conference, would receive a polite but firm answer, explaining that France did not think the time opportune for such a meeting, inasmuch as the Reparation Commission was far from having completed its preliminary labors.

President Calls for National Participation In Armistice Sunday Memorial Services

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8. — President Wilson today directed that on Sunday, Nov. 14, the American flag be displayed at half-mast on all public buildings and naval and military posts "as a token of the nation's participation in the memorial services held for the heroic American soldiers, sailors, marines and others who gave their lives to their country in the World War."

The President also authorized this statement:

"There has been transmitted to me a suggestion that I name Sunday, Nov. 14, as Armistice Sunday, in order that the religious services held throughout the country on that day may be given an especial note of remembrance for the heroic services and sacrifices of those who died for America in the World War.

"The selection of a formal day which shall annually be set aside to commemorate our participation in the World War will some day doubtless be effected through legislation, and already Memorial Day, rich in heroic memories, has acquired additional significance as being appropriate also to the commemoration of the heroes of the World War. I am, however, so heartily in favor of the suggestion that has been made that I take this occasion to express publicly my approval of the idea.

"Nov. 11, 1918, will always be memorable as the beginning of the end of the most terrible and destructive of all wars. Our beloved country took a noble part in hastening the arrival of the day hailed by the whole world as the dawn of peace, but close upon the day of victory followed realization of loss, and the anniversary will bring with it solemn thoughts to the minds of every American, memories of brave men who fell, sympathy for their living relatives, and those religious reflections in which nations, like individuals, must seek hope and consolation. That Nov. 14 this year, being the Sunday immediately following the anniversary, should be observed in all our churches by suitable memorial services for the heroic American soldiers, sailors and marines who gave their lives to their country in the World War, seems to me eminently fitting and proper, and I commend the suggestion to those who conduct such services.

"I shall direct that the flag of the United States at all military posts, naval stations and on vessels and on buildings of the United States be displayed at half-mast on that day as a token of the nation's participation in the exercises elsewhere held."

LOOK TO LEAGUE FOR CREDIT PLAN

ALL NATIONS WELL PLEASED

BRUSSELS, Oct. 8 (Associated Press). —The International Financial Conference adjourned this afternoon after listening to Gustav Ador, former President of Switzerland, the presiding officer, read a report to the League of Nations which covered the entire proceedings of the conference.

M. Ador made a brief optimistic address, after which the delegates presented him with a silver platter.

That the international financial conference accomplished all that could be expected from it is the general opinion of the participants, even the Germans, who came to Brussels with some apprehension regarding their reception, and the French, who came with no little skepticism concerning the results of the conference, being much gratified.

The Germans are highly pleased, not only with the work of the conference, but with the manner in which they were treated by every delegation, while the French are distinctly satisfied that the conference proved efficient without, as had been apprehended, France's endangering any French interests.

It is admitted by the delegates that the results of the conference are only a small commencement, but it is thought public opinion will not allow the movement of restoration to be stopped once it is set in motion. It is expected the Council of the League of Nations will lose no time in appointing a committee of financial and business men to begin organization of the international credit scheme, adopted by the conference.

The committee which recommended the international credit plan said in its report that credits should not be accorded directly by governments except in particular cases where national interests or humanity dictated. No single system by itself could provide for the different needs of the various countries, the committee reported, and measures sufficiently elastic to be adaptable to every variety of circumstance were necessary. Therefore, the committee proposed an international organization. After the formation of this organization and its being placed at the disposal of States wishing credit to pay for essential imports, borrowing States would notify the international body concerning the assets they could pledge as security and come to an understanding as to the conditions under which the pledged assets should be administered. Bonds to be issued against these pledges would be used as collateral security for credits covering the cost of the commodities.

The committee proposed that the Council of the League of Nations immediately appoint a committee of financiers and business men to define measures necessary to give practical effect to this idea. The suggestion that bonds used as collaterals be strengthened by international guarantees was not adopted by the committee, which reserved the question for consideration by the proposed League committee. An international clearing house and an international understanding to avoid double taxation also were proposed by the committee.

"The Brussels Conference will accomplish great good," the statement says, "by calling the world's attention to the fact that two and two still make four, that expenditure has a natural relation to income, that prices must be high when stocks have been depleted and production is low; that waste makes necessities dear, and that paper money is worth exactly what it will buy."

Mr. Boyden remarks that the feature of the conference was the absence of national prejudice, jealousy and hostility.

"The world really got together here," the statement continues. "As always happens when men get together, we found it easy to become friends and exchange views; to agree with pleasure and disagree without anger. The spirit of the conference exemplified a will to promote among nations the co-operative spirit for which the League of Nations stands."

Mr. Boyden characterizes the treatment of the situation by the conference as the prescribing of well known simple remedies, and says it acted wisely in "placing chief reliance on the recuperative power of the patient, helped by mother nature."

FIVE NATIONS OPEN CABLE CONFERENCE

SECTIONS DIVIDE FOR WORK

Five Organized to Deal with Various Plans for Improving Communications.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The initial session of the preliminary conference of the International Communications Conference was held at the State Department late this afternoon with delegates present from the five principal allied and associated powers—Italy, Japan, Great Britain, France and the United States. During its sessions the date, meeting place and agenda for the main, or worldwide, conference on international communications, which is to be held soon after the conclusion of the preliminary conference, will be arranged.

Agreement as to the advantages to be derived from improved facilities for international communications and a spirit of friendly co-operation characterized the opening session of the conference. The conference, at the suggestion of Japanese Ambassador, Baron Shidehara, elected as President Norman H. Davis, one of the American delegates. M. Lanel of the French delegation was chosen Vice President of the preliminary conference.

In the absence of Secretary Colby, Mr. Davis as acting Secretary of State opened the meeting with an address of welcome in which, speaking in behalf of the President of the United States and the Secretary of State, he pointed out the especial satisfaction of the United States Government that the first preliminary conference ever held to deal with electrical communications in a comprehensive way should be convened in this country.

Various important questions relating to electrical communication throughout the world are to come before the conference. Chief among these will be the questions of allocating the cables ceded by Germany to the principal allied and associated powers, and the problem of increased efficiency of the existing service and unhampered facilities for establishing new service. The relation of improved facilities and of new service to promote international understanding and amity throughout the world, was emphasized by the acting Secretary of State in his opening remarks.

Responses to the greeting of welcome were made by M. Lanel, Minister Plenipotentiary, representing the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of France; F. J. Brown of the General Post Office of Great Britain; Baron Camumillo Romano Avezzana, the Italian Ambassador, and Baron Kijuro Shidehaha, the Japanese Ambassador. Each in turn emphasized the importance to international good feeling, commerce and progress of having improved facilities and worldwide opportunities for electrical communication.

It was agreed that the work of the preliminary conference should be divided into five sections, which should be organized under sub-committees containing representatives from each delegation. The problems to be discussed by those committees are: First, the disposition of the seized German cables; second, the radio protocol, in its technical aspects, as drawn up by the Peace Conference sub-committee last year; third, the formation of a universal communications union, divided into a section on telegraph conventions and a secton on radio conventions; fourth, international cable and radio laws and cable landing rights; fifth, the improvement of communication facilities between the five great powers which are parties to this conference.

The American Secretariat of the conference was announced to be under the direction of Dr. Walter W. McLaren, with offices at the Navy Building, where facilities will also be provided for the Secretariats of each country represented at the conference.

MORE MEN FOR MANCHURIA.

Japan Officially Announces Intention to Put Down Bandits There.

TOKIO, Oct. 7 (Associated Press).—Japan's intention to forward additional troops to Manchurian towns near Korea is announced in official communiqués today. The troops are to be sent, it is stated, on account of bandit raids which are terrorising the populations.

The Chinese residents of the districts, the communiqués say, are disappointed over the inadequacy of the Chinese troops and police and desire the dispatch of Japanese soldiers.

GREY INSISTS IRISH SOLVE OWN PROBLEM

Asserts That Settlement Will Never Be Reached Until Ireland Is Made Responsible.

COMPEL FACTIONS TO AGREE

They Would Do So If British Support Were Withdrawn, He Intimates.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Viscount Grey has addressed to The Westminster Gazette a further communication regarding his proposals for solution of the Irish problem which were published on Sept. 29. There is widespread recognition of the fact that Grey's manifesto, as it has been called, gave a new turn to the old difficulties, and although his proposals have been denied in some quarters as counsels of despair, they contain some promise of the germs of a potential settlement.

In his second communication Lord Grey refers to Lord Morley's letter to The London Times as "showing the right spirit in which to think of Ireland," and then he deals with the Asquith letter to the same paper.

"Mr. Asquith speaks of our trust, by which I understand him to mean British responsibility for the domestic Government of Ireland," Lord Grey says, adding: "I no longer feel that as a trust only it is a failure. It always has been politically a failure, and now it is morally, as well as politically, a worse failure than ever. The way to fulfill our trust to Ireland is to wind up the British management of purely Irish affairs as soon as we can. To enforce this point, let me submit the following consideration:

"Suppose a British political party in favor of dominion home rule won a general election tomorrow. What would be the feeling of Irishmen, even of those prepared to accept dominion home rule? If I were in their place I think I should be going around saying something like this: 'This is merely a continuation of the same old futile story. It will fail like previous things of the same kind. We are told that previous home rule proposals failed from circumstances beyond the control of the Governments that introduced them. That may be true, but all that we Irishmen know is that for thirty-four years nothing has come of it all, and we feel sick, hopeless and desperate.'

Must Make Ireland Responsible.

"It is not easy to be sure that we can by any declaration of policy get over this blighting but natural want of confidence. There is still the House of Lords, there is still Ulster, the veto rocks on which previous home rule bills have foundered are still visible to all eyes. This time it is vital to initiate an Irish policy in a way to convince Irishmen that it will certainly put an end to the Government they so much dislike, and give them the management of their own internal affairs.

"The best I can suggest is to make it clear that the very starting point of our policy is our conviction of the incapacity of the British Parliament to manage purely Irish affairs, and our determination to put an end to this tragic failure, and I want to see it clear beyond the possibility of misconception that within certain limits, frankly and honestly stated by us, Irishmen are not only free to arrange their own government but have to do it. In no other way can I see how to get the Nationalists and Ulstermen to realize that they must take account of each other's point of view and make concessions to each other. Protestant Ulster is quite strong enough to make her own terms with the rest of Ireland.

"But as long as we go on allowing it to be understood that, if Protestant Ulstermen and the rest of Ireland do not agree, we will still be responsible for the internal affairs of Ireland, they will never agree with one another, and them will block in London or defeat in Ireland whatever scheme of Irish home rule is initiated in the British Parliament."

In conclusion Lord Grey writes: "It was suggested the other day that my letter was a counsel of pessimism. I do indeed think that we have made, are making and shall always make a failure of British management of Irish internal affairs. But this is not real pessimism. The real and worst pessimism is to hold that the majority of Irishmen are absolutely unreasonable and irreconcilable, and that there is nothing for it but a settlement by war and conquest. Continuance of the present scandalous state of administration continues, but we have to hold, neither the right nor the need to regard the whole political situation as hopeless until we have made a better effort at settlement than the present policy of the Government."

ASSAIL AMERICANS ON IRISH ATTITUDE

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Morning Post today says:

"The Sinn Fein and Irish-Americans are filling the newspapers of the United States with lying accounts of the conduct of British soldiers and loyal constables in Ireland. For party purposes a great many American newspapers are instilling into the minds of their readers hatred of England. The Democratic candidate for the Presidency has declared that he is in favor of the independence of Ireland and of interference by the League of Nations with the domestic concerns of this country.

"America at one time had a rebellion of her own. One section of the States wanted to separate itself from the other section. As in Ireland, the rebels raised an army and set up a Government of their own. The Federal authorities accepted the challenge, for it saw the danger, and was determined to prevent it. American separatists, like the Irish rebels, went in for guerilla warfare. They also wanted liberty to trade. How did the Federal military authorities deal with their opponents?"

The Morning Post answers the question by giving an extract from "Annals of Our Time," under the date of Aug. 30, 1864. It is a copy of a proclamation by the Federal General Paine, commanding in Western Kentucky, and The Morning Post italicizes the following passages:

"I will teach you that, having encouraged this rebellion, having comforted and aided your country's enemies, you must and shall reap a traitor's reward. * * * loyal citizen be the only one left with rights at this time. * * * I shall shoot every guerrilla taken in my district, and if your Southern brethren retaliate by shooting a Federal soldier I will walk out five of your rich bankers, brokers and cotton men and make you kneel down and shoot them. * * * If a Union man is murdered by these guerrillas here the same fate awaits five of you gentlemen."

Sir W. Ridgeway Has Similar Views.

Sir West Ridgeway, who was Under-Secretary for Ireland from 1887 to 1892, in a letter to The London Times, condemns vigorously the "craven policy which the British public seems to adopt" toward the Irish question. They desire, he declared, to give Ireland any form of government "which assassins who terrorize her may dictate, not because it will benefit Ireland—quite the contrary, for they well know that if Ireland is ruled by Sinn Feiners it is doomed to economic ruin and misery—and will be in a chronic state of hostility toward the United Kingdom. * * * A few hundred Irish-Americans have usurped the government, and by a cowardly system of outrage (they never fight in the open) they have terrorized the population into tolerance of their rule and have frightened even distinguished Englishmen into proposing the surrender of Ireland into their bloodstained hands. * * *

"It is beyond doubt that any policy which does not involve, at least by implication, an Irish republic, is mere camouflage, and that its authors must know perfectly well that it would be repudiated by Irishmen, terrorised as they are by the Irish-Americans who have made a hunting field of that unhappy country. * * *

"We are threatened with the anger of America. Indeed, Governor Cox has declared that Ireland will achieve her independence by the barbarous methods which she has adopted, and if so America will guarantee that independence. Well may we ask why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

"America has annexed the Philippine Islands and has refused the Filipinos the independence and self-government for which they clamor so loudly and for which, until lately, they had been fighting. Yet the Philippine Islands are no menace to America's independence and safety. And they are occupied because it is desirable that America should have a strong strategic harbor in Eastern seas."

Ridgeway concludes by declaring that there was much excuse, if not justification, for reprisals in Ireland. He says: "Neither the constabulary nor army will tolerate murder of their comrades with impunity. There must be reprisals for these murders. But let the reprisals be made by the Government and not by the men. Hold a town or village responsible for a murder committed within its neighborhood. Arrest principal inhabitants as hostages, levy fines, and, if necessary, as a last resource, destroy a building here and there. In short, treat the Sinn Feiners as they claim to be treated—as the inhabitants of an enemy country."

ATTACK SOLDIERS IN CORK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

CORK, Oct. 8.—A daring attack by armed civilians on troops in a motor lorry here this morning ended in the death of one soldier and the wounding of three others and at least five civilians.

An official account of the affair was issued as follows: "At 9 A. M. today a military lorry driving into Barrack Street, Cork, found its progress blocked by a wagon drawn across the road. As it came to a standstill four bombs were hurled at the lorry, two of which exploded inside it. Four soldiers were hit, one of them dying almost immediately.

"Fire was then opened on the lorry from several houses in the street and was replied to by the uninjured soldiers. During the melee three civilians were wounded."

I learn, however, that the number of civilians wounded was five. The attack was delivered by a party of twelve men who, shortly before the lorry arrived on the scene, broke up pontoon bridges demolished houses in Barrack Street. When the vehicle pulled up in consequence of the wagon having been placed across the road, men in the ruins flung several bombs at the soldiers. The first bomb struck the side of the lorry and exploded without doing any damage, but the second, more accurately aimed, burst in the midst of the troops, two of whom were seen to fall. Then a fusillade of revolver firing was opened by the men behind the ruins, the uninjured soldiers replying vigorously with their rifles. One of the attackers was seen to fall wounded, but some of his comrades rushed to his assistance and carried him to safety. They and the rest of the party then escaped, some jumping into a motor car which was waiting near the scene.

At the time of the attack there were many people in the street, and it was among these that the civilian casualties occurred. The military authorities and auxiliary police reinforcements were on the scene, together with an armored car.

MACSWINEY IS WEAKER.

He Suffers Great Distress in Trying to Speak, Bulletin Says.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Lord Mayor MacSwiney was more refreshed this morning at Brixton Prison, having passed a fairly good night. He had some sleep, says a bulletin issued this morning by the Irish Self-determination League, but to his relatives MacSwiney seemed weaker and much more exhausted.

The Lord Mayor suffers great distress after saying even a single word, the bulletin declares. He tries to whisper something, gasps, becomes very exhausted and is unable to continue.

The league bulletin issued at 12:30 P. M. said the Mayor was suffering from trouble with his heart and was unable to hold conversation with his relatives.

Mayor MacSwiney was much brighter tonight, according to the night bulletin of the league. Although very weak, it says, he was not so much exhausted.

ACCUSES MINISTER ON SWISS LOAN HERE

Socialist Charges Commission Was Paid—Parliament Asks to be Informed on Future Loans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERNE, Oct. 8.—The 100,000,000 francs loan recently raised in the United States by the Swiss Government has just been discussed in the Swiss Parliament. The Socialist Party criticised the manner in which the loan was raised, that is, without the consent of Parliament, and also what they described as the exorbitant rate of interest.

It was certain, one Socialist member said, that if the Swiss Government had offered Swiss capitalists 8 per cent. it could easily have raised 1,000,000,000 francs for "the Swiss capitalists are patriotic enough to lend money at that rate."

Another well-known Socialist Deputy, M. Naine, accused the Swiss Minister of Finance of having negotiated the loan with closed doors and letting no one know exactly what transactions were taking place in his office. "By doing everything behind our backs," Naine continued, "you have violated the Constitution. Moreover, in financial circles disgraceful accusations are being repeated against you which I will not repeat here."

The Finance Minister then challenged the Socialist member to repeat the accusations before a court of justice. Naine, who edits a Socialist newspaper, said he had already published the charge against the Finance Minister in his paper.

The Parliament approved the Government's action in raising the United States loan, but requested the Government to refer no more such loans without consulting Parliament first.

There are public bequests of $665,000, including $100,000 for the erection of a community house in Dalton and an additional $100,000 to maintain it. The total public bequests to the town of Dalton and its institutions aggregate $365,000. Four institutions in Pittsfield receive $50,000 each.

Mrs. Crane receives $750,000 outright and the life income from a trust fund of $1,000,000. Winthrop M. Crane, Jr., who succeeds his father as business head of the Crane mills at Dalton, receives $1,000,000 outright and is named residuary legatee. Trust funds of $250,000 are provided for each of the sons, Stephen and Bruce, and a trust fund of $300,000 for Louise Crane. They are the minor children of Mr. Crane by his present wife. Stephen and Bruce also receive two-thirds of the testator's interest in the business of the Crane mills at Dalton under trusteeship. Trust funds of $50,000 are created for each of the three children of Winthrop Crane.

The trust fund of $1,000,000 is to be divided at Mrs. Crane's death among the children, Stephen, Bruce and Louise. Mrs. Crane also receives all the personal effects in the Dalton home and the life use of the estate which also, at her death, goes to the three children. If Stephen and Bruce Crane should die before reaching the age of 21 their interest in the Crane mills goes to Winthrop Crane, who is authorized to manage their interests until they reach the age of 25.

Mr. Crane's private secretary, Ralph B. Marean, receives $30,000 and is named an executor and trustee with Mrs. Josephine Boardman Crane, the widow, and Winthrop M. Crane, Jr.

The original will was executed Dec. 10, 1917, and there are two subsequent codicils, the last of which was dated June 3, 1920, just before Mr. Crane started for the Republican Convention at Chicago. In this codicil provision is made for the Community House at Dalton and additions are made to the personal bequests, outside the immediate family, of which there are a total of 49, ranging in sums from $500 to $30,000, and which total $182,000.

Annuities of $6,000 each are provided for Mr. Crane's two sisters, Mrs. Harry Ogden Bates of Morristown, N. J., and Miss Clara L

COURTS AIM TO FIX STANDARDS OF RENT

Municipal Justices Hope to Establish What Is Reasonable in Various Neighborhoods.

UNIFORMITY IS SOUGHT

Landlords, Not Tenants, Now Seeking Compromise—Test Case on New Laws Brought.

Announcement that the Committee on Rules of the Municipal Court is preparing recommendations for standards to be applied in determining the reasonableness of rent under the recent rent legislation was made yesterday by President Justice Aaron J. Levy and Justice F. Spiegelberg, Chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Presumably, the Municipal Court Justices will try to fix standards for the various neighborhoods, so that a rent adjudged reasonable for an apartment house of a particular type may be considered reasonable for similar apartments in similar houses in the same neighborhood. The proposed action of the Justices is in line with a spirit of compromise which has become evident lately among many of the landlords. The Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering and many of the tenants.

Many Tenants Seek Advice.

Arthur J. W. Hilly, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Rent Profiteering, said that 500 persons sought the committee for advice or assistance during the day. The majority, he said, were tenants who asked advice on what to do with checks for rent at the old rate, which had been returned to them by landlords who insisted upon payment of increased rentals. Mr. Hilly said he advised these tenants to keep their checks as proof that payment of rent at the old rate had been proferred in case of possible legal action by the landlords.

Mr. Hilly said that there were also a considerable number of landlords who asked the committee to try to effect adjustment with tenants.

Mr. Hilly said that the spirit of compromise in rent cases seemed to be growing and that landlords in many instances were now willing to meet their tenants and determine a fair rent.

Realty Men Confer on Policy.

Julius H. Zieser, Chairman of the Legal Board of the Real Estate Interests of New York, a newly formed organization of property owners, said that a conference of members and officers had been held during the day, but that no definite course of action had been determined. "The constitutionality of the new rent laws will undoubtedly be tested," he said, "particularly on the question of eviction of tenants and the right of the property owner to possession of his property. We have not yet reached the point where the State can take away private property except under certain conditions."

Objection to the proposed city ordinance to exempt new buildings from taxation, introduced in the Board of Aldermen by Alderman William T. Collins, was voiced by a number of property owners and builders. The proposed ordinance, they said, instead of directly following the permissive law enacted by the Legislature, which grants municipalities the power to exempt from taxation buildings used exclusively for dwelling purposes built since April 1 and those which shall be built within the next two years, provides for an examination by the Tenement House Commissioner, the issuance of a certificate by him and the unanimous approval of the Board of Estimate in each case.

Such procedure, it was said, would make it possible for the Tenement House Commissioner or any member of the Board of Estimate to discriminate between builders, who would not know until after they had prepared their plans at great expense and filed their applications whether their buildings would be exempt or not. The ordinance in its present form, it was said, would be likely to retard rather than to stimulate new construction, as builders would be reluctant to go ahead with the possibility that they were running into a lawsuit against the city. What is desired by the builders is a simple ordinance, directly following the State law, with a clause directing the Tax Board to exempt for the specified period all construction of buildings for dwelling places coming under the law's provisions.

Edward A. MacDougall, President of the Queensboro Corporation, 50 East Forty-second Street, said that much new construction might be expected if a satisfactory ordinance was passed.

To Test New Rent Laws.

An action to test the constitutionality of the new rent laws was heard yesterday by Judge Julian W. Mack in the United States District Court in the suit brought by the Marcus Brown Holding Company, a New Jersey corporation, owner of the apartment house at 215 West Ninety-first Street, against Arnold Pollak, a tenant, and District Attorney Edward Swann. The plaintiff seeks to oust Mr. Pollak and to restrain the District Attorney from prosecuting the Marcus Brown Holding Company for failing to furnish him service.

Pollak signed a lease in July, 1918, for five rooms at $1,600 a year, the lease to begin Oct. 1, 1918, and to expire on Sept. 30, 1920. On Feb. 20, 1920, the plaintiff rented the apartment occupied by Pollak to Minnie E. Griffen at $2,300 a year, the lease to become effective on Oct. 1, 1920. Pollak signified his willingness to pay a reasonable rent, but refused to move.

Judge Mack adjourned the hearing to Oct. 19 so that he might call two other Federal Judges to sit with him on a matter involving an interpretation of the Constitution and to give Attorney General Charles D. Newton an opportunity to defend a State law.

Lockout Tenant Complains.

Alexander Cummings, a lecturer and President of the University Forum, which meets weekly at Amsterdam Avenue and West Ninety-third Street, complained to Magistrate Schwab in West Side Court that he had been denied access to two rooms he had occupied for the last four years in a private house at 316 West Eighty-sixth Street by Miss Frances Wallace, who recently purchased the property. Mr. Cummings said he went to the house Thursday night and found the door to his room padlocked. While Mr. Cummings was in court Miss Wallace obtained a summons for him, returnable Oct. 14, charging him with disorderly conduct. The Magistrate tried unsuccessfully to effect an adjustment.

Magistrate John F. Davies of the Seventh District Municipal Court announced that he had appointed an arbitration committee of prominent Harlem residents which he hoped would arrest the progress of many rent disputes. Captain Charles A. Goldsmith, formerly of the Mayor's Rent Committee; Irving Kurtz of the Harlem Board of Commerce and other Harlem citizens will meet twice a week in the Seventh District Court House to hear disputes and try to settle them out of court.

Relatives of Mrs. Rachel Tobak, 50 years old, of 104 Pitt Street testified that frequent compulsory moving had affected her mind when she was arraigned before Magistrate William R. Sweetser on a charge of unlawful entry. Mrs. Tobak was charged with having entered the apartment of Harry Abrams, 200 East Houston Street, where, it is alleged, she started to pack his household goods and hired a van to move them away. Relatives of Mrs. Tobak said she had been forced to move six times in the last year, and that she had entered a number of other apartments in the same manner. Magistrate Sweetser committed her to Bellevue Hospital for observation.

Lawyers Offer Aid to Lockwood.

Following a meeting of the Joint Legislative Housing Committee in the rooms of the Bar Association yesterday, State Senator Charles C. Lockwood, Chairman, announced that several lawyers had agreed to act as voluntary counsel for the committee in cases where tenants and their attorneys had appealed to the committee for advice in the interpretation of the new rent laws. Senator Lockwood said these included Samuel Untermeyer, Attorney General Charles D. Newton, Harold G. Aron, Professor of Real Property Law in the New York Law School, and Elmer G. Sammis.

"The statement that the committee has been idle is wholly untrue," said Senator Lockwood. "Since the passage of the rent laws, many cases were brought immediately, and the tenants and their attorneys have appealed to the committee for help. In order to assure a proper presentation of these cases to the courts, and in view of the great number of cases, eminent counsel were induced to volunteer their services."

ARCHBISHOP A LEGATEE.

Laurence Gurnee's Will Also Carries Bequests to Catholic Churches.

The will of Laurence Gurnee, filed for probate here yesterday, carries a legacy of $2,500 to Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes and these other legacies to Catholic institutions:

The Missionary Society of St. Paul, the Paulist Fathers, at Fifty-ninth Street and Sixth Avenue, $2,500; Society of St. Vincent de Paul, Church of St. Francis Assisi branch, Church of Holy Cross branch and Church of the Holy Innocent branch, $3,000 each, and the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, $2,000.

The rest of the estate is to be turned into two trust funds for the benefit Mr. Gurnee's nieces, Agnes Dunne of 259 West Forty-ninth Street and Theresa E. Ford of Seventh Avenue and West 116th Street.

TEXTILE FACTORIES CUT TIME AND WAGES

Offer of Lawrence Workers to Reduce Pay Fails to Stop Closing.

SHUTDOWN IN NEW BEDFORD

BOSTON, Oct. 8.—A large number of mill operatives in New England will be idle for two days next week as a result of plans announced in various textile manufacturing centres today. In many instances it was explained that with Tuesday a holiday it was considered inadvisable to operate the mills on Monday, while in other cases mills shut down tonight for a vacation until Wednesday.

In addition, a silk manufacturing company at Central Falls, R. I., announced a 15 per cent. reduction in wages and a hosiery and underwear mill at Lowell refused a proposition from its employes that a wage reduction be put into effect to avert a complete shutdown. A shoe factory at Manchester, N. H., was closed for an indefinite period and a cotton mill at Lowell was shut down until Nov. 1.

Two cloth mills and two yarn mills at New Bedford will be closed all next week and most of the other mills in that city will shut down Monday and Tuesday. Many of these mills have been on a four-day schedule for some time.

The Amoskeag mills at Manchester, N. H., and the American Woolen Company's mills at Lawrence closed tonight until Wednesday. Two large shoe factories at Manchester will be shut down from tomorrow noon until Wednesday. Three cotton mills will go on a four-day schedule next week.

LOWELL, Mass., Oct. 8.—Employes of the Lawrence Manufacturing Company, hoping to make it possible to continue operations at the company's hosiery and underwear mills here, have offered to accept a reduction in wages.

Everett H. Walker, company agent, said today that there would be no market at present for the company's products, because of high prices, and that he was unable to act on the employes' proposition at this time. An aggregate of 2,500 persons are employed in the hosiery and underwear departments. The underwear machines were shut down today and the hosiery workers will be laid off soon, the agent announced.

The Bay State Cotton Corporation, employing about 600 hands, shut down last night and will not resume operations again until Nov. 1. The company, it is stated, wants to reduce its stock, production being greater than the sales.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Oct. 8.—Two cloth mills and two yarn mills here, employing 4,700 hands, will be closed all next week, while the majority of the other plants will shut down for Monday and Columbus Day only. For several weeks many of the cotton mills have been running on a schedule of four days each week. Indications are that the output for next week will be cut to less than 25 per cent. of normal.

The mills, which will close for the week, are the Tsber, Nashawena, Nonquitt and City.

CENTRAL FALLS, R. I., Oct. 8.—The Pennsylvania Textile Company today announced a reduction of 15 per cent. in wages. The cut, which affects 300 weavers of silk goods, goes into effect at once.

LILLE, France, Oct. 8.—The textile industry of this city and in Roubaix is passing through a serious crisis. In several important factories the employes are working only three or four days a week and a betterment of the situation is not in sight. During the last two months orders have diminished by about 40 per cent.

BRIDGEPORT, Oct. 8.—The Bullard Machine Tool Company will close its plant here for two weeks beginning next Monday, it was announced today. One thousand persons are employed there.

STEEL WORKERS LAID OFF.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Twenty-five hundred workers have been laid off in the steel mills at East Chicago, Indiana Harbor and Gary in the last few days. Reductions in other industries are said to be contemplated.

Steel men say the general contraction in personnel is an effort to get the purchasing power of the hour wage unit back on a pre-war basis and not an indication of reduction in output. Payrolls in all lines, they say, were inflated during the war to take in many non-essential and inefficient workers. Department heads in the steel industry say gangs of twenty-five men are now doing the work that thirty performed a short time ago.

For the first time since the manufacture of ammunition for the Allies was begun five years ago the Calumet industrial region of Indiana is without a shortage of labor and crowds of men seeking employment may be seen at the gates of the mills.

The biggest payroll cut was made by the Inland Steel Company at Indiana Harbor. The three shifts in the structural mills were reduced to one, throwing between 1,500 and 2,000 men out of work.

START OPEN-SHOP CAMPAIGN

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—A campaign for the establishment of the open shop among Illinois manufacturers was launched today at a luncheon given by the Illinois Manufacturers' Association.

"The open shop is the most vital question now before American industry," declared John M. Glenn, Secretary of the association, "and we hope that this gathering of manufacturers will prove the foundation for a compact open-shop campaign throughout the State."

BATTERIES

Sending Your Words Through Space

If shipwreck or accident damaged the electric generator that sends a wireless message, and were no other power available, many lives might pay the penalty. For this reason wireless stations on land and sea have storage batteries for reserve power.

Ninety per cent of the Marconi system and most of the government and private plants use Exide Batteries.

Ninety-five per cent of the central lighting stations of our great cities use Exide for emergency power; nearly every message sent over the telephone system is carried by the current from an Exide Battery. Factories, mines, railways, farm homes, industries of all kinds as well as various governments, depend for infallible power on Exide Batteries.

There is an Exide Battery for every purpose, made by the oldest and largest manufacturers of storage batteries in the world.

COAL PRIORITY ORDER EXTENDED

BECOMES EFFECTIVE OCT. 11

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today extended its preferential order for gondola cars for coal mines to apply to all States east of Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico. Henceforth railroads must furnish this type of car first to coal mines in all the great territory of the United States indicated.

The commission issued an order in June giving priority to the coal mines for this type of car, the order being effective east of the Mississippi. But the extended order issued today is based upon the conclusion that still more coal is necessary for the nation.

Despite the fact that labor troubles and other factors seemed to have a delaying effect, the coal production up to this date of the year has been better than that of 1919 or 1917. But the increased production has been absorbed by the Northwest and New England. Appeals are now coming from Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Oklahoma, Texas and other States.

Plans have been formulated by the commission so that 2,100 cars shall be moved daily for use in Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Eastern Kentucky, Eastern Tennessee, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

In its statement issued today the commission, after detailing the increase in coal production, says:

"The increased production has been consumed in a large part by industries, by railroads and other public utilities, by the Northwest and by New England and by exportation. There has not been a sufficient production of the sizes of coal for domestic purposes to satisfy the present demands for such uses. Vigorous complaints have been received in behalf of the domestic users of coal in Indiana, Ohio and Michigan. Complaints have also been received from Oklahoma, Texas and other Western States. It is imperative that the production of coal be even further increased. To accomplish this it will be necessary to increase the car supply for coal.

"As a means to such end, the commission has today entered an order requiring all railroads east of the eastern boundary of the States of Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico to furnish coal cars to coal mines in preference to any other use. The orders of this character heretofore issued have applied only east of the Mississippi River. The present order runs until the further order of the commission and will be relaxed as soon as it appears practicable to do so.

"As a further means of accomplishing the object sought, all outstanding permits for the use of coal cars for transporting other freight are canceled, effective midnight, Oct. 10. Thereafter, until the domestic coal situation is well in hand, permits of this character will be issued only upon a showing of public interest. Arrangements will be made for the continuance of the movement of certain essentials, such as sugar beets, to factories.

"Plans have been worked out in conjunction with representatives of the coal operators and of the railroads by which it is expected the needs of the domestic consumers of coal will be substantially met. The program contemplates that approximately 2,100 cars will be transported daily for domestic use in Indiana, Ohio, Michigan, Eastern Kentucky, Eastern Tennessee, Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Attention is also being given to the needs of domestic consumers in other States.

"By Service Order 9, entered July 13, authorizing preference and priority in the car supply for transporting coal for the current needs of public utilities and public institutions, those utilities and institutions have been kept going from day to day and generally have been able to accumulate some stocks of coal and are in a much better condition with respect to coal than they were in July.

"For that reason, and to avoid the inequalities in the distribution of cars at the mines which necessarily result from a priority order, a new order has been entered, No. 20, which indicates that real emergency needs of public utilities and public institutions will be cared for in special cases. After Oct. 14 a preferential car supply to meet such needs will be afforded by the railroads only upon approval by the commission.

"Although the railroads serving anthracite mines have furnished such mines close to a 100 per cent. car supply, and although the anthracite production up to Sept. 25 exceeds that of the same period last year, the production this year has been retarded by the recent coal miners' strike in the Pennsylvania anthracite mines and by the switchmen's strike which commenced in April. There is a shortage of anthracite coal in some of the New England States, due largely to embargoes placed by certain New England railroads in effect during a substantial part of the time between April and Aug. 24. These embargoes have now been modified, and it is expected that the rail movement of anthracite coal to New England will proceed unhampered."

Miss Nobuko Hara Sings Butterfly.

"Madam Butterfly" was sung at the Manhattan last night to "standing room only," some hundreds of persons being left outside the big theatre for lack of room within. Miss Nobuko Hara of Tokio, youngest of several Japanese who have essayed the Puccini-Belasco heroine, and representing her country's own recent cultivation of Western music, was received with an ovation that was repeated at many curtain calls. Her slender grace, the step and pose of a true Oriental, and the voice, plaintive, immature, but of beautiful high notes, won the sympathetic crowd. Messrs. Corallo and Valle were the American Navy Lieutenant and the Consul.

London String Quartet Applauded.

The London String Quartet, which is completing tonight the cycle of Beethoven's chamber music in which it ventured to introduce itself to America, won at Aeolian Hall last evening a demonstration of popular appreciation, as it had previously and increasingly gained critical praise. Again the later quartets of the master, contrasting with those earlier heard, showed the players at their best. The works reached in order of time were the Opus 130, in B flat major, and Opus 131, in C sharp minor. A house for the first time filled to the doors, and including not a few persons standing, called the British visitors out many times at their program's close.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Don't Tell" will be withdrawn from the Nora Bayes Theatre tonight.

"Hitchy-Koo, 1920" will open at the New Amsterdam Theatre on Tuesday night, Oct. 19, instead of the 18th.

Nancy Lee, well known in motion pictures, has been engaged for "The Dauntless Three," in which Robert Warwick will be starred.

Wins Prize for American Overture.

Mortimer Wilson of this city won by unanimous verdict Hugo Riesenfeld's $500 prize for an American overture at a hearing at the Rialto Theatre yesterday morning. His work, entitled "New Orleans," was one of three chosen from over eighty submitted to be played to the final judges, who were Artur Bodansky, Victor Herbert, O. G. Sonneck, Carl Deis, Edward Faick, Josiah Zuro, Victor Wagner, Frederick Stahlberg and Lion Vanderheim. Mr. Wilson, whose home is at 651 West 160th Street, was born in Iowa in 1876. His suite, "From My Youth," was performed by the Philharmonic two years ago.

MUSIC NOTES.

Tom Burke, the Irish tenor, will make his only Brooklyn appearance in a concert at the Academy on Tuesday evening, the night of Columbus Day.

Geraldine Farrar will open on Nov. 4 a series of concerts in Newark, to include later Caruso, Galli-Curci, Louise Homer and Schumann-Heink.

Stocks of nearly all classes were pressed for sale in yesterday's transactions, the resultant price concessions being most extensive among industrial issues and those railway shares which had risen with vigor during the last few weeks. While realising evidently played a real part in the movement, the erratic character of fluctuations of manufacturing company stocks indicated the presence of active short sellers. Recessions in many cases ran from 1 to more than 4 points. An exception was supplied by local traction shares and improvement of bonds of street railway concerns occurred in the afternoon. Liberty bonds were inclined lower and the corporation bond list was more irregular than the day before, without, however, disclosing weakness.

The attention of speculators was turned toward the money market, not only because the call loan renewal rate of 7½ per cent. was the highest since Sept. 2, but on account of the weighty transaction due next week. When balances were accumulated here during August and September by the French Treasury against the Anglo-French loan maturity round amounts of such funds were lent out on call. The lender naturally preferred to get 6 to 7 per cent. or slightly more which the demand loan market afforded than to immediately use the money to buy up 5 per cent. Anglo-French bonds at prices close to the retirement price. These loans, it is learned, have gradually been reduced in the last fortnight, in a way to prevent disturbance of the general loan account outside of causing the rate to swing upward from 7 to 8 per cent. But it is believed in stock market quarters that there will be additional calling of loans in connection with French Government operations before next Friday, the 15th. On the day the great loan matures the United States Treasury will have about $130,000,000 interest on the Fourth Liberty loan to pay, coincident with the liquidation of $170,000,000 maturing certificates of indebtedness. A new certificate issue of $100,000,000 five months' 5¾ per cents are being offered, so that the transaction in Government paper partly offset one another. But it would not be surprising if there was some disturbance of call loan supplies and rates for several days surrounding the mid-month distribution of cash to holders of the foreign and domestic loans. The expected tightening of money appeared to direct professional dealings in the stock market yesterday in part. Call money again reached 8 per cent. in the early afternoon.

Wheat fell sharply at Chicago, future contracts reaching new low records. The December option left off with a net decline for the day of nearly 6 cents per bushel. Viewed in the light of the Government's crop report as of Oct. 1, received after the market closed, it would seem that prices are being shaped chiefly by considerations which have less to do with statistics than in normal business periods. The indicated yield of 750,641,000 bushels of wheat for 1920 is decidedly disappointing when contrasted with the hope of an 800,000,000 bushel crop on July 1. A return of this amount would be 160,000,000 bushels less than in 1919 and 275,000,000 under the record crop of 1915. The deterioration of Spring wheat in September, when harvesting was being completed in the Northwest, lopped 19,000,000 bushels off the indicated yield of Sept. 1, which was a larger decline than had been expected. However, corn continued its splendid outlook of the preceding month, in fact expanded it so far that the possible yield of 3,216,192,000 bushels not only exceeds that of last year by 295,700,000 bushels, but stands 91,000,000 bushels above the greatest crop ever gathered in this country.

Records of wholesale prices prepared by Bradstreet's and Dun's, while dissimilar in result because of different fields covered, disclose marked declines during September. Bradstreet's index number, the average price of more than ninety articles, showed on Oct. 1 a fall of 5.9 per cent. during the month and of 19 per cent. from the maximum point on Feb. 1. Dun's number traced a decline of 4.4 per cent. in September and of 9.9 per cent. from the top of the price movement on May 1. Recessions have been unevenly distributed, but the broad scope tells of decidedly altered conditions in the wholesale markets in recent weeks.

ANGLO-FRENCH LOAN TO BE PAID FRIDAY

British Have Already Arranged to Meet Their $250,000,000 and France Also Is Ready.

$25,000,000 IN GOLD COMING

English Agents Have Bought $200,000,000 Around 95 — French Money Loaned in Market.

Arrangements for meeting the $500,000,000 Anglo-French maturity next Friday virtually are completed. The British arrangements for meeting their share of $250,000,000 were completed some time ago, when the British Chancellor of the Exchequer stated in the House of Commons that the British Treasury had finished its preparations, and within the last few days the French have brought their plans to conclusion also.

Funds to meet the French share of the obligation have been provided roughly, in three ways: By the flotation of a new loan of $100,000,000 in this market; by the shipment of gold bullion to the amount of $20,000,000 to date and approximately $25,000,000 by Friday; and by the accumulation of credits through the sale of other securities, through the foreign exchange market, &c., to the extent of about $125,000,000 to $130,000,000. The flotation of the loan has been consummated, and practically all of the other credits have been raised. Only the final shipment of gold still is to arrive here, and this is expected to come in not later than Monday or Tuesday, and possibly tomorrow.

The French have gone further than this. In order that there should be no last-minute hitch, an arrangement has been made between the Federal Reserve Bank here and the Bank of France in Paris whereby if there should be any deficiency in French funds here on the date of maturity of the loan, the Bank of France will earmark a sufficient amount of gold for the account of the Federal Reserve Bank, and upon cabled advices the latter will pay to the agents of the French Government here, whatever is required. In this way there is absolute assurance that there will be an adequate supply of funds to meet all maturing bonds.

There is some question as to how many of the original Anglo-French bonds will be presented on Friday. The British agents, it has been understood, made very extensive purchases in the open market early in the year when the bonds were around or below 95, and continued their buying for a long time. Unofficially, it has been reported that these purchases amounted to more than $200,000,000, which would leave something less than $50,000,000 to be taken care of for British account now.

What the French have done is even more of a mystery. It was said at one time, also unofficially, that French purchases had been between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000, but this never was confirmed. Since the flotation of the French Government $100,000,000 loan and while the $125,000,000 to $130,000,000 of other credits were being accumulated, it is understood that a good part of the money has been loaned in the money market, where rates were high and offered more profitable employment for the funds than could be had by investment in Anglo-French bonds at only a fraction below par.

Many of these loans have been maturing or have been called in the last few days, and it is expected that there will be more calling of loans next week. But to avert any money stringency, or at least to reduce the stringency to a minimum, it was said by bankers yesterday that comprehensive arrangements had been made to provide new accommodation for borrowers of this money who may require it.

EXPORTS TO FRANCE DROP.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—American exports to France showed a great falling off during the month of August, according to statistics made public here. During July the value of American products imported to this country was $58,961,554, but in August the total was only $38,321,950.

At current rates of exchange, this reduction amounted to almost $60,000,000 francs.

EUROPE SELLING U. S. STEEL.

French and Dutch Holders Disposing of Stock.

Evidence of further liquidation in foreign holdings of United States Steel common shares is shown in figures announced yesterday. The total amount of the junior issue held abroad on Sept. 30 was 323,438 shares, as compared with 342,567 shares on June 30. The decrease came mainly through a decline in the holdings in France and Holland. In the case of the first named the holdings on June 30 were 22,661 shares, as compared with 13,449 shares on Sept. 30. The holdings in Holland in the same period declined by slightly more than 8,000 shares. There was little liquidation of English holdings. The quarter also saw a decline in foreign holdings of preferred stock, the figures of Sept. 30 showing a drop of some 6,000 shares from the 124,846 reported on June 30.

The flow of steel common into investment channels in this country is indicated by the decreased brokerage holdings. Investors' holdings on Sept. 30 amounted to 3,522,900 shares, the highest ever recorded. This represents 69.31 per cent. of the entire issue. In nine months the floating supply of the stock has been reduced by 455,500 shares, and in less than four years by 1,390,311 shares. Brokers' holdings of the common stock on Sept. 30 amounted to 1,560,125 shares.

Gets Express Rate Rise in State.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 8.—The American Railway Express Company was granted authority today to file on three days' notice, effective Oct. 13, new local and joint tariffs applying on various commodities for within the State shipment, increasing the present rates by 26 per cent. Milk, cream and other articles taking the same rates were excepted.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Bar silver, 56½d per ounce; bar gold, 117s; money, 4% per cent; discount rates—short bills, 5% per cent; three months bills, 6%@6 11-16 per cent. Gold premium at Lisbon, 140.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent rentes, 54 francs 50 centimes; exchange on London, 53 francs 85 centimes; 5 per cent. loan, 85 francs 97 centimes. The dollar was quoted at 14 francs 98 centimes.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Prices Reactionary.

The irregularity which marked the course of stock prices on Thursday developed yesterday into a decided reaction, practically the entire list suffering. The cross currents which have been in evidence, and the inability of prominent issues to hold their attainment of new high positions during earlier days of the week undoubtedly set the signal for a general campaign of profit-taking, with prices dropping off in consequence. Even the rails, which have borne up well, suffered yesterday and some of the leaders among the dividend paying issues have now dipped from 2 to 3 points below recent high levels. The evidence which it was possible to glean from brokerage houses was in large part to the effect that customers were being advised to reap profits while the gains presented possibility of free harvesting. Furthermore, the professional element continues on the bear side and in its selective campaign against prices succeeded in finding further weak spots yesterday, the most notable being in the case of the tobacco issues, which only a few days ago were being spoken of with a high degree of confidence.

Unless the signs are misleading there should be a somewhat tighter money market next week, at least in the early days, and it is entirely possible that there will be one or two flurries in the call loan market. It is understood that the bankers for the French and British Governments have been employing a considerable amount of the funds collected in anticipation of the Anglo-French loan in the local money market and within the last few days have been drawing this in, spreading the operation over as long a time as possible. But with the operation of meeting this maturity so huge, it is possible that even with the best management some temporary tightness will be created. Also, the Treasury will have some big operations next week. On Friday it will be called upon to redeem some $170,000,000 in maturing Treasury certificates and also to pay out approximately $130,000,000 in Fourth Liberty bond interest, while it will take in $100,000,000 as proceeds from the sale of a new certificate issue, leaving a debit of $200,000,000, in round figures. The Treasury, under the circumstances, may be expected to cut into its balances now carried by private banks. In last Saturday's Clearing House statement the Treasury had about $160,000,000 with local banks, to say nothing of what it had elsewhere, so that it is abundantly provided with funds against the contingency, but the withdrawing of them from the banks may also occasion some temporary unbalancing of the money market.

***

Next Week's Business.

The $50,000,000 Sears-Roebuck financing, in the form of one, two and three year notes, probably will come early next week, and bond men are anxiously waiting to see how this flotation succeeds. The market is good now and has demonstrated its ability to take long-term bonds, and the Sears-Roebuck business will furnish a text of its ability and willingness to absorb short-term paper. Thus, if the Sears-Roebuck flotation goes as well as some of the recent long-time offerings the investment market will have proved conclusively that it is all some optimistic bankers believe it to be.

Reading Dissolution Developments.

There was some degree of uncertainty in dispatches received in the financial district yesterday regarding petitions which had been made to the Circuit Court of Appeals in Pennsylvania asking that a definite date be set for the filing of the Reading Company dissolution plan. In some quarters the news was to the effect that a limit of sixty days had been asked while in others the limit was set at ninety days. The court reserved decision, but it was apparent in the action of the stock that the news had created uncertainty. At the close Reading was fractionally lower than last prices on Thursday. In some quarters the decision of the United States Supreme Court was again reviewed and attention was called to the fact that if the plan for the divorcing of the Reading railroad and coal properties finally submitted by the road does not meet with the approval of the court the latter has the power to take any action which will result in a dissolution.

The Controller's Railroad Ruling.

The ruling of Controller Warwick of the Treasury Department, that the Transportation act automatically blocks advance payment of amounts due the railroads on compensation accrued during the six months' extension of Government guarantee, was not as much of a surprise to railroad men yesterday as was generally thought. They have been discussing the situation for several weeks. But its reception was interesting. By some it was characterised as unfortunate and serious for some of the carriers while others considered it of no great importance. Railroad shares, however, seemed to reflect its effect, there being a large number of fractional net losses shown at the close of trading as compared with prices of the preceding session. Among the issues which declined were St. Paul, Rock Island, Colorado Southern, Great Northern preferred, Lehigh Valley, Pennsylvania, New Haven, Pere Marquette, Southern Pacific, Texas & Pacific and others.

Tractions and Utilities Late Features.

Some of the traction and other public utility shares were features in the late trading. Interest developed in Interborough Consolidated, Third Avenue advanced substantially on a fairly good turnover and a number of the gas company stocks under the leadership of Consolidated Gas moved into higher ground. Consolidated Gas advanced rapidly for more than a point and closed more than that much higher than the low quotation made in the morning hours. Others which joined in the movement were People's Gas and Pacific Gas.

C. & W. I. One-Year Notes.

Declaration by the Chicago & Western Indiana Railroad yesterday that the refinancing plan for the extension of its $15,000,000 one-year notes, due by extension Sept. 1, last, was operative, was taken in some railroad circles to indicate that security holders are proving more willing to co-operate with the carriers in meeting present problems than they have been for some time. Under the plan the company on Oct. 11, 1920, will make payment of 50 per cent. of each $1,000 note in cash with interest on such payment at 7 per cent. from Sept. 1, and will deliver 50 per cent. of such notes in new fifteen-year 7½ per cent. collateral trust bonds. It was also announced that $1,000,000 of such one-year notes which have not been deposited under the plan will be paid off with interest at 7 per cent. upon presentation of the notes at the Bankers Trust Company.

Steel Tonnage Figures.

Keen interest will be manifest in the display as to unfilled tonnage which will probably be put out by the United States Steel Corporation today. This will cover the month of September and it is confidently believed that another sharp contraction in future business will be shown. Two factors will contribute to this. In the first place, due to a greater supply of cars, transportation has been accelerated and deliveries against bookings have been heavier probably than at any time this year. In the second place new business has not been flowing in on a large scale, the price cutting campaign in other fields having had its effect in the iron and steel industry by causing hesitation on the part of consumers to take commitments. The figures at the close of August indicated the first shrinkage in unfilled tonnage that had shown on the Steel Corporation's books since May of a year ago. Should the figures as to future business show a big contraction it would indicate beyond peradventure that the cutting down of orders was general throughout the industry.

New Mexican Wells.

Drilling operations in Mexico are proceeding rapidly and before the end of the year it is probably that a number of new oil wells of large potential production will have been brought in and hooked up with pipe lines. The Mexican Petroleum Company has been drilling steadily on its properties and word is expected almost any day of the bringing in of a big gusher. Three wells are believed to be nearing the oil pools. The company has three other wells under way, but these are not down far as yet.

WOULD SAFEGUARD 'IF ISSUED' CONTRACT

BANS LARGE OPEN POSITION

In anticipation of a large amount of trading in "when, as, and if issued" contracts on the New York Stock Exchange, the Association of Stock Exchange Firms, which is made up of partners of Stock Exchange members, has addressed a letter to its members suggesting that they ratify a proposal to maintain a constant adjustment of contracts to the market in the same way as is now done in marking stocks loaned and borrowed.

There is no provision in the constitution of the New York Stock Exchange which quite covers the situation. The only one analogous is that providing for a mutual calling of margin on trades, this margin being deposited with the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company. This rule, however, is seldom brought into play. The proposed method of keeping the "when issued" contracts margined to the market would have the advantage of eliminating such a large open position as has existed in some cases when the new securities were issued.

The letter to members of the Association of Stock Exchange Firms says:

"Your Executive Committee, after carefully considering this matter from all its angles, has decided that the most effective method of safeguarding the situation is for the members of the association to agree mutually that, upon demand, on 'when issued' contracts, there shall be a constant position 'at the market' maintained between the parties to the contract, in exactly the same way as is now done in the matter of marking stocks loaned and borrowed.

"In respect to borrowed and loaned stocks the present procedure is in accordance with a long standing custom on the part of both sides of the operation, there being no provision in the Constitution of the New York Stock Exchange governing this matter per se. The formal recourse for the borrower or the lender of stocks is to require their return or to deliver the same to the lender.

"There in few instances it may develop that the posting of differences on contract obligations may reach important amounts, so that the interest item may be a factor to be considered. It is the opinion of your Executive Committee that there should be, therefore, allowed by the party to the when issued contract who shall have received a cash deposit thereon, in connection with placing it 'at market,' interest at the renewal rate for call loans posted at the New York Stock Exchange for each day."

SOUTHERN SELLING DEPRESSES COTTON

SPOTS HERE FALL TO 24.50

Liverpool Market Is Heavy and Its Spot Prices Decline to New Low.

Business in the cotton market was again on a limited scale yesterday. The South sold rather freely at times, but the local interests, whether in the commission houses or in the so-called Wall Street offices, were lifeless and did little of anything on either side. The result was that the Southern selling served to depress prices considerably. October, again out of line with the rest of the list, losing more than 100 points net on the day, while the others were down 15 to 38 points at the close, with the near months suffering more than the distant months.

There was heaviness at the start, and first prices were off 54 points for October and 10 to 30 for the others. From this level the market fell perhaps 20 points more, but in the early afternoon, when a storm warning for the South Atlantic Coast was posted, there was a rally, which lifted prices back to almost where they had closed on the day before. But the selling started up again and in rather heavy liquidation low prices for the day were scored in the last hour. Most of the selling at this time was in the near months, October suffering especially, while December did worse than any of the others.

Spots here were down 75 points to the basis of 24.50 for middling. This is only a quarter of a cent above the extreme low of last week and the development was regarded with some apprehension by local bulls. In the South there was also some heaviness in the spot markets, and Mobile, Savannah, Augusta, St. Louis and Houston all sent in lower quotations.

Spots at Liverpool broke 38 points to 17.74d., displacing the previous low record for the year of 17.80d., made on Wednesday. Futures there also were heavy, finishing the day down 29 to 33 points.

	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.	Previous Day.
Oct.	23.50	23.90	23.00	22.90@23.00	24.04

ORDER READING TO FILE PLAN OF DISSOLUTION

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 8.—The Federal District Court here handed down today a decree ordering the Reading Company to file within ninety days a plan of dissolution of the alleged combination of the Philadelphia and Reading Railway Company, the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company, the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Company, in accordance with the decision of the United States Supreme Court, rendered last Spring.

The court granted to the Reading Company the right to secure proxies from stockholders for the purpose of voting them on Oct. 11 in the election of new directors for the various companies. Under the decision last Spring the Reading Company was restrained from exercising such rights.

The Reading Company, a holding concern, owns the entire issues of stock of the railway company and of the coal and iron company. It also owns $14,504,000 of the $27,480,000 stock of the Jersey Central, which in turn owns $8,489,400 of the $9,210,000 of the Lehigh & Wilkes-Barre Coal Company.

The Federal Court here, sustained by the Supreme Court in May, decided that this interlocking ownership was in violation of the commodities clause of the Interstate Commerce act. The Reading Company appealed and the Supreme Court on June 7 refused to entertain the appeal.

There have been many rumors as to what form the plan for separating the several companies into independent entities will take, but nothing official on the subject has come from the Reading Company. Reports of melon cutting among Reading stockholders when dissolution takes place were neither confirmed nor denied.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

Paul H. Watson, formerly President of the Fort Orange Securities Company, Inc., of Albany, has opened offices at 55 William Street, where he will continue in the investment bond business under his own name.

Gross sales reported by Piggly Wiggly Stores, Inc., for the month of September were $9,958,906 on an average operation of 308 stores. Sales for the three months ended Sept. 30 amounted to $29,361,925, an increase of $2,290,163 over the June quarter.

The United States Mortgage and Trust Company has been appointed fiscal agent for the payment of principal and interest of bond issues aggregating $4,225,500, including Richmond, Va., $1,350,000; Fort Wayne, Ind., $675,000; Essex County, N. J. $900, N 500 and Hoboken, N. J., $227,000.

WHEAT MARKET LOWER.

CHICAGO, Oct. 8.—Wheat went sharply lower in price today with pressure heavy from the big Canadian surplus and with reports conflicting as to domestic offerings. The market closed unsettled at 4½ to 5¾ cents net decline, with December $1.93⅝ to $1.94 and March $1.90⅜ to $1.91. Corn lost 1⅜ to 4¼ and oats ⅜ to ⅞. In provisions the outcome ranged from 35c setback to 27c advance.

Bears had the advantage in the wheat market throughout the day, especially in the late dealings, when it appeared that free offerings from Canada were finding an outlet here and at Minneapolis and at other domestic centres. Slowness of export demand for United States wheat counted also as a depressing factor, and so, too, did word that export interests were heavy sellers at Winnipeg. Gossip current, however, in the first part of the session that rural owners were letting go of their holdings did not seem to be much, if at all, borne out by subsequent advices. The Government crop report showing a material decrease in the Spring wheat estimate came out after trading was at an end.

DECLARES ENGLAND WILL PAY HER DEBT

URGES INCREASE OF TRADE

Merchants' Association Entertains Delegates from Abroad at Luncheon Here.

A. J. Hobson, President of the British Chamber of Commerce, who was one of the British guests at the luncheon of the Merchants' Association in the Hotel Astor yesterday, said:

"We come here to you, your creditors, and look you in the face. We say you have a good debt, and we are raising the money and we are going to pay you."

Mr. Hobson urged increased trade between the United States and England as the quickest and surest means of wiping out existing debts.

"Our treatment of the Filipinos or of the Cubans or of the Porto Ricans shall no more justify the obtrusion of English opinion than shall England's treatment of Ireland justify the obtrusion of American opinion. Great Britain cannot successfully propose an alteration of the lines of our national domain in the name of liberty, nor can the United States propose the dismemberment of the British Empire in the name of Irish freedom. Self-determination cannot be made the wedge which splits apart that union necessary for all liberty. It cannot be perverted into self-extermination. Some things are necessary to keep this union cordial—they cannot now be enumerated—but the chiefest of them all is this: Let us attend strictly to our own business and not meddle with those delicate difficulties in which either may at any moment become involved."

President William Fellowes Morgan of the Merchants' Association said:

"We have lately joined together in creating an International Chamber of Commerce, which I hope will provide a common ground whereon any differences that may arise between us may be threshed out and settled in a friendly way. We must all do our best to make this new International Chamber the success that it deserves to be.

"Conflicts of judgment and of opinion here at home have prevented us from joining the political league which was proposed by the peace delegates who met in Paris a year ago. The verdict of this country with regard to that league is in process of being formulated, and it will be made known early next month. That verdict will end the discussion, so far as this country is concerned; but, whatever it may be, I am confident that the spirit of international goodwill expression in the International Chamber of Commerce and is seeking to find expression politically in international agreements is destined to gather strength and eventually to reach fulfillment. We must and shall find a way to abolish war."

48 PRODUCTS LOWER.

Decrease in September the Greatest in Any Month Since Armistice.

The September decline in commodity prices receives special attention in the current trade reviews, whose index numbers show that it was greater than for some time. In commenting on the trend to lower levels Bradstreet's says:

"In September, as in August, prices went off heavily, more sharply indeed then they did either in August, in May of this year, or in the January following the armistice. In the latter month they dropped 4.9 per cent., in May of this year 4.1 per cent., and in August 4.5 per cent. The index number as of Oct. 1, $16.9004, however, marks a decline of 5.9 per cent. from Sept. 1, is 19 per cent. off from the high peak of Feb. 1, is 13.8 per cent. below Oct. 1, 1919; 4.6 per cent. below Oct. 1, 1918, is almost identical with that ruling on Oct. 1, 1917, but is 94 per cent. above that ruling on Aug. 1, 1914.

"In all, forty-eight products went off, only fourteen advanced and forty-four remained unchanged. The coal and coke group showed a net advance on the month, due to higher bituminous coal prices, balancing a loss in Connellsville coke, while anthracite coal and Southern coke remained unchanged."

SHOULD TAKE LOSSES NOW.

Knit Goods Men Say Retailers' Failure to Do So Hurts Trade.

The unwillingness of the retailer to share in the losses, due to declining prices, which are now being borne by wholesalers and manufacturers of many kinds of merchandise was asserted yesterday at a meeting of the National Association of Hosiery and Knit Goods Manufacturers to be the principal difficulty faced by the knit goods trade in re-establishing the industry on a stable price basis. The meeting, which was executive in nature and held at the Hotel McAlpin, was attended by the officers, directors and members of the Advisory Board of the association.

It was also brought out at the meeting that some members of the association have reduced prices on goods sold, but undelivered, but have refused to give rebates on merchandise in transit. It was further asserted that cancellations of orders for heavy underwear were unusual in volume, which was taken to indicate that the retailers either have enough goods in stock or expect a reduction of prices in the near future.

The sentiment of the meeting appeared to be that the knit goods manufacturers have reached bottom as to prices, but it was pointed out that although the merchandise had been offered to the trade at prices equaling production cost, or less, buying had not been stimulated. Manufacturers asserted that they have tried to keep their mills running and have manufactured goods at top costs and sold them at prices representing a loss in order to do so. It was said that this can no longer be done, and that the manufacturers have no alternative but to close their mills for an indefinite period. Reports from the principal producing centres indicated that this action was imperative, as no orders were coming in.

Knit Goods Men Invited.

Members of the knit goods trade have been invited by the Federal Trade Commission to attend a trade practice submittal which will be held in the offices of the commission, Twentieth and D Streets, N. W., Washington, D. C., on Wednesday, Oct. 20, at 10 A. M. The commission wishes to confer with members of the industry with a view to considering a plan by which may be brought about a general elimination of admittedly unfair methods of competition with as little inconvenience to the trade as possible. It also seeks the views of the knit goods trade concerning the practical operation of certain methods about which information is desired by the commission. Some of the methods of doing business which have been complained of, according to the invitation, are misbranding in many forms, weighting of silk, false advertising, price maintenance and guarantees against declines in prices.

Gray Goods a Bit More Active.

Although there was by no means a large volume of business done in the local gray goods market yesterday, the day's sales were said to be among the best of the current week. In the print-cloth end of the market November-December deliveries of 38½-inch 64-60s were sold at 11 cents, with spot 38½-inch 60-48s disposed of at 9½ cents. In the heavier goods spot business was put through on 67-inch 2.95-yard drills at 12 cents and on 40-inch 2.85-yard sheetings at 16½ cents. The latter price was also paid for some "quick" 39-inch 64-104 sateens.

Hard Coal Production Improving.

All of the anthracite collieries are now in operation, with the exception of several in the Pittston district, which normally produce between 8,000 and 10,000 tons a day. Saward's Journal will say today that elsewhere all strikers appear to have returned and the cars which were diverted to the bituminous field back in the service of the hard-coal carriers once more, production is nearly normal. The loss incidental to the strike, which may be roughly estimated as a little more than 2,000,000 tons of domestic sizes, cannot be made up during the present season, however, and the trade will have to make the best of a bad situation. In spite of the quiet situation at tidewater, the bituminous market retains its strength.

Shoe Orders Coming Slowly.

Shoe orders are coming in slowly, both as concerns duplicate business for Fall and advance buying for Spring, according to reports emanating from the local trade. Prominent local retailers are said to be duplicating very little, if at all, and also to be very wary about laying down orders for the coming season. The fact that further cuts have been made in certain quarters of the wholesale market has apparently not encouraged many buyers to "come in," but, as in other industries, seems to have increased the uncertainty in their minds as to just when prices will be right. Until that question is settled it is realized that there can be no really active buying.

Anxious for Right Prices.

Some wholesale garment manufacturers and others who have special bargains to sell are frankly picking their customers from stores willing to pass along reduced prices to the public. Ordinarily, it is pointed out, it does not make much difference to the wholesaler what prices govern the resale of his products. A sentiment is now growing in the wholesale trade, however, against the stores that are driving the hardest bargains when buying and offering no equal advantage to the public when selling. The manufacturers feel that they are blamed for high prices in many cases because the stores are passing the public get the benefit of reduced costs.

Raw Silks Gain a Little.

Raw silk stocks held in this city on Oct. 1 showed a slight gain over the total in storage here on Sept. 1, according to a report issued yesterday by the Statistical Bureau of the Silk Association of America. The report shows the total on Oct. 1 to have been 51,523 bales, compared with 51,130 bales on the first of the previous month. The Oct. 1 total is divided this way: Italian silks, 436 bales; Japanese silks, 38,532 bales, and all other silks, 12,555 bales.

Interested in New Season.

More interest, perhaps, is being taken in Spring than the prospects for the coming Spring season than in the present conditions affecting the wholesale garment trade. The manufacturers are all desirous of making a good start for the new season, and they are attempting to make such preparations as will stabilize the business and yield them the best results. The sub-manufacturers have already agreed to fix Dec. 1 as the date for starting to cut up garments for next Spring. This action it is felt, will help to prevent the manufacturing of goods too soon before the opening of the season. The manufacturers have made only small purchases of new woolens in the expectation of further price declines. These reductions will come, they think, before the manufacturing season gets started.

Selections Are Delayed.

Selling agents for the woolen mills expected to have some order confirmations come in this week from clothiers who had made preliminary selections. A few such confirmations have been received, but not nearly to the number desired. Orders are still hanging fire, and buyers are just as hesitant as they were the opening week. Constant price reductions have led them to expect further cuts, even though their judgment tells them that selling prices, in some cases, are below cost of production. The report that large surplus stocks might appear on the market about the middle of next month has not proved reassuring. The knowledge of this surplus has been an important factor in holding back buyers.

Act on Garment Discounts.

A meeting of retailers and representatives of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, the National Garment Retailers' Association and the local stores' association was held yesterday at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel and action taken on garment discounts. These were regulated in 1918 by the Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Protective Association and other wholesale garment organizations. The terms adopted were 2-10, 1-30, net 60 days, and the privilege of 8-10 if the difference was added to the selling price of the garment. Before the ruling of the manufacturers' membership considerable differences in discount practice existed, and many stores insisted upon 10-10. Lately there has been some agitation among retailers to have this larger rate restored. Those present at the retail meeting yesterday were pledged to secrecy, but it was learned indirectly that the stores assembled have agreed to press a demand together for the old discount rate.

German Paper Products Shown.

A collection of many different articles made of paper by German manufacturers was shown yesterday at the rooms of the National Retail Dry Goods Association and will be continued on display today. The exhibit was loaned by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Paper suits, priced from 16 cents to $2.37½ feature the display. The lowest priced garments are those made for workmen and are two-piece suits. The highest priced styles contain only 40 per cent. paper, the rest of the material being cotton. Wall decorations, floor coverings, collars and cuffs, suspenders and curtain materials are some of the other articles shown.

DECLINE IN RE-EXPORTS.

British Report Shows Export and Import Gain for September.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—Trade return figures for September, showing increases in imports and exports, but decreases in re-exports, were made public today.

The total imports for the month of September are given as £182,602,000, and the total exports as £117,456,000. The total re-exports are announced as £13,851,000.

ASK LOWER TARIFF FOR AUTO IMPORTS

OUR EXPORTS INCREASING

Lower tariff rates on foreign motor cars entering this country and new commercial treaty agreements were advocated yesterday at the Export Managers' Convention of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce. Many prominent manufacturers attended the meeting at 366 Madison Avenue. Since the close of the war, it was reported, exports of American passenger cars and trucks have been steadily increasing. In thus departing from the traditional protectionist theory, it was said that the time had come for America to reciprocate with similar industries in other countries in advocating lower tariffs.

Louis Domeratzky, chief of the Division of Foreign Tariffs of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, in discussing the reciprocal program, said:

"The United States is supposed to be economically the strongest country in consider that if we need higher tariffs for protection, they need such protection still more. We are no longer isolated economically. I do not believe that certain countries are going to grab everything and shut America out. The more barriers that are removed for proper trading facilities, and the more opportunity given to all to develop, the better it will be for international commercial conditions."

R. A. Dean of the Federal Shipping Board explained some of the features of the Jones Shipping bill.

"While it provides," he said, "that goods handled in American bottoms shall have preferential rail rates as against those in foreign bottoms, there has been no effort to enforce this provision at the present time. The board has the power to say when this shall go into effect, but such action may not be necessary."

It was reported that during the last fiscal year 129,875 American automobiles were exported to eighty-one foreign countries. Their value exceeded $225,000,000. A. Walter Drake, Chairman of the Foreign Trade Commission of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, presided.

GOLD CAME ON FREIGHTER.

The gold, amounting to $330,626, which arrived here on Oct. 2 from Russia and was at first believed to have been sent by the Soviet Government and afterwards proved to have come from Esthonia for legitimate commercial purposes, was brought over by the American freighter Wheeling Mold from Reval. According to members of the crew yesterday, it was current talk in Reval that the gold was sent by the Soviet Government and totaled between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000.

As the Wheeling Mold had no specie room for carrying bullion the gold was locked up in a storeroom fitted with iron bars and watched by the ship's officers.

An Esthonian official in charge of the specie was so assured of its safety after the steamship had called at Danzig, that he landed at Brixham, England, and boarded the Aquitania at Southampton, which enabled him to reach New York several days ahead of the Wheeling Mold.

Army Day at Electrical Show.

Monday is to be Army Day at the Electrical Show in Grand Central Palace, and army officers at all posts near the city have been invited to visit the Signal Corps booth there that day. Three hundred students from the Army Signal Corps School at Camp Vail will attend, and various new electrical devices perfected during the war will be demonstrated.

COMMODITIES PRICES.

An overwhelming number of declines in wholesale commodities prices, as compared with advances, was shown again this week by Dun's list. Out of 97 revisions, which is almost a record for a single week, 82 were downward. Only in the foodstuffs was there anything approaching an equal division of the ups and downs, but even there there were nearly twice as many of the latter as of the former. Compared with last week, however, the current foodstuffs list shows an appreciable strengthening in prices in several divisions.

The following list gives the minimum wholesale prices quoted on selected standard commodities this week. They are corrected to yesterday, and with them are given comparative prices for last week and the corresponding week a year ago:

Seventeen declines were shown in the foodstuffs list this week against ten advances. The feature was easily the breaks in flour. Spring patent dropped $1 a barrel during the week, while the decline in Winter straights amounted to $1.15 a barrel. Middle Western lard was higher here, but hams and bacon did not change. At Chicago mess pork and short ribs were quoted the same as last week. Live sheep declined, but advances were recorded in live hogs and live beef. Several of the dairy products advanced sharply here. The biggest rise was in nearby fancy eggs, which moved up 8 cents to a price of 97 cents a dozen. At that figure they cost 16 cents a dozen more than at the time last year. The best Western eggs advanced 4 cents a dozen. The best butter rose 3 cents a pound, but is still below the corresponding 1919 level.

A rise of $2 a barrel in fancy apples contrasted with a drop of 50 cents a barrel in the "common grade." In the dried fruits declines were seen in apples, peaches and muscatel raisins. Vegetables, revisions included several declines in beans, rice and choice Scotch peas. The only listed advance was a rise of 25 cents a barrel in potatoes. Teas continued to show no change, and in the coffees, for the first time in several weeks, there were no revisions of prices. Spice changes consisted only of advances in cloves and white pepper. Both the best raw sugar refined sugar were lower. In the grains the second week in succession passed without advances. Oats and long rye straw did not change, but the other grains were all cheaper.

A rise in chlorate of potash was the only advance shown by the combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils. Against this twenty-six declines were recorded. Important features, however, were lacking. Resin and turpentine again declined in the naval stores. Excepting for furnace and foundry coke, both of which advanced, all the changes in the metals list were downward for the first time in many weeks. The declines included certain grades of pig iron as well as black and galvanized sheets. In the minor metals declines were shown by aluminum, antimony, spelter, lead, tin and lake and electrolytic coppers.

In the lumber list a rise in 4-4 birch was more than offset by declines in red cedar, poplar, chestnut, hard maple and yellow pine. Other building materials listed showed no change. The hide list was again bare of advances, with declines registered in No. 1 Texas, Colorado and branded cow stock. A further drop in light belting butts was all the change seen in leather. Among the miscellaneous changes were a rise in hops and declines in hemp, English vermilion paint, M. F. book paper, tallow, Brazilian crude rubber and Japanese raw silk.

The week in the textile markets dealt unkindly with burlaps, which declined, and also with several kinds of unfinished cotton goods. Print cloths, sheetings and drills were included in the declines. Activities in the silk and woolen trades during the week were of no particular importance.

741 HOME SITES AT AUCTION TODAY

ADJOINS VAN CORTLANDT

Strip 1,500 Feet Wide Between Park and Reservoir—To be Sold on the Property, Balance in Salesroom.

Seven hundred and forty-one lots of the David H. King estate will be sold at public auction today under the direction of the United States Trust Company. They are situated between Van Cortlandt Park and the Hill View Reservoir, east of Jerome Avenue, on McLean Avenue, Van Cortlandt Park North, Kimball Avenue, Hill View Avenue, adjacent to and north of East 242d Street. The lots will be sold in a huge tent on the property beginning at noon.

These newest home sites just over the city line are in a nicely built-up section, where all conveniences are to be had, and the location between the Park and the Reservoir is likely to develop into a choice residential section.

J. Clarence Davies, through whom, with Joseph P. Day as auctioneer, the sale is being made, said yesterday that in his opinion the public would welcome the offering of this property at this time.

"This is a unique site," said Mr. Davies. "A strip of ground about 1,500 feet wide, between two great city-owned properties, it should really be part of the park system of New York, and buyers of lots here, if they build homes, will be living, to all intents and purposes, in the park system. Many of the lots front directly on Van Cortlandt Park, and on the reservoir. Between runs McLean Avenue, the great cross-town thoroughfare connecting the Bronx with Mount Vernon and Yonkers."

The property has been compared to the section on Manhattan Island between Central Park and Forty-second Street, on which the old City Distributing Reservoir was situated. In the fifties much of this property was put up at auction and brought from $200 to $1,200 a lot. Attention was then called to the fact that it would be a residential district. Later, in the eighties and nineties, it did become one of the finest residential districts in the city, and lots were worth from $25,000 to $50,000 each. Since the nineties it has gradually turned into a business district and today lots in the section are worth from $100,000 to $350,000 apiece. And the people who buy at tomorrow's sale have better facilities for reaching their property than did the people who bought those Manhattan lots then.

"After every war, within two or three years, the value of vacant property has increased enormously. All signs point that within a short while vacant lots will have this increase. Since 1907 they have been practically lying dormant and can be bought now at even lower prices than before the war, while everything else has increased in value. Therefore, this would seem the psychological time to buy."

WHALEN EXPLAINS $19,000,000 DEMAND

Tells Budget Committee $14,000,000 Increase Is for Traction, Bus and Building Work.

BRONX PARKWAY OPPOSED

Mayor Says Commission Can Seek a Mandamus — Curran's Estimates Slashed Heavily.

The Budget and Finance Committee of the Board of Estimate yesterday allowed the request of Commissioner Grover A. Whalen of the Department of Plant and Structures, for a Deputy Commissioner, but the salary was fixed at $5,000 to conform to that paid to the other deputies, although the Commissioner wanted $6,500. Commissioner Whalen explained his request for approximately $19,000,000 with which to run his department next year, which is an increase of $14,000,000 over the present year.

Commissioner Whalen told the committee he is reorganizing his department to take care of new activities, including the operation of the trolley line over the Williamsburg Bridge, the planning and construction of terminal markets, twenty-one new garages now under construction, and other building, traction and bus activities. The committee will take up the additional requests later.

When the budget estimate of the Bronx Parkway Commission came up Mayor Hylan said he would vote against the appropriations, even though they were mandatory.

"They are getting away with all kinds of things," said the Mayor. "Let them go to the Supreme Court and mandamus us."

Practically the entire estimate of the Board of Purchase was allowed, the only exception being reductions in salaries to the Aug. 20 increases. Commissioner Whalen, Chairman of the board, declared that additional clerical and stenographic forces were needed, because after Jan. 1 thirty-four departments and bureaus under the Mayor's jurisdiction will be supplied by this department.

The question of raising the salaries of the Borough Presidents from $7,500 to $10,000 a year, which amount was fixed by the Legislature, failed of disposition when the Mayor, Controller Craig and Borough Presidents Curran of Manhattan and Riegelmann of Brooklyn voted against it.

When the departmental estimates of Borough President Curran came up the Mayor demanded to know why the President had not included in his estimates a schedule setting forth the sums required for paving. President Curran explained that he left it out because the board had not decided whether the money needed for paving would be raised by assessment or by revenue bonds.

"That is camouflage, pure and simple," retorted the Mayor. "Why not let the public know how much you wanted?"

Controller Craig accused Curran of purposely leaving the amount out in order to make it appear that his departmental request was a modest one. It was estimated that repaving requirements for next year would total $3,000,000.

President Curran's other budget estimates suffered severely. His requested appropriation for permanent and floating bath houses was disallowed on motion of the Controller, who suggested that he get the money out of his accruals. Mr. Curran protested in vain and said there would be no bath houses in operation next Summer without the money. All proposed salary increases and practically all new positions were disallowed and $90,000 was cut from his request for materials and supplies, although the examiner recommended $380,000 for this purpose.

Borough President Bruckner's request for $710,000 for materials and supplies was cut to $300,000, although the examiner had recommended $650,000.

The recent statement of Controller Craig that the budget as it stands is $25,000,000 over the Constitutional tax limit was questioned by Borough President Connolly of Queens. He declared there is $40,000,000 of debt redemption available and that consequently there will be a balance of from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 instead of a deficit.

Electricity in Industry

Never before have the questions of economy and efficiency in production been of such importance as now in the industrial life of the country. This is true in the large plant as well as in the small shop. Electricity is proving the most effective agency in solving these various problems as they arise

Adequate Illumination—Meaning Increased Efficiency and Safety

Adequate illumination of shop and factory, carried out generally and applied directly at the bench or machine, means more rapid and accurate work, adding to the rate of output and reducing the losses from mistakes and poor workmanship. Modern, well diffused illumination reduces enormously the chance for accidents to employes

Power Directly Applied—Also Meaning Better Efficiency and Accident Reduction

The direct application of electric power to the machine does away with shafting and belting and that constant and wasteful consumption of power which, irrespective of the work produced, goes on continuously where other than the direct power application is employed. Further, the removal of belting and shafting lessens noise and dirt, reduces the tendency to industrial diseases, and removes a serious menace to the safety of the workers

Exhausting Labor No Longer Necessary

Another present-day problem is the elimination of "the white man's burden" of the job without eliminating the job itself. To this end many devices have been recently developed. There is the industrial floor truck replacing the hand truck for terminals, docks, and factories. Electric conveyors, vertical and horizontal, are available for every form of heavy package handling and transportation. There is even a portable conveyor for loading sand or coal from the ground to the nearby truck, thus obviating another very exhausting kind of labor. For every job there is a machine — electrically operated

Electrical Ventilation

If sanitary conditions are to exist in shop or factory, artificial ventilation must be provided. It is as important here as in the home or the office. Where industrial odors and fumes are created their removal is absolutely essential to the health and welfare of the workers. In this feature of modern industrial equipment, electricity plays a most important part

An Industrial Exposition

The part electricity—this great "Servant of Industry"—is playing in every field of human endeavor will constitute one of the most important features of the Electrical Show at the Grand Central Palace, Lexington Avenue, 46th to 47th Street, from October 6th to 16th. The industrial displays, especially, will constitute an object lesson, and should be studied by everyone engaged in shop or factory production on whatever scale, large or small
